It was believed in Moscow that the Egyptian president and his hosts worked out their response to the new United States peace proposals for the Middle East. But no word of what they decided has leaked out.

Soviet military aid to Egypt also was certainly discussed.

Nasser was in the Soviet capital for 19 days and is believed to have undergone a medical checkup during his stay. Results of this also have not been made public.

Meanwhile, a U.S. Air Force mission was winding up a two-day visit to Israel. The visit was described officially as a fact-finding tour, but disclosure of it heightened speculation that the Nixon administration is planning some sort of gesture as a partial counter to the growing Soviet involvement in Egypt.

The visiting mission is from the Air Force Strike Command and is headed by the bomber command's deputy chief, Lt.-Gen. James Edmundson. The U.S. embassy said the mission is on a biennial study tour of the Middle East.

There was more military action on Israel's frontier with Lebanon, which Israeli troops crossed before dawn Thursday for a repeated raid during which they blew up three buildings in a frontier village.

They say it has twice the range of the "SAM" missile!

Egypt Has New Missile

WASHINGTON (AP) — United States intelligence has reported the appearance in Egypt of an anti-aircraft missile similar to the U.S. Redeye, which is designed to knock down low-flying airplanes by homing in on their engines.

Such a heat-seeking missile could further complicate the problems of Israeli pilots, already facing more effective high-altitude, radar-guided SAM-2 missiles and SAM-3 batteries.

Presumably, the Soviet-seekers were supplied to the Egyptians by the Russians, as were the SAMs.

Reports reaching the Pentagon say the Redeye-type missiles were fired during Israeli strikes on SAM-3 sites.

Their apparent purpose is to help protect SAM-3s from knockout, U.S. sources said, but so far as is known they haven't hit any attacking jets.

The Redeye, as used by the U.S. Army and Marine Corps, is small enough to be fired by a soldier. It looks something like the old tank-killing bazooka.

The Israeli air force has lost three fighters since June 30 to improved SAM-3s on the Egyptian side of the Suez canal.

Bourassa Scornful Of Bomb

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Robert Bourassa says he has no intention of moving from the Victoria Hotel, his usual residence in Quebec City, despite the discovery Thursday night of a small bomb placed near the door.

"I will not change my hotel, not even my room," the premier told reporters today.

The bomb, composed of two half-sticks of dynamite, a detonator and a clock mechanism, was dismantled by Quebec City police after two passers-by spotted five persons placing a package near the hotel.

Gerry Macdonald, a resident of the nearby Salvation Army hostel, told police he poured water on the package when he heard a ticking sound.

"I saw a spring unwind and the kick-back noise stopped," he said.

Their casualness on the package were sufficient to disarm the bomb.

Police completed the job at headquarters.

Mayor Sends Kierans Wire

By HARRY MULHALL

The city of Belleville is now actively and officially involved in the controversial contract decision which will select the builder of Canada's communications satellite.

That decision — involving a multi-million-dollar contract to Belleville's big Northern Electric plant — could be made by the federal cabinet today, one source told The Intelligencer this morning.

Belleville now has urgently petitioned the federal government on behalf of Northern Electric — the city's biggest employer.

The formal move was made in a telegram yesterday from Mayor Russell Scott to Communications Minister Eric Kierans, seeking to enlist his aid within the cabinet.

The mayor also has been in contact with Prime Minister Trudeau's office.

Both moves were the official outcome of what has been an urgent flow of communication between city and company representatives in the past 24 hours since it was known the cabinet might decide the issue.

City hall anchor man in constant contact with the situation has been Ald. Gerald Joyce, chairman of the city's industrial commission.

Ald. Joyce said he had been told by a "reliable source" that a cabinet decision may be made today.

The city's participation has been prompted by the possibility that a total of 100 jobs could hang on the contract to Northern.

Britain To Control Food Price

LONDON (AP) — The British government moved swiftly today to stop food prices soaring in the wake of the national dock strike.

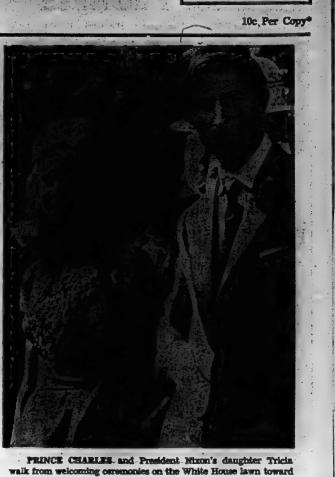
He was expected to tell them that prices must be kept under control, that there must be no attempts to profit from the strike by increasing costs unjustifiably and that the government will not hesitate to clamp a ceiling on prices if required.

The government is convinced that there is no immediate reason for prices to rise. Stocks of food are ample for at least a week or 10 days, it said.



Nevertheless some prices have risen sharply since the country's 47,000 longshoremen began Thursday their first nationwide strike in 44 years, closing 40 major ports and severing British Trading Isletions with the rest of the world.

Argentina beef, New Zealand lamb and some vegetables were more expensive.

The government declared a state of emergency Thursday, clearing the way for the army to enter the ports and help unloading perishable food supplies.

The sensitivity of soldiers taking over from striking longshoremen was underscored in Parliament Thursday when Labor MP Norman Atkinson protested: "It would be an intolerable situation if troops were to be used in the docks while the employers refused to negotiate.

"There are many men on this picket line with wives and infants who will call for an extension of the strike if there is any threat of using troops while the employers refuse to negotiate."

Prince and His Sister Have Ball with Nixons

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — Prince Charles and Princess Anne, said to be having a wonderful time on their first visit to Washington, launch into another full day of sight-seeing and party-going today after being out until nearly midnight Thursday night.

The 21-year-old heir to the British throne and his 19-year-old sister capped their first day in Washington with a mote tour of the city's spectacular floodlit monuments.

Earlier Thursday night, the prince and princess helped cook steaks, hamburgers and hotdogs at a barbecue for two dozen young people thrown by their hosts — President Nixon's daughters Tricia and Julie and Julie's husband, David Eisenhower.

Davie, grandson of the late president Eisenhower, said as the five young people returned to the White House: "We are having a grand time."

A British official said Prince Charles and Princess Anne "seemed to be having a wonderful time — I think they are really enjoying it."

The hectic schedule of the prince and princess, in the eight hours between their arrival late Thursday afternoon and the time they finally got back to the White House at about 11:40 p.m. EDT, will be maintained right up to their departure for London Saturday night.

After the pageantry and ceremony of the official welcome given by President Nixon for the royal pair, formality took a backseat at the evening barbecue.

Several of the friends of the Nixon girls and David Eisenhower who attended the barbecue said of the royal pair "They're great."

Prince Charles showed his prowess as a sportsman by outscoring David Eisenhower in a clay pigeon shoot and then the pair of them went for a swim before helping cook their own supper.

The girls all wore pant suits and most of the young men, including Prince Charles, were in open-neck sports shirts.

Telegraph Wire Stolen

Pair Plot Theft Over Police Wire

TORONTO (CP) — CP Telecommunications officials reported Thursday night that telegraph and teletype service between Toronto and Lindsay, Ont., had been cut off, apparently by the theft of telegraph wire.

One official said a supervisor engaged in a routine line check had overheard two persons planning the theft. The persons involved apparently had hooked portable bead-sets into the teletype circuit and were discussing how they would steal the wire.

Provincial police confirmed that police teletype circuits were down along the 46-mile route between Toronto and Lindsay, but could not immediately confirm that wire had been stolen.

Telegraph service to portions of Dufferin and Grey counties, including Owen Sound, was cut off most of Wednesday night by the theft of 3½ miles of wire just north of Shelburne.

Provincial police said the 13,808 feet of copper wire, worth about $900, was stripped from poles beginning about two miles northwest of Shelburne along the Canadian Pacific railway line.

A railway spokesman said it would take several days to restring the stripped poles, but service for the affected area would continue along other lines.

Communities affected Fesherton, Dundalk, Markdale Wednesday night included Flesherton, Dundalk, Markdale and Chatsworth.

Prince Edward Family Histories Published

The Picton Gazette Publishing Company is pleased to announce publication on July 15, of a great biography of Loyalist families by Zula C. Lapp entitled To Their Heir's Forever. This is a thoroughly researched and annotated saga, in which the author has traced the trials and adventures of a close-knit group of families for 200 years.

Nine came of Rhineland stock. Their surnames were: Delor; Dulmage; Embury; Heck; Hoffman; Lawrence; Miller; Spelting; Switzer. The other two, named Bininger and Carscallen, were, respectively of Swiss and Scots-Irish origin.

Really six books in one, the story begins in the Lower Palatinate of the Rhine in 1709 during the great exodus, and follows the nine families to settlement in Limerick County, Ireland. The scene shifts in the 1760's to New York City and the Embury and Heck names become prominent since these families brought Methodism to America. All 11 shared in the colony in Camden Valley, New York Province, which they founded in 1776. It was disrupted by the Revolutionary War, when in 1778 the men joined the British. Mrs. Lapp traces their services with Loyalist Regiments throughout the War, to reunions with their families and final settlement on crown grants in 1784, mostly in the Bay of Quinte and Prescott areas — though some Millers and Emburys went to Miscellaneous Bay in Lower Canada.

Filled with contributions to life in Upper Canada, and to the Methodist Church, the saga carries to 1839 and the Centennial of Methodism. The book covers five generations of some of the earliest English - speaking Canadians. Many collateral names are mentioned, and a few genealogical tables included.

To Their Heirs Forever should hold special interest for hundreds of descendents; for history buffs and historical societies; for genealogical associations; for Methodists in the United States, and United Church folk in Canada.

This is a large book, 376 pages 8½ by 11 inches, with quality paper cover, about 60 illustrations and extensive bibliography.

The author is the wife of Rev. Dr. Gordon Lapp, whose family for three generations owned and published The Brighton Ensign. She is immediate past president of Toronto Branch Canadian Authors' Association; a member of the Ontario Historical Society; and the Ontario Genealogical Society. She also belongs to the Bay of Quinte Branch of the United Empire Loyalists' Association.

To Their Heirs Forever may be ordered from The Picton Gazette, Box 80, Picton, Ontario; or from The Barbara Heck Foundation, Box 268, Gananoque, Ontario; or from the author at No. 234 Glen Manor Drive, Toronto 360. The price, including mailing costs, is only $8.00.

The Dead Swamp - - - - an Arsenic Fatality

The Dead Swamp, a feature of the landscape along Highway 7 east of Marmora, sprouts nothing but stark trunks since its vegetation succumbed many years ago to arsenic pollution. The stream feeding the swamp and eventually draining into Moira Lake, carries arsenic leached out of the site of the Deloro Smelting and Refining property upstream. Ontario Water Resources Commission is seeking legislation to halt the arsenic contamination and restore vegetation to the blighted areas.

Order Would Force Cleanup Of Arsenic on Deloro Property

The Ontario Water Resources Commission is drafting a ministerial order that will require Deloro Smelting and Refining Co. of Ottawa to pay the cost of stopping arsenic from seeping into the Moira River from tailings on land the firm owns.

The tailings have been blamed in at least two OWRC reports for arsenic levels of about .16 parts per million in the river which runs from Deloro, about 30 miles north of Belleville, into Moira Lake.

The recommended standard for drinking water is .05 parts per million and a "safe" level of .5 parts per million.

An OWRC official said the firm objected to being asked to pay for cleaning up tailings from mining operations, some of which went back 85 years, by companies long since defunct.

It was these objections, the OWRC official said, that led to the decision to draft the order. It will call for a stepped-up program of chemical treatment as well as rehabilitation of the tailings to turn them into land productive enough to grow grass and shrubs.

Although the Deloro company has done "considerable work" in the past ten years to contain control the seepage from the site, "it is still a long way from stopping it altogether", said a spokesman for the Moira River Conservation Authority today.

C. R. Whittemore, a retired former chemist with the company said the seepage is not going to be cleaned up by Deloro Smelting and Refining, although he is confident the problem will be resolved eventually. The company has no responsibility for the slag heaps, he said.

The slag heaps on the site, he noted, were not put there by the company, because it never operated a mine on the site. They go back to the gold-mining days in the area, before 1907.

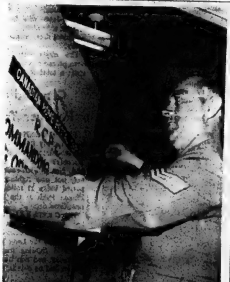
Deloro operated a processing plant for cobalt ores on the site. It did its smelting and refining of ores, shipped in from Coiboli, Ont., at Deloro because they contained arsenic, and an arsenic treatment plant was already at the site — a leftover from earlier mining operations, by other companies.

The arsenic leaching, Mr. Whittemore said, is "the aftermath of smelting operations."

The staff is lying to the ground, — it will have to be picked up and neutralized," he said.

Kenneth Parkinson, a company director, said Thursday any estimate of the cost would be only a guess and it may be that not all the sources of the arsenic have been located.

Deloro last operated in the area nearly 10 years ago.



Mr. Parkinson said there are no records about the early mining operations. Production from gold mines continued in the area until about 1907.

"Various companies were there and all of them are extinct today."

He said Deloro is accepting partial responsibility" but "we don't feel wholly responsible."

"I don't think we should be asked to pay the whole cost of cleaning up properties polluted by others over a period of 20 years."

Asked whether the commission might agree to share the cost, the OWRC official replied: "We don't have the money."

The Army Moves Out

The Canadian Home Postal Depot, whose 45 men of all ranks have been the only regular army unit posted in Belleville, have moved. Sgt. Robert Donovan yesterday removed identity plaque from offices in federal building where postal corps has sorted up 50 tons of mail a month since 1985, to and from overseas service units. This was the final act yesterday before the depot was transferred to CFB Trenton.

PUC Employees Vote to Strike

TRENTON (Staff) — The 29 - member local 2095 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers has voted to strike if their contract demands are not met by the Trenton Public Utilities Commission.

A union officer confirmed the strike vote result, but PUC manager James Page said that he had not yet been officially notified by union representatives.

However, the union cannot legally strike until 16 days after a "no - board report" by a department of labor conciliator receives the approval of the deputy minister of labor.

At a regular session Thursday afternoon, PUC officials outlined the latest contract offer, rejected by the union before the strike vote was taken.

The offer calls for wage increases of 11.5 per cent in the first year. Increased benefits would cost the PUC $3,000 each year.

Manager James Page gave an example. He said that the 11.5 initial increase would boost a journeyman lineman's salary by 36 cents to 44.13 an hour.

Total increased cost to the PUC if the latest offer is accepted would be $39,717 on the two - year contract.

Historical Society Mum On New Museum Site

By KENNETH SMITH
Staff Reporter

Directors of the Hastings County Historical Society met last night to discuss proposals for a new Hastings County Museum. The press was excluded for the first time.

The desire to hold a closed meeting on the subject of a new museum to avoid discussion from directors as to whether further meetings should be open to the press. Decision was reached that, as a rule, the meetings should be open.

County officials agreed this morning that the business of the Historical Society is public business.

County Clerk, Carl Bateman, explained that the society receives $1,200 annually from the county and rent-free accommodation amounting to about $150 per month. Additionally, the County of Hastings makes application to the Province of Ontario on a yearly basis for a museum subsidy of $1,000. He concluded that the society's business is public.

The Hastings County Board of Education has also been an interest in the program of the Hastings County Museum because its historical resources are useful for instruction. The board organizes student bus tours to the museum.

Ian Munro, assistant business administrator, Hastings County Board of Education, reported this morning that the board also makes an annual contribution to the Historical Society.

He reported last year this amounted to $2,270, approximately 10 cents for every pupil in the county.

With reference to a new museum, county officials explained that a joint committee of the City of Belleville and the County of Hastings had been formed last year to look into the matter. Wards A tentative cost-sharing agreement has been worked out for a new museum facility.

The City of Belleville also provides the society with an annual sum of money. In the 1970/71 budget $500 is provided for this purpose.

The society is custodian of two municipal collections, the Paul Lamp Collection, bought by the city, and the Couldery Collection, bequeathed to the people of Belleville.

Belleville Mayor, Dr. J. Russell Scott, reported this morning that the prospect of a new museum "depends on the status of the Couldery Fund".

The mayor explained that the Couldery Fund is an investment portfolio formed from a legacy to the City of Belleville that accompanied the Couldery Collection.

The Couldery Fund will capitalize any new museum. It was willed to the city to provide a permanent home for the furniture collection.

Mayor Scott explained that the condition of the economy had affected the fund somewhat, but that some capital work had been done toward the realization of a new museum.

In a press release this morning the Historical Society disclosed that "certain steps were taken last night in closed discussion" but "there are no new developments at this time".

Many residents of Prince Edward's north shore commute to work daily in the business centres of Belleville and Trenton but one Hall's Island resident drives to work in the barn of Ameliasburg on the shores of Roblin Lake.

He is William Nightingale, since 1963 the clerk of a prosperous area of a proud county, Ameliasburg Township.

Mr. Nightingale reflected in an Intelligencer interview that he used to carry on his clerk's duties at home. However, municipal offices were built in 1966 and since then he has been a commuter.

"It's a 9 to 5 job, 5 days a week," Mr. Nightingale stated, adding that the position had become more demanding in the last few years.

"This is partially due to the increased population growth of the township, the increased demands of the people (e.g. fire protection, street lighting and road improvements), and increased paper work for the Ontario Municipal Board," Mr. Nightingale said.

As clerk he must attend all township council meetings and record the proceedings. Additionally, Mr. Nightingale serves in the same capacity at a wide range of council committee meetings; these include the museum board, community centre board and the board of adjustment.

This latter board, for the review of zoning and land transactions, takes up a considerable amount of time; this is partly because Ameliasburg, already with an official township plan, is quite concerned with the whole question of land use.

Mr. Nightingale explained that his job has altered with the township. "Ameliasburg has changed in the last five years so that it is now more residential than rural.

As an indication of how the clerkship has changed, Mr. Nightingale stated that it used to be considered in much the same category as an elective office with a small honorarium or stipend. "Now," he said, "it is more like a business office with a fair wage" commensurate with the increased demands of the job."

Mr. Nightingale's life style has changed measurably with his position. He used to be a dairy farmer doing township business on the side; now he is involved in the administration of Ameliasburg on a full-time basis.

He explained that he no longer has enough time for dairy farming, although his Hall's Island property is still producing some spring grain, wheat, hay and canning crops.

Being a life-long resident of the township, educated at old S. S. No. 1, Ameliasburg and at Belleville Collegiate, Mr. Nightingale is familiar with the needs of the area and with the people themselves.

"I probably know 80 per cent of the residents by name," he said, contending that this helped make the people feel closer to their local government.

Mr. Nightingale believes this grass-roots contact is important and that if regional government is in the wind, it should not be such that the people would "lose touch with government and their municipal office."

That rapport, he contends, exists now even though it sometimes takes the form of complaints about the dog catching or garbage collection — two services that a few years ago were not even functioning in the now largely residential township.

Shorthorn Queen Leads Active Life

An all-expense paid trip to the Calgary Stampede was just one of the prizes won by Susan Tugman, 19, of RR 3 Consecon last November when she accepted the crown of Ontario Shorthorn Lassie Queen.

The annual event is sponsored by the shorthorn beef cattle industry of Ontario.

Each girl had to be an active member in the 4-H Club, her family had to herd shorthorn cattle, and was required to have shown cattle at various fairs.

On July 11, Susan and her father, Lindsay Tugman, flew from Toronto International Airport to Calgary, where she was received as the guest of the Shorthorn Lassie Queen of Alberta, Lynn Maier, 20, whose home is near Calgary.

Dressed in her official Mc-Gregor tartan, the typical dress of the Ontario Shorthorn Lassies, Miss Tugman was introduced during in the stampede and handing out ribbons to the winners.

From the festival home on Saturday, July 18, she will be attending fairs as well as the Toronto CNE.

A recent graduate of Prince Edward Collegiate Institute, Miss Tugman is enrolled in the fall course at the Edith Cavell School of Nursing in Belleville.

While her duties as queen may conflict with her studies, her father explained that this situation will exist for only a short time as her reign ends at this fall's winter fair.

For the event, every girl is interviewed by the ladies' auxiliary of the Shorthorn Lassies and must show skill in showing cattle. Together with the queen is an alternate queen who shares her duties when she is either unable to attend or has conflicting engagements. Miss Norma Leslie, 17, of Acton, Ontario near Guelph represents Halton County as 1969 Shorthorn Lassie alternate queen.

Home Care Program Planned for Belleville

By HARRY MULHALL
(Staff Reporter)

A home care program, which would ease the unremitting pressure on local hospital bed space-is being planned for the Belleville area.

The project — which would also dramatically pave the public care costs on patients involved — was endorsed in Belleville yesterday.

A meeting of local health, hospital and social agencies agreed to organize the program whereby non-chronically ill patients could be treated at home.

It could also give impetus to creating Belleville as a test area for an expanded health care program—if Dr. Richard Potter can convince provincial government authorities.

Dr. Potter, a crusader for a total health care province program, yesterday was polled over the home-care project — a scheme on which he has worked closely with local authorities.

His next move, he said, would be to promote a chronic-care unit in the area. With these and other facilities, Dr. Potter said he would try to convince provincial health authorities to organize the Belleville area as a pilot-region for a total care program.

The hospital is there as far as the department (of health) is concerned," he said.

"I think K's going to be a wonderful asset. We need it badly in this area," said Dr. Potter.

No deadline has been set for institution of the program — which will be administered by Hastings and Prince Edward Health Unit.

But the complicated groundwork needed for its organization will be immediately tackled by a steering committee, says Carl Bateman, Hastings County administrator and health unit secretary.

Mr. Bateman now is taking steps to organize the committee.

Among its tasks will be to outline the community need for such a program and the structure of service required.

This would be a complex incorporating the hospital, health unit secretary, physiotherapists, drug, dietary and many other services.

Its immediate local result would be a relieving demand for hospital beds — a situation which for years has baffled satisfactory solution.

It would mean some patients could be totally treated at home, while others could be released earlier from hospital, explained John Kunetsky, Belleville General's assistant administrator.

Admissions to Belleville General now average about 12,000 a year, estimated Mr. Kunetsky.

With such a volume, earlier releases to a home treatment program would greatly benefit the hospital space situation.

There also are dramatic cost comparisons.

It costs about $50 daily to keep a patient in hospital, said Mr. Kunetsky.

Cost of treating a patient under a home - care scheme runs at $10 - $15 a day, he said.

Already, there are 15 such programs under way in Ontario communities and they "apparently are working quite well," said Mr. Kunetsky.

Msgr. J. P. Sullivan, chairman of Belleville General's board of governors, said the hospital would co-operate with the program "in every way."

But, he believed the program's success depended on doctors convincing patients that the scheme is "a good thing."

"Northern Electric made it clear to me that if Hughes doesn't get the contract there will be 80 people affected at the Belleville plant in six weeks," said Ald. Joyce.

A further 80 would be affected over a long period, he added.

While Northern Electric would endeavor to place such personnel elsewhere in the company structure, their loss to Belleville was almost inevitable, the alderman indicated.

"These are the highest-paid technical type of people we have in Belleville. If they are laid off, we don't have comparative job alternatives to absorb them in the local labor force."

Yesterday, George Hees, MP Prince Edward-Hastings could take a contract for $35,-000,000 estimated cost, plus a fee to be negotiated later.

Communications Minister Kierans told reporters he would be receptive to "cost-plus" bids.

Ald. Joyce regarding the contract to Hughes apparently could mean more jobs for Canadian economy in the long-haul, Ald. Joyce said.

Northern Electric officials say Hughes Aircraft may build 18 such satellites for the U.S., Canada and elsewhere, says Ald. Joyce.

Northern Electric will get a subcontract to build part of each satellite.

The entire program is estimated to take from seven to 10 years, he said.

General William Westmoreland, U.S. Army Chief of Staff and former commander of U.S. forces in Vietnam, believes the enemy is now too extended — in Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos — to launch a countryside offensive in Vietnam alone.

The Communists nonetheless are a skilled and implacable foe and for all the improved performance by the forces of South Vietnam, the staying power of the latter in the event of a complete U.S. withdrawal is questionable. Thus U.S. troops will be obliged to remain in some numbers for years to come.

There can be no doubt of course that should South Vietnam ever fall to the Reds then all of Southeast Asia would become immediately more vulnerable. This is what Vietnam is all about, as well as Cambodia and Laos. The Communists covet all three as a general principle of their expansionist aims. If they ever do gain control, then countries which are now independent would go the way of the Soviet satellites in Europe. The only difference would be that China, and not Russia, would be the guiding hand.

A Sick World

Columnist Sydney J. Harris summed up many of the ills of our day recently when he said "the total religious vacuum, a consolation, nationalism into an idol, science into a juggernaut, community into a jungle, education into a treadmill, law into a bludgeon, and politics into a blood feast.

"Our moral insanity is the agent of our doom," he concluded. Earlier he had noted how everybody complains about "institutions" and "situations" or "sorry states of affairs," and reminded us that virtually all of them are created by human beings and not by the objective world we live in.

And as George Duhamel, quoted here recently, has put it, solutions to these problems are rarely a solution, more often than not they eventually die away of "weariness and decrepitude."

Thus, wherever man lays his hand there are, as ever, the twin factors of good and evil. We see it today as much as ever but there must be today, it is hoped that we see, more than the usual element of evil. Mr. Harris' summation could scarcely be bettered; in it are capsuled most of the problems of our day and of our restless, morally-suspect society.

On the Beach

A six-year-old building a sand castle at Prasquile as her small brother looked on — they were pictured in our front page for the day — illustrated a typical summer day at the beach.

In such a scene, and amid the other little cameos of a quiet day in the sun, people find renewal. There is the opportunity to think about life, or not to think but rather just laze. Or one may contemplate the still waters of the lake or like the baby in her crib, gaze with wonderment at the shimmering leaves of the trees fringing the sand and listen to their murmurings in the breeze.

Aside from the swimmers some indulge in that fine old pastime of paddling, like the two elegant young women who splashed their way the length of The Outlet's shallows on a recent Sunday. It was early in the morning and most of the swimmers had departed, but a lifeguard was still at his post — and well, one could still see and be seen; and catch up on some girl talk.

In such is the timeless blend of nature at its best and people at their . . . well near-best!

The Summer Scene

It has been a bit dull of late weatherwise but we hope it improves for the downtown area's sidewalk sale. As it is, shoppers have been turning out in goodly numbers and the Front Street scene is that much more lively.

Out in the country the swallows and bees been gathering on the wires; there they perch, assiduously sensing the elements which lately have included a fair measure of wind and rain.

Most people probably welcome a reasonable offering of such weather, for it brings vital moisture to the greens and fairways and relieves them of the task of setting up sprinklers all over the course.

Farmers too prefer a healthy degree of rain, for the problems of drought are manifold. Moreover, a cool day now and again is a pleasant relief from summer heat.

Still in hot water — and still provoking his own fuel.

Refused Citizenship For Third Time in 15 Years Says Portuguese Immigrant

Letter in The Toronto Star

My name is Jose Godinho. I am an industrial worker who came to Canada from Portugal 15 years ao. I have two married sons. I have worked hard all these years. I have never been in trouble with police or performed any criminal act. I am a law - abiding person.

I came to Canada because I believed it was a democratic country, and after five years I applied for citizenship because I liked the life here.

But to my surprise my application was refused. I was told to re-apply two years later. I did this, but again I was refused citizenship.

My third effort was made recently. On March 11, the Department of Secretary of State, Canadian Citizenship Registrar Branch, replied under the signature of W. R. Martin, Registrar. I was refused again.

Sir, a patient man as you can see but my patience has come to the end. The letter declared, "The information on which the decision was based is confidential and it would not be in public interest to reveal it."

Why is the information "confidential?" Why is it not "in the public interest" to reveal this information? Who made this judgment on my character? This is the very method of police states that many democrats (including Canadians) are protesting. Why has this kind of thing come to Canada?

It is a strange thing for me that after all my years in Canada I am being refused citizenship without being told the reason.

I would like to ask the Canadian authorities: Who are the kind of persons they want to be Canadian citizens?

I protest categorically against the discretion Act, and I demand the right to a fair hearing, because I see no reason for my application for citizenship to be refused.

I am a democrat. Is this a crime? I don't think so, but I have never been involved in political tumults. My only political connection is my membership in the New Democratic Party. Will someone in official authority explain?

JOSE GODINHO,
Scarborough.

Fade-out for Bilingualism

The Globe and Mail

The great Canadian experiment in bilingualism seems to be in the process of dying, and Secretary of State Gerard Pelletier seems to have cast himself in the role of undertaker, with Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau standing by to hand him the black gloves.

It dies so young, too, after little more than three years of hopeful existence, in which many thousands of Canadians devoted many thousands of hours to developing a competence in that other Canadian language which was not their mother tongue.

The shades of its passing become daily more visible as a result of Mr. Trudeau's announcement, toward the close of the session, that he was accepting the recommendations of the Royal Commission on Bilingualism and Biculturalism to introduce separate French language units in Government departments, Crown agencies and the Armed Forces, and to increase dramatically the number of French - speaking officials holding top Government jobs. All this to be completed, not by the Public Service Commission which is legally charged with the hiring and supervision of Government employees, but by that very figure which the commission was developed to discipline—a politician, the Secretary of State.

In announcing the new measures, Mr. Trudeau said that they would not result in what many feared, the creation of bilingual districts which would accentuate rather than obliterate the differences between Canada's two language groups. He also said that the promotion of large numbers of French-speaking civil servants would in no way interfere with what he admitted was "the first requirement" in the making of public appointments, the merit principle.

He has not convinced those who are most immediately concerned by the statement. The 120,000-member Public Service Alliance of Canada, dismissed a statement deploring the new policy. It saw the merit system of promotion dangerously undermined by the requirement that an increasing number of jobs be open only to French-speaking Canadians.

Sacrifice and Effort—Are They Lacking Today?

Richard Needham in The Globe and Mail

Donald Creighton says that if Canada is to be saved from sliding into the United States, it will take "a far greater personal effort than any of us has ever imagined;" he speaks of "sacrifices." I think Professor Creighton is correct, but I also think he was wasting his breath. Words like effort and sacrifice have no more meaning in Canada any more; they have gone down the drain with other words such as courage, loyalty, duty, discipline, excellence, integrity, dedication, self-respect, faith, initiative, responsibility, manners, honor, pride, achievement and workmanship. Their place has been taken by words like security, money, car, house, leisure, comfort, vitamin pills, welfare, pensions, the results of all which we are beginning to see.

Immigrants and Tourists Still Come...But

Arabs Dispute Israeli Claim of Improved Conditions

Cy Fox of the London staff of The Canadian Press visited both sides of the Arab-Israeli conflict during a tour of the Middle East. This is another in a series of articles.

By CY FOX
JERUSALEM (CP) — Jewish immigrants from around the world continue to flow into embattled Israel, and so do tourists.

Generally, those who come to Jerusalem rejoice that their access to the Wailing Wall and other venerable shrines in the eastern quarter no longer is blocked by the barriers which once made that a classic example of a Berlin-style divided city.

All is not wholly right with the Israeli economy. For one thing, failure to improve the foreign trade balance caused a heavy 1969 loss in the country's foreign currency reserves.

But government officials acting foreign exchange control proudly point out how its agricultural development has been pushed to the point where every square inch of arable land seems developed to the maximum.

Authorities also insist that in the territories occupied by swift-moving Israeli forces three years ago those residents who declined to join the refugee exodus into Jordan and other Arab countries are materially much better off now than they were under their old administrations.

Arabs living in places like East Jerusalem, however, have a somewhat different tale to tell.

A lawyer prominent in Jordanian public life before the Israeli takeover of East Jerusalem in 1967 told of a protest movement organized by himself and other Arab members of the profession in this city and on the occupied west bank of the Jordan River.

The movement takes the form of a lawyers' boycott of Israeli courts following what protesters call the illicit transfer of top courts once situated in East—or Arab—Jerusalem to the nearby town of Ramallah.

The lawyers also complain that Israeli law has been extended to Arab Jerusalem since that part of the Holy City was taken over from Jordan in 1967.

Israeli law is considerably different from the Arab system, and its extension to East Jerusalem gave the lawyers the impression that Israel was simply annexing their area of the city outright.

Other sources in Israel report that a number of Arab lawyers have been taking cases to Israeli courts, regardless of the boycott, and have been winning them.

Yet the protest movement remains in effect. One of its participants, a merchant in numerous stories of hard times told by Arab refugees in Jordan, by recounting how an assistant of his was simply marched away from East Jerusalem, locked up, by Israeli soldiers after the 1967 war.

At the same time, the East Jerusalem lawyer conceded that, apart from Israel's rigorous implementation of security measures in the occupied territories, Israeli behavior towards civilians there has lately appeared to be "correct."

Despite this, there is an undercurrent of discontent among merchants in East Jerusalem.

The businessmen recently shut down their premises for one day to protest what they called excessively high defence levies imposed by Israeli authorities.

One Arab source close to the merchants was skeptical in his reaction to figures from Israel's central office of statistics which said that, as of May, 155,300 visitors had come to Israel this year, an increase of 14,000 over the same period in 1969.

Arab Jerusalem hasn't shared in this boom, said the business source. The tourists "just pass by here," he added.

The Arabs also say many current visitors to Israel come as part of organized conferences rather than as ordinary sightseers.

The East Jerusalem merchants were hopeful that some kind of settlement of their grievances over war assessments, which they say have quadrupled since 1969, is in prospect.

But complete Arab acquiescence concerning the Israeli presence in East Jerusalem may be a long time in coming if it comes at all.

Occupation is never easy to tolerate, said one spokesman for the businessmen, and this is particularly so for people conditioned to living in what he termed "a century of freedom."

Israeli officials in no way discourage visiting reporters from talking with community spokesmen in East Jerusalem.

But the Israelis emphasize their contention that residents of the occupied—or "newly administered"—areas have never had such a good material deal as now.

People there are disappointed with their treatment by leaders of the Arab world, said a spokesman for the Israeli foreign ministry.

He noted the traditional Arab demand for either repatriation to their homeland, or compensation, for the more than 1,000,000 refugees from Palestine now living in Jordan, Lebanon and elsewhere.

But he argued in reply that more than 600,000 Jewish refugees from Arab countries have yet to be compensated for the losses they have suffered since 1948.

After 1967, Arabs in Israel's newly administered areas" came to enjoy precisely the kind of job mobility and improved standard of living to which the "Israeli regimes" dominant in some Arab states are afraid of exposing their populations, the Israelis say.

Officials in Jerusalem suggest too that Arabs there no longer earmarked for Arab refugees outside Israel has never reached the desperately needy evacuees.

By contrast, the Israelis boast of trebling the annual per capita income of Arabs in their occupied areas since 1967.

Much of Israel still can accommodate new Jewish immigrants, over and above the 41,000 who reached here in 1969.

"About 6,000,000" is one estimate of Israel's potential population, a figure which would more than double the present number of inhabitants.

The real tragedy of the Middle East situation in general is that of displaced civilians on both sides of the battle line, including families hopelessly split by the accidents of war.

The Red Cross has sought to bring as many such families as possible together again.

But returning stranded family members from a place like Israeli-occupied Gaza to their kin in Egypt now requires clearance from Egyptian authorities reluctant to see any further drain of Arabs from enemy-held areas.

On the other hand, reuniting stranded Arab families with families in Israeli-controlled regions may encounter reluctance on the part of Israel to admit any more Arabs—who may be viewed as a security problems—than its authorities have to handle already.

"People are more interested in politics than in the victims of politics, which is basically what makes many of the humanitarian organizations out here difficult," said one observer of events in Israel.

France Still Tinkering With Bomb

Kitchener-Waterloo Record

A swim in a coral lagoon in the Tahiti area of the South Pacific demonstrated that Michel Debre, French foreign minister, has an eye for propaganda. He took the swim, for the benefit of French reporters and photographers, the day after France exploded a hydrogen bomb over the lagoon.

Mr. Debre wanted to make the point that the lagoon had not been made dangerously radioactive. What he proves to us is that most of the radiation pollution from the H-bomb had been carried by the wind to somewhere else.

His publicity stunt will not prove to anybody that an H-bomb is a safe toy to play with. It will encourage a lot of people, the world around, that France and China are the two nuclear powers which have refused to sign to test - ban treaty to which Russia and the United States, together with many secondary powers, Canada among them, are adhering.

Showdown Near Between B. C. Government and Labor Unrest

VANCOUVER (CP) — A showdown between the British Columbia government and organized labor loomed as a strong likelihood today.

A special meeting of unions affiliated with the B.C. Labor Federation today was expected to give solid support to fighting trades unions who say they will defy a government request to end a three-month shutdown of the $200,000,000 construction industry.

Meanwhile, the International Woodworkers of America was to serve strike notice today on 116 companies—after the companies served lockout notices on union locals Thursday.

The exchange cleared the way for possible shutdown of the vital billion-dollar coastal forest industry early next week although neither the companies nor the union have indicated they actually plan such action.

Special mediator Mr. Justice Nathan Nemetz of the B.C. Appeal Court is to start a study of the forest dispute Monday. The government has asked both sides to avoid precipitous actions until the study is complete.

Labor Minister Leslie Peterson has threatened that the government will use its controversial, once-tested compulsory settlement powers if work does not resume after midnight tonight.

The Construction Labor Relations Association, bargaining agent for 800 contractors, this week ended its lockout of 25,000 workers following the minister's request.

But nine building unions—which have never been on strike—said they will not return without new contracts.

Ray Haynes, labor federation secretary, said today's meeting, expected to be attended by 300 union officers and members, will decide strategy to be followed if the government proceeds with its compulsion.

He said in an interview that he understood the decision not to return to work has already been made by the construction unions.

"I don't see the trade unions backing down," he said, when asked what the unions would do if given strict government orders to return to work.

"What we want to do now is make sure they (the building unions) know they're not alone. It's not just their fight, it's the fight of the whole labor movement."

Under the mediation act, workers refusing to obey orders to return to work would be subject to fines or jail sentences.

Premier W. A. C. Bennett has indicated that, if necessary, a cabinet meeting would be held Saturday to pass orders-in-council to set the compulsory settlement machinery in motion.

The power to impose compulsory settlements in disputes which endanger the public interest was given to the government under sections of the B.C. Mediation Commission Act that went into effect in December, 1968.

It has never been used in end disputes in private industry, but was invoked to end a police wage dispute in Victoria in 1969.

The labor federation and most affiliated unions are on record as opposed to the principle of the legislation from the time of its introduction in 1967.

They objected on official policy of non-co-operation with the commission established to administer the law.

Mr. Haynes said the law contributes to labor-management difficulties rather than solving them.

He said: "Neither the government, nor the employers nor the unions are anxious for a confrontation on the law, but the unions will not give up their right to collective bargaining."

In the construction dispute, the unions want wage increases ranging from 60 to 105 per cent in two years. The construction association has offered raises ranging from 14 to 25 per cent. Hourly rates now range from $4.07 for laborers to $6.80 for electricians.

In the forest dispute, the company bargaining agent announced the companies had voted 91 per cent in favor of giving lockout notice because of harassment by the IWA, which represents about 27,000 workers in the coastal forests.

Federal Interest in Conservation Called Low

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — Federal government interest in conservation is incredibly low, the closing session of the federal-provincial wildlife conference was told Thursday.

"Comparison of effort expended on development and on conservation is, to say the least, striking," said R. C. Passmore of Ottawa, executive director of the Canadian Wildlife Federation.

Oil exploration has so marred the Tuktoyaktuk Peninsula, near the Mackenzie Delta, that a national park proposed there will have to be reduced in size, he said.

The park would have to be small and would not include the area's large pingoes, towering pressure-created cones of ice, because of so much exploration activity on the peninsula.

"Despite the high-sounding expressions of concern for conservation, expressed by both government and industry, there is little indication that either is prepared to show the restraint and consideration necessary to ensure that the development will really serve the long-term interests of Canadians."

Mr. Passmore said there is virtually nothing which permits wildlife management in the north or protects the scenic landscapes from devastation. Legislation is coming but the regulations which would make it effective have not been spelled out.

Mr. Passmore said all forms of economic development must be fitted within constraints, "based on Canadian priorities, rather than overriding them callously in a frantic search for wealth in which foreign interests may set the pace and influence the priorities."

Delegates were told by an Alaska wildlife biologist that oil spills on the arctic tundra could be impossible to clean up, depending on location and conditions.

Salvatore DeLeonardis of Anchorage said that permafrost prevents draining; spills would remain on the surface to spread slowly over a large area.

"Natural degradation of oil is probably slow and could take many years. . . . Habitat contamination could be severe, extensive and long-lasting."

Mr. DeLeonardis said there has been a 40,000-gallon spill at Alaska's Prudhoe Bay, where a major oil basin was discovered in 1968. He said that 15,000 gallons was recovered.

Earlier, conference delegates were told that Canadian waters will not be part of any United States plan in this decade to satisfy its need for water.

Frank Quinn of the federal department of energy, mines and resources, said that Canada is not interested yet in supplying the U.S. with water, and there has not been an adequate inventory of U.S. water requirements.

"Northerners may have more to fear from the demands or lo- difference of the[illegible] neighbors inside [illegible] country than from those people who live outside."

Mr. Quinn said Canada should make water available in the future, when the U.S. need is proven, but not just to quench the thirst of American industry.

Crisis in Unemployment Is Approaching

TORONTO (CP) — A McGill University labor economist said Thursday Canada is "approaching a major crisis" as a result of unemployment.

Sydney Ingerman of Montreal said:

"We have a lot of people out of work and there does not seem to be any hope for them getting jobs in the near future."

He said the country could not sustain such a situation for long.

"It's continued evidence that the price of the government's war against inflation is too high-perhaps unbearably high politically."

"I believe we're on the verge of a crisis," said Donald Taylor, United Steelworkers Canadian research assistant, "and I am not optimistic that the government's attitude will change soon."

Donald MacDonald, president of the Canadian Labor Congress, said the government's latest unemployment figures "clearly prove that unemployment is Canada's most serious economic problem."

He said the absence of any change in the 6.1 — per cent rate between May and June, announced by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics Thursday, ran against recent trends.

"The substantial increase in the seasonally adjusted figure from 6.2 to 6.6 per cent even further reflects the seriousness of the situation."

"Behind these figures is the suffering, frustration and discouragement of well over half a million Canadians," he said.

Mr. MacDonald blamed the government's fiscal and monetary policies for the unemployment rate.

"The government has the responsibility to act without further delay in reversing the economic slowdown that is taking such a heavy toll."

All were commenting in interviews on figures released earlier in the day in Ottawa by the manpower department and Dominion Bureau of Statistics which showed unemployment rose to 539,000 in June from 513,000 at mid-May.

Bail Denied to Man On Extortion Charge

TORONTO (CP) — Provincial Judge Michael Cloney denied bail Thursday to Giuseppe Massara, 34, of Toronto, arrested Wednesday on a charge of trying to extort $5,000 from a baker.

Massara was remanded in custody to July 29.

Baker Nino D'Aversa told police a caller instructed him to deposit $5,000 in a garbage can in a west-end parking lot or "your bakery will be blown up."

Police staked out the parking lot and arrested the driver of a car following Mr. D'Aversa to the lot.

Last June 16, eight sticks of dynamite exploded in front of the D'Aversa bakery, causing $8,000 damage. No extortion attempts were made before that bombing.

Sydney J. Harris Says

Agitator's Origin Irrelevant

It has long puzzled me why authorities seem to feel that a bad situation can be made to look better by blaming it on "outside agitators." What does it really matter where the agitation comes from?

In most cases, of course, the allegation isn't true. When a demonstration erupts, or a riot explodes, it's usually because the pressures have burst from the inside, and no safety valve has been provided.

Agitators can agitate successfully only when the community supplies no realistic alternatives. Communists have been agitating in the U.S. for 50 years, and have not succeeded in recruiting as much as 1 per cent of the population into party ranks.

Indeed, one of the great testimonials to the loyalty and basic trust of the American Negro was the fact that he—who might have been thought to have the least to lose and the most to gain — never succumbed to Communist enticement even during the darkest days of the Depression. Here was a pure "proletariat," and it did not respond.

It was not until the Negro realized that America's promises outran its performance that he changed his name to black, and took on an air of militancy. And, even here, the Marxist influence is negligible.

When the blacks, or the students, or any other groups, begin to engage in civil disobedience, the first reaction of the authorities is to blame those "outside agitators." The implication being that without such inflammatory aliens, the natives would be happy and passive.

Obviously, that is a lot of hogwash. If strangers can come into a community and incite the residents to social action, all this means is that the fuse was there waiting to be lit. In fact, it is a bigger insult to the authorities that outsiders have a more decisive influence on their people than they do.

If I were a mayor or a governor, I would be ashamed to admit that a few bedraggled orators were able to lead my constituency into militant opposition; it would imply that I have done a rotten job of tending to their needs, responding to their complaints, and assuring their rights.

A good and decent administration would inoculate its people against such agitators — not be banning or jailing them but by making sure that grievances are promptly and fairly taken care of, that lines of communication are open, that the instruments of law are equally available to all segments, not used by one group against another. When peaceful alternatives are available, nobody but a real will listen to the voices of violence.

MR. AND MRS. DAVID ANDERSON

Anderson – Wood

St. Michael's Church, Belle ville was the scene of the re cent marriage of Helen Jean Wood, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh E. Wood of Belle ville and David Samuel And erson of Ottawa, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Anderson of Ottawa. Father Hall was the officiat ing clergyman and organist was Miss Dorothy Grant and soloist, Robert Burke.

The bride, given in mar riage by her father, wore a gown of crystal peau de soie featuring a fitted bodice with a deep yoke and wedding band collar. The puff sleeves were caught in a wide tatfe cuff and the waistline was ac cented by a cummerbund of Venice lace which also edged the collar, yoke and cuffs.

The slightly gathered skirt and chapel train were border ed with Venice lace. Seed pearls were sprinkled through tulle in the veil which fell from a cluster of white flowers. She carried a cas cade bouquet of red roses.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Beatrice MacDonald, sister of the bride, wearing a floor length gown of berry pink chiffon over taffeta. The sheath dress featured a scoop ed neckline and deep V-back which fell into a wrap around skirt with an empire waist line. The neckline, back wrap and sleeves were finished with two rows of Swiss lace daisies with pink cotrees. She car ried a nosegay of pink and white chrysanthemums.

Bridesmaids were Miss Beth Anderson, sister of the bridegroom and Miss Betty Brennan. Each was dressed identically to the matron of honor.

Flower girl was Miss Anne Marie MacDonald, niece of the bride. She wore a berry pink gown similar to that of the other attendants, a chain of mum on her head and car ried a basket of pink and white chrysanthemums.

For the reception held at Columbus Hall and the home of the bride, the bride's moth er greeted the guests wear ing a dress of flowered aqua silk, appliqued on silk net. She wore matching accessor ies and a corsage of pink roses.

The bridegroom's mother wore an ensemble of shrimp crimplene with matching hat of mohair and black accessor ies. Her corsage consisted of talisman roses.

For the wedding trip the bride wore a powder blue crocheted lace ensemble, sleeveless and Princess style with a matching semi-fitted coat. Her corsage was pink carnations and her accessor ies were white.

Upon their return the couple will reside in Ottawa.

Rich Harassed

TORONTO (CP) — Sudden riches don't always bring happi ness, says a 67-year-old Toronto woman who won $130,000 in the Irish hospitals sweepstake last year.

The woman, who did not want her name used, said that after she won she is harassed by salesmen, many persons who wanted a handout and friends who envied her gift.

She said she received so many telephone calls from per sons who wanted money that she had to have her telephone disconnected. But she received no money did not stop.

She received letters "from total strangers" which made her "sick and tired of the whole thing." Despite the windfall, she said, life did not change much that her husband took an early retirement from his $55-a-week job. Winning the money, she said, made her "learn a lot about people."

Marriage Hong Kong Style on the Way Out

HONG KONG (Reuters) — Marriage Hong Kong style and the era of the Chinese concubine are on the way out.

A bill just passed by the Hong Kong legislative council and to come into force next year states: "No man may take a concubine and no woman may acquire the status of a concubine."

The marriage reform bill recognizes the status of concu bines and children already es tablished, but strips all rights from those practising concu binage if a man and woman living together although not legally married) in future.

In Hong Kong, concubines enjoy many of the rights of legal wives although the prac tice has been banned for 40 years now in China and For mosa.

But here too the axe is fal ling on a practice that has been sanctioned for more than 2,000 years.

It is still largely a man's world in Hong Kong but the walls are crumbling fast as women clamor for equal rights with the general sup port of the British colony's young, better-educated genera tion.

After years of campaigning, school teachers, policewomen and female civil servants have secured equal pay with men.

The reform bill states that a marriage cannot be dissolved except by mutual agreement, and it cannot be recognized unless it is officially regis tered.

In the past, a husband had only to tell his wife to go home to mother and the union was broken. There was no need to register the divorce because the marriage had never been registered.

Concubinage has slowly been dying out in Hong Kong, together with many old Chinese customs and tradi tions, but it is not uncommon to meet a prominent business man who has both a "taai" (wife) and a "taip" (concu bine).

The rich are not the only ones who take concubines. Among poor families, a man may take more than one wife because the extra labor power will increase the family in come.

By tradition, Chinese women have always taken an inferior role. They were taught to be submissive and obey heaven and follow fate."

But concubines have played an important part in Chinese history which saw the emerg ence from imperial harems of such women as Tz'u-hsi, the ruthless Tang dynasty em press, and Tsu Hsi, the last empress dowager.

For ages, the Chinese con cubine was more wife than concubine. If she was the favor ite, she wielded more influ ence than a wife.

In Hong Kong, the concu bine and her child may not have as much dignity as the "Number One wife" and child but they have full protection under the law.

In China, not only has con cubinage been banned, but women now play an important role in politics. Chiang Ching, Mao Tse-tung's wife, was the firebrand of China's cultural revolution.

The pace of change has been slower in Hong Kong, whose founder, Capt. Charles Elliot of the Royal Navy, proclaimed in 1841: "The natives of the island of Hong Kong and all natives of China who may reside, shall be governed according to the laws and customs of China."

Commenting on the mar riage reform bill, legislative council member Oswald Cheung said that in Britain there is one divorce in every eight marriages and in the United States two divorces in every seven marriages.

"Unless you can say de ponsorably that one system is manifestly superior and more successful than another, then you cannot forbid it," he said.

"Who is to say that a sys tem is bad which has more than 2,000 years of history be hind it"

Attire with Sexy Allure Predicted for Fall Wear

Men who mourn the passing of the mini-and deal it is — should take heart. Granted the 56 couture houses whose autumn — winter showings wound up Wednesday were unanimous about longer hem lines, but there were also 55 varieties of the sort of sexy allure that leaves something to the imagination.

In the first place, some of the long skirts were slit front or side to show a provocative glimpse of leg.

Then, though many blouses and dress bodices were mul fled to the ears and wrists, none of the models wore bras. Skirts swayed from the tiny waistlines, fabrics were softer and clingier. The slightly tough unisex vogue had been replaced by an unmistakably feminine look.

While Capucci, Sarli and Ca rosa showed extra-long midis, nearly everybody else estab lished the new length as cas ual. Maxi were strictly for evening.

Judging by the coats that sold best to North American buyers, the big-coat silhouette was fitted and flared.

There were more tailored suits than have been around in ages. Most suit skirts had deep centre or side pleats for walking freedom.

Dress necklines were almost invariably high. And while pants did not make fashion headlines this time, they were well represented.

Permissiveness Irks Actress

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Nancy Regan says she's against drugs, unrestricted abortions, women's liberation and long-haired hippies, but Cal ifornia's first lady thinks the country is ripe for a good ro mantic movie.

A woman of strong likes and dislikes, the attractive wife of Gov. Ronald Regan is an avid fan of the new mid-length hem line and thinks women should dress like women—not like Indi ans and gauchos.

The former actress said in an interview she believes the coun try is getting fed up with cur rent fashions in art, movies and books.

"I think the American people are willing to go just so far and then they're going to put their heels in and say, 'that's all—it's got to stop,' and I think we're at that point."

The 47-year-old Mrs. Regan saved her sharpest criticism for the movies, where as actress Nancy Davis she usually played the wife, including the movie wife of Senator George Murphy. She said:

"Pornography is pornogra phy, what is there to see? Un less, of course, you're interested in becoming a voyeur, which I'm not. . . .

"I think everyone is so ready for a wonderful, romantic love story. I think the young are ready for it and, God knows, the old are ready for it."

The mother of two children, Mrs. Reagan said youngsters taking drugs are really missing out on life. "If they are con cerned about things that need to be corrected, how can they cor rect them if they're so doped up they don't know what they're doing?"

Don't force your child to go to persons outside the family. Give her time to size them up, to get acquainted slowly and she soon will feel secure and friendly with them. Her agh makes a difference, in her emotional responses.

A tiny baby is not really aware of her dependence on her mother; a child past a year, however, may be wary of anyone who may replace her mother.

Sense of Humor Goes A Long Way

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a boy 15 who comes from a very noisy family. It seems the women on my mother's side all have babies long after they should have given up that sort of thing. My grandmother started it by giving birth to twins a year after I was born. So — now I have a couple of uncles who will be enrolling in my high school next fall.

My problem is my sister. She uses little squirts "Uncle" even though they are a year younger than I am. I think I'll crack first. Please help me by printing my letter and sticking up for me. If ever a fellow needed a friend I do. — HASSLE IN HARRISBURG.

* * *

DEAR HASS: You don't need a friend. You need a sense of humor. It should be fun to call those little squirts "Uncle." Do it at every opportunity and soon you'll be enjoying the joke — like everyone else.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Last January you printed a letter on Bed Hopping. It was from a girl who was overly nice to men. She imagined herself in love every three weeks. She fell into bed with every man who said a kind word to her. Of course she ended up sleeping with half the town. I tore out that column and showed it to my daughter. Did she read it? She did not. She read the first two lines and tore it up right in front of my face.

My daughter is 18. She is so immature it kills me. The girl doesn't know the first thing about men. After the second date she goes all soft and buys her current "love" expensive presents and smothers him with attention. She has no pride, no dignity, no judgment.

I know she's sick but she won't see a doctor. She says she is very happy with her life and I should not try to impose my standards on her. Maybe she is right and I am wrong. She is in perfect health and I'm a nervous wreck. What can I do? — WORRIED IN MIDDLETON, N.Y.

* * *

DEAR WORRIED: You can do nothing for her but you can do something for yourself. Accept the fact that your daughter is out of reach. It is impossible to help a person who refuses to admit she needs help. You say she's in excellent health — physically, perhaps, but emotionally she's plenty sick. If you need therapy to help you handle your anxiety, get it. And let's hope your daughter will seek help, too.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband and I will be celebrating a very important wedding anniversary in a few months. Our marriage has not been a happy one. As I look back, I don't know how I managed to keep my sanity and raise such a wonderful family.

Practically everything that can happen to destroy a marriage happened to ours. There were dozens of women, an out-of-wedlock child, wild drinking bouts and bad cheques. He has behaved better these last few years — not because he has reformed, but because he is worn out. Does a marriage like ours call for a celebration? Our lovely children want to give us an elegant party. I say it would be a mockery. What do you say? — MUM'S THE WORD.

* * *

DEAR MUM: If your children want to honor you with a party, don't deny them the pleasure. I suspect you're an excellent actress who has played a role for many years. One more Academy Award performance won't hurt.

Successful Living

Too Much to Explore for One to Be Bored

By DORIS CLARK

For successful later years, those of us who have retired would do well to use much of our new gift of time to broaden and deepen our interest in everything that goes on about us. It isn't enough to sit passively by and watch the parade go by.

Not long ago, Cecil Beaton, famous British photographer, who is 64 himself, came to New York with his exhibit, "800 Faces by Beaton," which has just broken records at the London National Portrait Gallery. Mr. Beaton's one pungent remark to a News-week reporter summed up his whole philosophy, and is one we all might ponder.

"Perhaps the world's second worst crime is boredom," Mr. Beaton said. "The first is being a bore."

None of us ought ever to be either bored or a bore. There is too much to explore, and a lifetime accumulation of experience, understanding, perception and humor with which to do it. — Modern Maturity.

* * *

Dear Doris: I read a while back about a reader sending you a picture postcard and was wondering if somewhere among your readers there was someone who could help me.

I have a large postcard collection which has picture postcards from about 70 world countries. Some day I hope to have one postcard from every country on earth. I am willing to trade postcards.

I am mainly interested in African and South American countries. I also need cards from Bulgaria and Romania.

Perhaps someone used to live in, has travelled to, or knows of someone in one of the countries I wish a postcard from. — Picture Postcard.

Dear Picture Postcard: Well, travellers? Who can add to the P. P. collection? Sounds like a lovely hobby!

* * *

Dear Doris: My parents have forbade me to spend any of my time in the downtown restaurants. I feel this is very unfair.

I find satisfaction in just having a coffee and talking with my friends, just as they do Friday nights in a beverage room.

I can understand their point. They say the restaurants are a centre for drugs and that I never know what kind of people I could get involved with. But I'm 16 now and I feel I can choose the right kind of people to associate with.

After all, we are faced with this kind of environment anywhere in this city. — Confused.

Dear Confused: There is such a thing as being in the wrong place at the wrong time.

A recent news item told of two Canadian girls who visited a friend in Texas. When police found LSD in the friend's bedroom, all three were arrested. Our Canadians were completely innocent.

At 16 you have doubtless learned a lot. Learn a little more and you'll be warning your pals about some of those questionable meeting places and asking them home instead.

Representative Says Vision Blurred by Glamorous Glasses

TALAHASSIE, Fla. (AP) — A Florida state representative says some glasses can be dangerous for lady auto drivers. "Unfortunately, fashion has supplied us with those big, fat, jewelled glasses which blot out a whole hunk of peripheral vision," said Cecil Bothwell. "They're bad at intersections." Bothwell has proposed a bill that would make it a violation for any driver to wear glasses with rims three eighths of an inch in width.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Asparagus Soup from Canned Cuttings

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION: My children adore asparagus — the fresh is beyond my reach. Could you concoct a recipe for cream of asparagus soup, using the cans of cuttings and utilizing the liquid as part of the cream sauce base? — Audrey C.

ANSWER: I enjoyed testing the cream of asparagus soup from canned cuttings. It seemed a little incongruous to serve hot cream soup to guests on a summer evening before a steak cookout, but I did it and they liked it and hope your crowd will.

CREAM OF ASPARAGUS SOUP (from canned cuttings; 5 servings)

2¼ cups 2 per cent homogenized milk
1 onion ono cube
2 tbsps. butter
3 tbsps. flour
½ tsp. salt
1 12-oz. can asparagus cuttings

Add onion ono cube to milk and heat to just below scalding and until ono cube is dissolved. In top part of double boiler melt butter over direct heat, blend in flour and salt then stir in scalded milk until thick. Place over boiling water in bottom of double boiler.

Tip can of asparagus cuttings into sieve, catching the liquid in a bowl. If desired choose and reserve seven or eight little tips to garnish soup later. Put drained asparagus in blender, add ¼ cup of the can liquid and buzz about 30 seconds to reduce to pulp. Add pulp to milk base in top of double boiler along with leftover can liquid. Blend well and heat through. If you prefer thinner (less) cream soup you could safely add another ½ cup milk.

Sidewalk Sale In Full Swing

Yesterday's frequent shower activity did little to dampen the spirits of participants and organizers of the Downtown Merchants Sidewalk Sale Beat-Down which opened for the first of three festive days.

The Beat-Down aspect of the sale is the highlight this year as shoppers are expected to dicker with salesman over the prices of the articles displayed on the sidewalk. Part of the excitement the sidewalk sale generates is the festive spirit that not only surrounds the sale atmosphere, but melts more — the breaking of the arrival of summer's warmth and, especially for the younger people, the smiles and excitement of vacationing Belleville.

Such was the scene on Front Street yesterday when shoppers, young and old, wandered throughout the displays buying and bargaining or just looking.

Welfare Department Over Budget

PICTON (Staff) — Reports showing the Prince Edward County Department of Welfare $22,000 in excess of its budget at this year's halfway mark predict a substantial deficit in final figures.

Fighting the battle of the budget, chairman of the welfare committee Donald Thompson remarked last March, "When you fellows cut our budget the province increased its payments. If we have a deficit of $30,000, to $40,000, accept it and laugh." Mr. Thompson made this comment when county council voted to chop the welfare department's budget by $14,000 this year.

The latest statistics outlining welfare in Prince Edward were described recently by Welfare administrator Grant Harvey during a committee meeting. Figures showed the total case load for the month of June was 144 compared to 135 cases in May. Total number of persons receiving assistance including their dependents is 311 or 2.6 per cent of the population. This figure is lower than last month's reported 375 persons, or 3 per cent of the population.

There were 40 per cent more welfare recipients this June than in June, 1969, according to Mr. Harvey's statistics.

Increases in nursing home rates, welfare allowances announced by the provincial government and increased unemployment have contributed to the present over - budget expenditures in the welfare department.

Mr. Harvey explained that unemployment is "a very real problem" influenced by the increasing use of machine labor. He hoped, however, that many welfare recipients could earn extra money during the fruit growing season in Prince Edward.

"Those of welfare," he observed, "do the work that is available, so effects of the usual summer decrease in welfare payments should soon be evident."

Blind Date Scheme Backfires

LONDON (Reuters) — Angry wives have forced Britain's ministry of defence to reconsider a publicity stunt called "rent-a-Jack" which resulted in hundreds of girls making blind dates with sailors.

With hopes of boosting recruitment, the navy publicized the telephone number of the frigate Ajax when it called at various British ports, and invited people to ring up an ask the sailors out to entertain them.

It was expected that families would invite the sailors, called Jack Tars in British slang, home for tea.

Instead, the sailors were besieged with offers of entertainment from single girls. The Ajax, which carries 200 sailors, ran out of available men in a few hours.

Eighty furious wives signed a petition of protest, which has been forwarded to Navy Minister Peter Kirk by Peggy Fenner, member of Parliament for Chatham.

A navy spokesman said: "We planned the scheme in good faith to enable sailors to meet families. It hasn't yet been discontinued, but in the light of these protests we are reconsidering it."

Elzevir Township Meeting

Council will also have no objection to a tent and trailer park being operated on lot 14, concession 1, Elzevir township provided regulations of the County Health Unit are conformed to.

It was carried that Ontario Hydro be asked to install new light at Tebo's Grocery Store corner in Actinolite and one light near the Orange Hall in Queensborough as soon as possible.

The following accounts were ordered paid: Road voucher, No. 6, $1,376.01; Tweed Fire Department, $252.56; John D. Lewars, auditors, $1,166.43, Ontario Hydro $153.13.

A penalty of $50 will be imposed for failure by any person or persons to procure a building permit from the building inspector, previous to beginning any work on any building in the township of Elzevir or Grimsthorpe.

The next regular meeting will be held August 6 at 8.30 p.m.

Thief Leaves Tools

A thief entered a Belleville church this week all set to break into its safe — except he lacked the knowledge to perform the act.

Belleville City Police Deputy Chief Harold Reid said this morning that a thief took acetylene and oxygen tanks to the safe in the Maranatha Church on Orchard Drive, but police believe he lacked the technical knowledge to use the tanks to crack the safe and left them behind.

Mr. Reid said nothing was taken in the break-in.

The entry was reported yesterday, but is believed to have occurred July 14 or 15 when someone entered the church through the northwest door.

Canada Should Be Forerunner In Games' Swimming 'Gold Rush'

EDINBURGH (CP) — Canada, Australia and England began their duel for swimming gold medals today and African countries started what was expected to be their strongest track-and-field challenge in the 40-year history of the Commonwealth Games.

The first three of 161 gold medals to be awarded in nine sports were on the line during the first day of competition today—but only one swimming final was scheduled with Australia favored to win it.

The Aussies banked on Mike Wenden, their 100- and 200-metre gold medal winner at the 1968 Olympics, to lead them to a gold in the men's 400-metre freestyle relay. . .

Australia won 11 swimming gold four years ago in Jamaica to seven for Canada and five for England.

While Canadian coaches have been reluctant to claim a gold medal spree here, they freely admit their swimmers represent the strongest and best-balanced team Canada ever has sent overseas.

In dinghy, Beverly Boys of Pickering, Ont., began her challenge for gold in the women's single-handed competition.

The other golds to be awarded today were in the flyweight and bantamweight weightlifting classes. Among the bantamweights, Hoo Kong-hee Chun Hon Chan of Montreal faced stiff competition from favored Precious McKenzie of England.

In track, the Africans won six gold medals in the last Games. This time it could be even more.

Kip Keino of Kenya, the leading figure in the African challenge, decided to go for the 1,500 metres and the 3,000 metres this time. The metric mile is scheduled for Wednesday and the 5,000 metres will bring down the curtain on the Games Saturday, July 25.

Keino won the steeplechase three miles in Jamaica and the Olympic 1,500 metres two years ago.

Another Kenyan star, Naftali Temu, will be going in the 10,000 metres Wednesday, unless Achilles tendon trouble keeps him on the sidelines. Temu won the Olympic 10,000 metres at Mexico City and was the six mile winner at Kingston, Jamaica, in 1966.

Kenyan Charles Asati in the 400 metres, Stan Allotey of Ghana in the 200 and 400 and 10 1-second men in the 100 all figure to make the African challenge a stiff one.

The field events looked to be a contest among the Canadians, Australians and Britons, with 19-year-old Debbie Brill of Hanley, B.C., outstanding in the women's high jump. No one in the Commonwealth has reached her record of six feet, three-quarters of an inch.

Athletes from 42 countries staged their ceremonial parade in Meadowbank Stadium Thursday for the opening ceremonies, marching past Prince Philip, who had arrived only hours earlier from a royal tour of Canada with the Queen.

Cannons boomed nine times to signify the ninth Games and a dozen RAF jets made their flypast as Philip, wearing a black arm sling due to a recent polo injury, opened the Games.

An almost 2,000 athletes lined up, some in traditional national dress and each headed by a flag bearer, Philip read a message from the Queen, sent while she was in the Northwest Territories.

It referred to Canada as the first Commonwealth nation to hold the Games at Hamilton, in 1930, and the Queen said she was pleased that the message began its journey in Canada.

For the last week it travelled around Scotland in a baton, carried by hundreds of Scots running in relays.

Jim Alder of Scotland, who won the marathon in Kingston, brought the message into the stadium and presented it to Philip.

Massed pipe and drum bands of Scottish regiments played the British national anthem. As the last note died away Lightning and Phantom jets, flying at 1,200 miles an hour, roared overhead in salute.

More than 20,000 were in the stadium, which can accommodate 30,000.

About 200 British sailors shattered the solemnity of the occasion with a good-natured but noisy demonstration over the daily rum ration—2½ ounces—which the Royal Navy will discontinue Aug. 1.

"Save our tot," they chanted at Prince Philip, who has the title Admiral of the Fleet.

The nearly 200-strong Canadian team marched in their red blazers with white trousers or miniskirts. The men wore white hats with a red and blue band while the girls donned crocheted straw berets. Hutton carried the Canadian flag.

The Jamaican girls, dressed in bright green and gold, drew the largest wolf whistles with the shortest minis.

Thousand of pigeons were released and flew into the grey sky on their journey to homes in the surrounding areas.

Meanwhile, plans were made to carry out the first large-scale testing of athletes for traces of the banned muscle-building drug, anabolic steroids.

Results will not be made public, but if the tests, developed by British researchers, prove conclusive they could mean the end of the performance exploration of recent years in track and field events.

John McAndie, a member of the research team, said the steroid situation is a complex one.

"Until this test it was thought impossible to detect the drug," he said. "The samples here will help complete the research."

One of the difficulties is that traces of the drug disappear unless an athlete is tested within a few days of taking steroids, he said.

EDINBURGH (CP) — "I didn't come 3,000 miles to take a pit," says Wyn Gittins. The national officials chairman of the Canadian Track and Field Association is critical of the role allotted members of his group at the Commonwealth Games. "We have eight Canadian track and field officials here and they're being used marking lands in the field events, measuring, as timekeepers and finish-line judges," Gittins, Welsh-born resident of Saskatoon, said in an interview Thursday. He said the Scots and the English officials are reluctant to allot any responsibilities to officials from other countries. "As a result, a lot of experience, not only from Canada, is not being fully utilized." The Canadians make up the largest contingent of track and field officials here from any overseas country. "We have been training officials in Canada since 1963, and we have reached the point where we have to have international experience," Gittins said.

EDINBURGH (CP) — Col. Jack Davies, 74, commandant of Canada's team at the Commonwealth Games, kept a record alive Thursday, but had to defy doctors to do it. Col. Davies, a Montrealer who has attended every international games in which Canada has been involved in the last 21 years, attended the spectacular opening ceremonies here despite an attack of dysentry. It was a ceremony at which Canada presented the new official Games flag to the Games Society — a flag the colonel designed. Canada donated the original British Empire Games flag when the first Games were held in Hamilton in 1930. A new flag was necessary because of this year's change to British Commonwealth Games. "He's a determined man," said Dr. Ted Percy of Montreal, head doctor for the team. "I advised him to stay home but he wouldn't hear of it." A Scottish doctor was called in and for a while Wednesday night there was a suggestion that Col. Davies be sent to hospital. Thursday, he looked tired and drawn at the opening. "I had a meal and it stayed," he said. "First in some time. I'm tired. I've had consultations with two doctors. If I continue eating, I'll be all right."

VANCOUVER (CP) — Toronto Argonauts won their second easy Canadian Football League exhibition game in three nights against Western conference opposition Thursday, outscoring British Columbia Lions 42-25 in a loosely-played game that wasn't in doubt after mid-way through the second quarter.

Running back Bill Symons led the onslaught for the Eastern conference Argos, ripping off two touchdown runs of 60 and 61 yards.

Rookie Toronto quarterback Don Jonas, who starred as the Argos beat Edmonton Eskimos 47-7 Tuesday night, threw touchdown passes to flankers Tom Bland and Jim Thorpe. Jonas added a 19-yard field goal and four converts to the Argo total and tackle Bill Rhodes scored the other Toronto touchdown, dribbling and carrying a Lions fumble 25 yards in the second quarter.

Argos also had two safeties — one when Lions quarterback Vidal Carlin was tackled in the B.C. end zone in the second quarter and the other when kicker Ken Phillips conceded two points in the last quarter. Dave Mann added a 55-yard Toronto single.

The Lions came close midway in the second quarter when quarterback Paul Brothers scored a touchdown on a 1-yard end run after Ted Gerela had kicked a B.C. field goal, making the score at the time 10-9 for Toronto. But Gerela missed the convert attempt and Argos pulled away.

Running back Jim Young scored for B.C. on a 33-yard double-reverse play and A.D. Whitfield on an eight-yard pass from Carroll Williams in the fourth quarter, when the Lions outscored the Argos 14-9.

Gerela converted both those touchdowns and the Argos conceded a third-quarter safety.

Junior 'A' Going American

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Hockey Association has accepted entries from Detroit, Chatham, St. Thomas, Guelph, Welland and Brantford for a Tier 2 junior A series.

Following an association subcommittee meeting, OHA President Clarence Schmalz of Walkerton, Ont., said the entries must meet association obligations before July 25.

Schmalz said the six-man committee was receptive to the idea of admitting Detroit.

Guelph told us that they wouldn't enter if it was only a five - team league," he said, "so there was some pressure."

He said two applications from Brantford were submitted—Brantford Majors, the team accepted, and Brantford Foresters, a member of the six-team Western Ontario Junior League last season.

Schmalz said the Majors were willing to merge with the Foresters but the Foresters would not merge without "certain considerations."

He also said a Senior A application from Guelph was denied because the Guelph Arena Commission would allow only one team to play out of the arena. Last year Guelph had a team in the Western Ontario Junior League.

Wood Escapes NFL Grid Grind

OTTAWA (CP) — Gary Wood came to Ottawa Rough Riders to play football because he was tired practicing all week with New York Giants and never getting into the game.

"Oh, I got to play about four times last year but, each game was decided before I was out there," Wood said Thursday.

"Sitting on the bench was hard on me and it was hard on the family," he said.

The other nagging thought was that "being backup isn't a demanding job and you don't know when some kid of 21 or 22 will come along and take over."

Wood now has nailed down the starting quarterback job for Riders. Experts figure they will be fighting for a playoff spot in the Eastern Football Conference because of the loss of Russ Jackson and other backfield stars who led them to two straight Grey Cup wins.

The thought of trying to fill Jackson's shoes doesn't bother Wood.

I've seen him on films and he was a real good quarterback," said Wood. "I'm not knocking him. He had a lot of success."

"But he also had a couple of aces going for him."

The aces Jackson had and Wood won't are end Margene Adkins, now trying his luck in the National Football League, and Vic Washington, who has gone home in the hope Riders will release him to follow in Adkins' steps.

"I owe a big debt to the club for giving me this chance to play regularly," Wood said. "The coaches and the players have been patient with me."

Wood said he is impressed by the spirit of Riders and the way they get along on and off the field.

"In New York, the players field. They lived in neighboring states. But, here the guys do get together and nobody is left out."

PHILADELPHIA (A P) — Jack Nicklaus was "just too tired to co-ordinate" and Lee Trevino, who leads this year's Professional Golfers Association money winnings list, missed one foot putts because he couldn't concentrate.

So, the two stars got permission to withdraw from the $150,000 Philadelphia Golf Classic after Thursday's first round, led by Bob Murphy, Don Massengale and Labron Harris.

Murphy, Massengale and Harris each carded five-under-par 65's over the 6,615-yard Whitemarsh Country Club course.

Trevino shot a one-under 71 while Nicklaus carded a 74. Both were excused by the sponsor.

Toronto's George Knudson paced a four-man Canadian contingent with a 72, five behind the leaders. Knudson put together rounds of 38-34 and leads Gary Bowerman of Toronto by one. Another stroke back is another Torontonian, Al Balding, at 74 while Ken Fulton of Ste. Julie, Que., was in at 76.

Trevino left for Fort Worth, Tex., saying he was bothered by personal problems.

Nicklaus told a formal news conference: "This is the first time I've ever asked to be excused from a tournament. I'm just too tired to co-ordinate."

Nicklaus won the British Open last Sunday as 18-hole playoff with Doug Sanders.

Burkitt's 'Fixed' Races Delight Harness Fans

By RANDY DERRY
(Staff Sportswriter)

One can feel the grandstand quiver every Saturday night as the entire enthusiastic crowd springs to their feet and roar in excitement and appreciation as three horses thunder to the finish line neck-and-neck. A quick flash and a "please don't throw away those tickets" reveal another photo finish at the Bellville harness races.

Exciting races and photo finishes are what attract a crowd and Belleville has definitely had more than their share of wire finishes. But don't think that these are mere quirks of fate or an agreement between horses for actually each and every race is fixed — fixed so that the best possible matching of horses is made so to provide the most exciting races possible.

Behind the scenes and out of the public eye is the indespensable man who fixes these races and is therefore the main reason that the Belleville races are so successful. His name is Harry Burkitt and his official title is track classifier.

"Actually my job just involves making up the races and matching the horses for the best possible card. One has to be pretty well on top of the horses and the race scene in general but anyone who wants to work hard and study the horses could quite easily do this job," commented the modest classifier.

The self-described Bishop Sees employee spends a minimum of five hours a week trying to arrange the large number of entries. "We used to have a scratch just to get enough horses for eight races but now we have to turn down hopefuls with ten races. It makes more work all down the line but it improves the local racing and increases the betting. That's the challenge in this job for me, increasing the pari-mutuel betting." says Burkitt.

He has been around horses for most of his life and owns some colts himself so is well qualified for the job. His Saturday evenings are spent at the races timing and watching particular horses and being ahead all the time. "I look at the horses record to date, which I gather off of its race sheet, and the information I have gained by watching it race then try to formulate the race where it will have a good chance to win."

"We try not to place a horse above his class because harness racing is an competitive sport and it must be given a chance to win a purse so the owner can continue," states Burkitt.

Careful watching and planning take place for each and every horse because, ¢ quote Mr. Burkitt, " a horse is a highly trained athlete and an otherwise good horse can be ruined running out of his class.

Although an intimate part of the Belleville racing scene Mr. Burkitt has nothing but praise for the drivers and horses. "We are very fortunate with our drivers and owners and very seldom hear any complaints. I guess maybe they realize that we pick the horses to run as . . . . . .

But no matter how good the horse or how poor the man behind the sonne finds a race for them and makes the race close and exciting; and the Belleville harness fans love it.

Track employee Harry Burkitt concentrates on a race form as he prepares to handicap one of Belleville's harness races Saturday night. Harry is the local track classifier and it is he who matches all the horses for each race.

Ripley Crapo Says:
Gulf's Million Dollar Winner
DON'T BE MAM-HANDED

The golf club should feel lively in your hands. There's no way you can swing effectively if you take a ham-handed grip on the club and swing it like a sledge hammer.

The too-heavy grip often stems from the way the right hand is positioned on the club. The right-handed grip is definitely in the fingers, the shaft running diretly across the roots of the fingers. The club should never be allowed to slip up into the palm of the hand.

Corby's Scollard Silences Juniors With No-Hitter

A mere 24 hours earlier, matters looked particularly dark for the Corby entry in the Commercial Softball League as the cellar dwellers were unable to come up with enough players to field a team. However pitcher Pat Scollard was able to turn his club's outlook on softball left right around, hurling a no-hitter to down the leagueleading Ellis Grain 2-0.

A heads - up play by right-fielder Gordon Daniels saved Scollard's masterpiece in the fifth inning, firing to first base in time to double Ellis Meagher, who had rapped a drive into right field that appeared to be in safe for a first hit.

A pair of walks and two errors by Corby's allowed the only baserunners of the game for the Juniors. Scollard struck out ten enemy batsmen.

Scott Reid pitched well in defeat, giving up only four hits, walking two and striking out seven batters.

Goyer was the game's top hitter with a pair of singles, with the other hits going to Bob Wannamaker and Ken Brooks.

Keeps Record Intact

EDINBURGH (CP) — Col. Jack Davies, 74, commanding of Canada's team at the Commonwealth Games, kept a record alive Thursday, but had to defy his doctors to do it.

Col. Davies a Montrealer who has attended every international games in which Canada has been involved in the last 12 years, watched the spectacular opening ceremonies here despite an attack of bronchitis.

It was a ceremony at which Canada presented the new official Games flag to the Games Society—a flag the national designers of Canada donated the original British Empire Games flag when the Games were held in Hamilton in 1930. A new flag was necessary because of this year's change to British Commonwealth Games.

"He's a determined man," said Dr. Ted Percy of Montreal, head doctor for the team. "I advised him to stay home but he wouldn't hear of it."

A Scottish doctor was called in and for a while Wednesday night there was a suggestion that Col. Davies be sent to hospital.

Thursday, he looked tired and drawn at the opening.

"I had a meal and it stayed," he said. "First in some time. I'm tired. I've had consultations with two doctors. If I continue eating, I'll be all right."

Juniors Register Second Win

The Belleville Juniors came up with their second win of the season Thursday night, a 14-7 victory over Cobourg in Quinte Lacrosse action.

Ron McIntosh, Dave Middleton and Steve Pecori each had two tallies for Belleville with singles coming from Pete Fleming, Dave Searle and Jim Matthews.

Mays Rests For Shot At Record

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Willie Mays, just two hits away from 3,000 for his major league career, may rest out the first game against Montreal Expos.

Mays played in the All-Star game Tuesday night in Cincinnati and later asked Carelle Fox, manager of San Francisco Giants, if he could rest until Saturday. Fox granted the request, too.

However, in many of the games that they haven't started this year he has been used as a pinch hitter or late-inning defensive replacement in centre field.

"Rattles" To Initial Win

TORONTO (CP) — Apprentice jockey John Fellie won the first race of his double-card career at Woodbine race track Thursday riding Rattle and Jar to victory in the fourth event of the day.

The combination of longshot Rattle and Jar, who ran the distance in 1:15 4 5, and second-place Grey Guard paid bet. ters $503.20.

Tiger Terry came in third.

Canadian Miss was the winner of the program's opener and when Bella Roman won the second race, a daily double of $36.70 was manufactured.

Bantam Lacrosse Varies

The bantams had their turn in Belleville Minor Lacrosse action last Thursday night with the results being quite different.

Towers Food City edged Simmons Sears 7-6 and Bud Gill Appliances whipped Queen's Motor Hotel 9-0.

Harold Bateman and Chris Kainay with two each and single Dave Grant paced Towers and John Lowe were the tallies for Simpsons.

Jim Scott had three goals and Rod Mallery and Joe Maddocn each had two for Bud Gill's. Glenn Middleton and Rick Belanger fired singles for the winners. Brian Adams registered the shutout.

Old Rivals Lock Horns for Ontario Amateur Title

..AURORA, Ont. (CP) — The 1970 Ontario Amateur golf champion will be declared today, with the title struggle likely between old rivals Nick Weslock and Gary Cowan.

With two rounds of the 54-hole Ontario Golf Association tournament completed, the field of 144 was chopped to 66 Thursday—those who scored 156 or better.

Weslock, gunning for his eighth provincial amateur crown, retained his lead Thursday with a second—round score of 71, even-par on the 6,325-yard Aurora Highlands Golf Club course. His 137 is four strokes in front of Cowan from Kitchener Westmount and Fonthill's Bob Jarvis.

Another two strokes back at 143 and Ken Trowbridge of Bolton Glen Eagle and Donald Shorten of Aurora Westview.

Cowan, former Canadian and U.S. amateur champion, was the only player to master gusting winds and rain for a sub-par round Thursday. The winds blew to 30 miles an hour, but Cowan fired a three-under-par 68, including four birdies and 13 pars.

Weslock, at 52 the oldest competitor at Aurora, salvaged his even-par withdrawn birdies over the final six holes.

The perennial champion from Mississauga had been three over par after 12 holes.

"I think I hit pretty good for a change," Cowan said after posting the day's best round. "The wind played havoc out there."

But Cowan said he was not bothered by the weather.

"I think I can play in the wind a little better than some of those guys."

The challenger said he would have to press hard since he is behind. "I figure I've got to be at least four under," Cowan said."

Cowan expressed concern about his approach shots and putting.

"On Wednesday I was long with my wedges, and today I was short, he said. "Maybe tomorrow I'll be right in the middle."

The Kitchener golfer said he was bothered by the tough texture on the greens.

"I can't make myself hit the putter firm. I don't want to change my game just for a golf course. I've been that way since I was a kid. No dead weight.

Perez Spoils Pirates' Party

Tony Perez hit a fly ball that was an easy out in Forbes Field. The trouble, for Pittsburgh Pirates, was the game wasn't being played in Forbes Field.

"That ball was an easy out in Forbes Field," Perez said of the two-run homer that he hit Thursday night in Cincinnati Reds' 3-2 victory that spoiled the Pirates' debut in Pittsburgh's new Three Rivers Stadium.

Perez's 30th homer of the season, probably would have been caught in spacious Forbes Field, but it cleared the 410 mark in centre field, the deepest point of the new park, and put the Reds ahead 2-1.

Perez also figured in the winning run for the Reds, the runaway leaders in the National League West, when he singled and scored on Lee May's single in the ninth.

Despite the loss, the Pirates kept their 1½-game lead in the NL East when the runnerup New York Mets were whipped 3-1 by Los Angeles Dodgers.

Atlanta Braves topped St. Louis Cardinals 7-5, Houston Astros nipped Chicago Cubs 2-1 and Philadelphia Phillies outlasted San Diego Padres 10-7 in other league action. San Francisco Giants and Montreal Expos were not scheduled.

With a crowd of 48,966, largest ever to see a baseball game in Pittsburgh, the Pirates jumped to a 1-0 lead in the first inning on Richie Hebner's single and Al Oliver's double.

After Perez's homer in the fifth, Pirates' Willie Stargell slammed his 17th homer into the upper deck in right field in the sixth to tie it.

Bill Grabarkewitz' led off the eighth with a homer to give Los Angeles a 2-1 lead. He now has won games with six of his 10 homers.

The Mets, who have lost four in a row, had tied it 1-1 in the seventh on Cleon Jones' third homer.

A five-run seventh inning, keyed by Felix Millan's two-run single, helped Atlanta send the Cardinals to their eighth straight loss.

A throwing error by the Cubs' Glenn Beckert opened the door for Houston's two runs in the second inning. Jesus Alou drove in one with a sacrifice fly, and Jim Wynn singled home the other. Don Wilson made the lead stand up with relief help from Jim Ray in the ninth.

Twins Bungle Leader's Battle

The Baltimore-Minnesota game was a clash between the America League's division leaders, but in the Twins, it was all a mistake. In fact, it was a lot of mistakes.

The Twins made throwing errors and catching errors 'klong' with some faulty base-running to boogie their way to a 5-1 loss to the Orioles in Baltimore.

"Those three days off sorta slowed us down a bit it seems," drawled Minnesota manager Bill Rigney, referring to the all-star break. The Twins had won six of eight games before the three-day rest.

The outcome left Baltimore six games ahead of Detroit in the East after the Tigers outslugged Chicago White Sox 11-6, and cut Minnesota's lead in the West to four games over California when the Angels nipped Washington Senators 3-2.

In the only other night game, Cleveland Indians blanked Kansas City Royals 6-0. In day games, Boston Red Sox edged Milwaukee Brewers 6-5 in 10 innings and Oakland Athletics clobbered New York Yankees 8-1 before losing 4-1 in a doubleheader.

The Twins' problems began in the first inning when they had one runner thrown out at the plate and then gave Baltimore a run on George Mitterwald's two-out passed ball.

Two innings later, the Orioles made it 2-0 when Paul Blair scored from third base on a short sacrifice fly. Left fielder Bob Allison caught the ball only 20 yards beyond the infield and then dribbled a throw to the plate that hit Blair on the bounce about 10 feet from home.

Harmon Killebrew managed to get one run back for the Twins in the sixth off Mike Cuellar with his 27th homer, but the Twins boo-boored themselves out of the tying run and perhaps more.

A walk and Rich Reese's single put runners on first and third with two out when Mitterwald hit a shot that bounced off third baseman Robinson's chest. But he recovered and still got his man in plenty of time when Mitterwald fell leaving the plate.

Detroit won a slugging duel, outhitting the White Sox 18-12 and outhonoring them 4-2.

California overcame two Washington homers then won in the ninth on Tom Egan double, an infield hit and Sandy Alomar's burst.

Rookie Rich Hand, 3-8, pitcher Cleveland to victory with a four-hitter and the Indians homered Jim Hooker for five runs in the fifth.

Boston also won a home run duel on George Scott's sacrifice fly in the 10th with the bases loaded and none out against a two-man outfield.Milwaukee manager Dave Bristol moved left fielder Tommie Harper in as another infielder.

Harper had tied the game in the ninth with a two-out, two-on homer, the Brewers' third homer. Boston also had three, including two by Billy Conigliaro.

TOO MANY BEHIND BARS

VANCOUVER (CP) — George Street, chairman of the National Parole Board, said in an interview here that Canada has the world's highest proportion of people behind bars. He said "The answer to crime is not prison but more control over offenders through the parole system."

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

Your birthday today: Your work — and your errors — of the past two or three years produce results this year. It is harvest phase of your basic cycle. Increased authority brings heavier responsibility. You are unlikely to be left undisturbed in comfortable routines. Freer and more exciting emotional expression comes to you in unplanned episodes. Today's natives tend toward patient study, mystical interests, abrupt, minor changes.

ARIES (March 21—April 19): Unsettled conditions make the early hours interesting, perhaps inconvenient. The later hours are much happier, with brief, interesting moments of sentiment.

TAURUS (April 20—May 20): Think over your plans today in the light of late events, and make some little changes where appropriate. It is a generally quiet day. Get extra rest.

GEMINI (May 21—June 20): Early in the day some questions arise without a ready answer will occur and will color the whole day, getting in the way of routine. Study and prayer will bring guidance.

CANCER (June 21—July 22): Now the crisis arises over whose plans are to be followed. Go along with those of your loved ones and good friends. Your turn comes another day.

LEO (July 23—Aug. 22): Expect sudden resistance, contrary views. See the situation as an opportunity to sell your self the moment: force no issues.

VIRGO (Aug. 23—Sept. 22): Concentrate on work that can be done single - handed or alone. Your partial privacy helps you realize where you are in your world.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct 22): Once again your home life runs into conflict with your vocation: something has to be put off for a time. It will be easier if you sell the trend early.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Keep in mind future co-operation rather than today's passing disagreements. Dig into the background of current issues. You may find something that changes your views.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Give thought to your health and personal habits. Bear with people who have different opinions — they may come around later if you remain calm.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22—Jan. 19): Ther is no merit in pushing plans after they've misfired. Start fresh when you find out what you have on hand to work with.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Your most creative hobby shows promise. Experimental procedures turn out surprising results. Research, the seeking of odd facts are indicated.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — March 20): You have the chance to make new friends today. Discussions with old friends run into complexities. Emotional urges come on rather strongly.

Yesterday's Puzzle Solved:

Prairie Wheat Acreage Reported Slashed by More Than Half

OTTAWA (CP) — Prairie farmers have turned dramatically away from wheat—their traditional money crop—in the face of a supply glut, depressed prices and a new government program that pays cash for land left idle or used for cattle-fodder crops.

The first official estimates of 1970 crop acreages, based on June 1 surveys and published Thursday by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, indicates western farmers have slashed wheat acreages by more than half from last year to about 11,000,000 acres.

Otto Lang, minister responsible for the wheat program, said he expects the final tally will show a total Prairie wheat acreage of about 11,000,000.

The indicated totals would return western wheat acreages to a range that prevailed before the First World War, when cropland was still being opened up and stubble were first completed.

Until this year, wheat acreages have never since dropped much below 15,000,000. Even during a previous cash-for-fallow program in the Second World War, wheat acreage on the Prairies remained above 16,000,000 at the lowest ebb in 1943.

Last year, the acreage on the Prairies was about 24,400,000 and 865,000,000 bushels of wheat were produced on that land. Just three years ago, wheat was sown on a record of almost 30,000,000 acres.

Based on an estimated yield of 25 bushels an acre, the indicated area for wheat this year would produce a maximum of 300,000,000 bushels, less than half last year's.

Canadian farmers thus would be contributing substantially more than their chief competitors in meeting the over-supply problem.

Australia has reduced its delivery quotas this year by about 13 per cent to 308,000,000 bushels from 357,000,000 last year. Latest crop estimates in the United States, issued July 1, indicate a reduction by about seven per cent in a year to a wheat crop of 1,350,000,000 bushels from 1,460,000,000 last year.

Thursday's estimates indicate that Canadian Prairie land rested in summerfallow has been expanded to a record 36,000,000 acres, up by 8,000,000 acres from the previous record last year.

Plantings of rapeseed doubled to 4,000,000 acres and flaxseed acreage jumped by almost one-third to 3,500,000.

Indications for coarse-grains acreage showed oats down slightly by 300,000 from last year to 6,500,000; barley up marginally to 9,300,000 and rye up by 10 per cent to 944,000.

Mr. Lang said he expected final tallies would show barley acreage up to 10,500,000.

The minister claimed the shift away from wheat as a success for the federal program, announced last February, to meet the over-supply problem. Canada currently has a stockpile of about 1,000,000,000 bushels of wheat—about two years' supply for domestic and export sales.

The government program—named LIFT, for Low Inventory for Tomorrow—pays $6 an acre for wheatland shifted to summerfallow up to a maximum of 1,000 acres a farm, and $10 an acre for land converted to forage crops for at least two years.

The government budgeted a maximum $140,000,000 for the project, which would have meant virtual cessation of wheat production on the Prairies.

Picnic Ends Sit-in

BRANTFORD (CP) — Peace returned to the nearby Six Nations Indian reserve Thursday.

The Six Nations Confederacy Warriors, an organization which has been blocking access to a council house usually occupied by the elected band council, ended its occupation of the council house grounds after being served with an injunction taken out by the council.

Problem for Attorneys-general

Drugs at Rock Festivals Like Drinks at Football Games

HALIFAX (CP) — Justice Minister John Turner asked provincial attorneys-general Thursday for their views about the role of the federal government in compensating victims of violent crimes.

Mr. Turner told the provincial ministers at a meeting that a prerequisite of any federal participation would be uniform provincial legislation. The ministers end a three-day conference here today.

In an interview following the private session, Mr. Turner said he recognized a government obligation to compensate victims of crime, but found "no real impetus for federal participation at this stage."

Ontario, Saskatchewan, British Columbia, Alberta and Newfoundland have enacted legislation to compensate crime victims.

The ministers also discussed drug-taking at rock festivals and similar events and generally seemed to regard the question as similar to drinking at football games.

So far, the police have tended to concentrate on other law enforcement matters at rock festivals.

"It's the same as drinking at football games," said Saskatchewan Attorney-General D. V. Heald.

Attorney-General Arthur Wishart of Ontario agreed, noting that mass arrests just aren't possible and the problems of getting proof that will stand up in court are great.

Mr. Turner said the conference, being held behind closed doors, seemed to agree that attorneys-general who administer the laws provincially must use their own discretion about fairly open drug-taking.

"If they feel the best protection of the public order lies in not provoking violence, that is a judgment they have a right to exercise," he said.

Bodies of Two Victims of Sinking Still Unfound

CORNWALL (CP) — Police divers are expected to continue their search today for the bodies of two of nine persons drowned when the laker Eastcliffe Hall hit a shoal and sank in the St. Lawrence seaway on Tuesday.

Still not accounted for are Lawrence Mongrall, 28, of Kentville, N.S., and Freeman Barter, 29, of Ramea, Nfld.

Divers recovered three bodies Thursday, including that of Alain Groulx, 16-year-old son of the laker's captain, Richard Groulx of Montreal, whose body was recovered earlier.

Efforts to recover the bodies had been slowed down by adverse weather conditions and by strong currents in the shipping channel 18 miles west of here.

In Ottawa, Thursday Transport Minister Don Jamieson announced a public inquiry will be held into the sinking. No date for the inquiry was announced.

Twelve survivors were rescued by Canadian and United States vessels after the 3,335-ton vessel, owned by the Hall Corp. of Montreal, struck Crysler Shoal in Canadian waters and sank in about three minutes.

The U.S. Coast Guard said the ship was outside of a clearly-marked channel when it struck.

Shipping was diverted from the area after the sinking, but normal navigation resumed late Wednesday and officials said any further diversion from the area would be brief.

The Eastcliffe Hall, whose replacement value has been put at $2,000,000 by the owners, was carrying a cargo of pig iron from Sorel, Que., boun for Saginaw, Mich.

Two Tugs Pull Saguenay Off Mud Bank

PORT HOOD, N.S. (CP) — The Canadian destroyer escort Saguenay was pulled free of a mud bank today by two tugs, with the aid of a rising tide.

A navy official said the 2,900-ton vessel will make anchor here and divers will conduct inspection as soon as possible. The official said there was no visible damage.

The Saguenay, carrying a complement of 250, ran aground Thursday morning on the mud bank south of a causeway linking this former coal-mining town with Port Hood Island, about a half-mile from shore.

Efforts to refloat the ship when the tide peaked at 9 p.m. ADT Thursday were unsuccessful.

Reports of Loto-Quebec Probe Denied

QUEBEC (CP) — Justice Minister Jerome Choquette has described as "inexact" news-paper reports Thursday of an investigation into the provincial lottery administration.

The Montreal Star said the Quebec Justice department has launched a secret inquiry into all phases of the Quebec Corporation for Operation Lotteries and Races following an investigation into a specific distributor of lottery tickets who owned a vending service. was believed to have underworld connections and was said to have been involved in charges of Mafia control over some concessions at Expo 67.

But Mr. Choquette said: "As far as I know there is no justice department or police inquiry into Loto-Quebec."

"We certainly are not under any investigation and if some newspapers say we are, then they must be mixed up with the lottery board, the judicial body which governs granting of permits for bingos, races and other such things."

The former head of that judicial body, the Quebec Lotteries and Races Board, resigned his position effective July 1 when making his reasons public. Judge Reginald Tormey, appointed to the board Jan. 23 this year, said the reasons were contained in a "personal and confidential" letter to Justice Minister Choquette June 29.

Mr. Choquette admitted he had heard rumors of possible underworld infiltration of Loto-Quebec operations but had never had "facts" to warrant an investigation.

Mr. Custeau said there have been no complaints against any distributor or seller but added that security checks made previously are being double-checked by police "to assure maximum security."

The Gazette said there were reports that criminals were systematically trying to buy cigar stores that have Loto-Quebec concessions.

The scheme would be to substitute forged tickets for real ones gradually, keeping all the money from sales of the forgeries for themselves.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Allergies Common, In Various Forms

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: My family is overrun with allergy. In some form or other, my husband, I, and our three children suffer from it. Will you discuss it briefly — yet thoroughly? — Mrs. Q.

Comment: Briefly yet thoroughly? That's like asking someone to write "everything that's happening" on a postcard. But I realize how frustrated you feel, so I'll try. You may find some hint or definition that will help. Here goes.

One estimate is that at least 20 million Americans suffer from some type of allergy. Ii may occur at any age. A baby in its crib may have a skin eruption due to milk sensitivity; a teenager may come down with a pencillin reaction; a middle-aged businessman may get stomach upsets due to eating chocolate; and an elderly woman may wheeze due to asthma.

A simple definition of allergy: it's a sensitivity some people develop of substances ordinarily harmless to most others. These substances are called allergens. They can be swallowed, inhaled, or cause irritation by actual contact or by injection.

1. Inhalants: Pollens from weeds, trees, grasses, and plants. Dust, mold spores, animal danders, hair-lotions, feathers, cosmetic, insecticide sprays, chemicals and tobacco.

2. Food: Fruits, nuts, fish, eggs, milk, wheat, beans, etc.

3. Contactants: Insecticides, drugs, resins, cosmetics, dyes, rubber, fabrics, metals, plastics, foliage.

4. Drugs by injection. Serums, antibiotics, insulin, liver extract, hormones.

3. Bacteria: Germs in the body, in nose, throat, tonsils, bronchial tubes, ears and sinuses.

Thousands of patients suffer needlessly from allergy because they never think of that possibility. Whenever you are plagued by symptoms that are mysterious and do not fit into any proper diagnostic niche, the patient and doctor should consider the possibility of allergy. Why suffer from itch, cough, headaches, indigestion or worse — when there may be a cure for the asking?

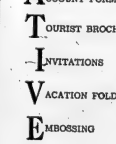
Treatment of allergy is either "active" or "passive." Active treatment builds up the body's resistance against allergens: the doctor gives steadily increasing desensitizing doses by injection to control reactions to ragweed, dust, molds, etc.

Passive treatment is like coming out of the rain: getting away from the sensitizing agents. Giving up certain elements in the diet; moving elsewhere (which doesn't help); living in a house that is as dust - free as possible, etc.

Mrs. Q., I realize I haven't been completely thorough, but perhaps I have given you a hint here and there which may bring some comfort to you and your family.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Why ers of wood glued together er is wood glued together under pressure. It is light and oh why isn't it possible to get rest in a hospital? For extremely strong.

LIGHT AND STRONG



Plywood is made of thin lay-

Comment: Yes, they're important, but not necessarily so often. (Incidentally, a hospital is no place in which to expect to find relaxation and rest).

You'll be interested to know — according to a piece in the Medical World News — that Euclid (Ohio) General Hospital is doing something about it. They're conducting an experiment in which temperatures are taken only at 4 p.m. This saves nurses' time — 15 - 20 hours daily in the 250 - bed hospital. But this new policy does not apply to patients in intensive and coronary care units, recovery room, and in the pediatric ward.

Casting on Troublesome Waters

Bill Hawthorne shows fishing technique to six-year-old Wally Jensen, visiting Crystal Beach resort with his mother, Mrs. Donna Jensen, St. Catharines. MADOC — Hastings County may be losing one of its biggest, longest-established, tourist-resort operators because, he claims, he is fed up fighting pollution.

In fact, Bill Hawthorne is so incensed he threatens to run against the Conservative government candidate here in the next provincial election.

Mr. Hawthorne is emphatic when he says he is closing his Moira Lake resort for good Sept. 7 — after 26 years building up an investment he now market values at $300,000.

Only two developments will lure him back as this area's major resort operator:

(1) A complete cleanup of Moira Lake — the once-clear waters of which inspired him to name and promote his enterprise across North America as Crystal Beach; or (2) A provincial election. In the next election, he warns, he will launch his own political party to campaign against a government he holds responsible for shattering the showpiece image of a prime Hastings County water resource.

"We don't blame a single member of any municipality for pollution," he states. "But I do blame two government departments — namely health and the Ontario Water Resources Commission.

"I will run in an election in Hastings the very hour Mr. Robarts announces the next election," he says. "I will challenge the government and its department of health and the OWRC on how they've managed my environment in the past 25 years.

To stage his future campaign, Mr. Hawthorne says he is now launching PEP — the Progressive Environmental Party. As its candidate he will canvass the "street corners of every hamlet in Hastings" — to promote a message about environment management.

While his attitude may seem dramatic, Mr. Hawthorne is no newcomer to colorful confrontation — anymore than he is a fledgling at private enterprise.

In the past five summers he has consistently emerged from his Moira Lake resort

Reds Given Rebuke By Youth

In a sudden and almost astonishing swing from an almost-entirely anti-American and anti-Israeli tendency, youths from around the world turned on the Communists at the last minute and condemned the Warsaw pact invasion of Czechoslovakia two years ago. Earlier they had approved a demand that the United States get out of Indochina.

The surprise ending came late Friday night after a stormy meeting in which more than 600 of the 652 persons registered for the assembly took note" of a highly controversial report of the assembly's leftist- and Arab-dominated world peace and security commission.

A message to the UN General Assembly, raised against the Americans, Israelis and capitalist countries was amended to insert condemnation of the Communists.

The assembly voted narrowly, 325 to 294, to accept the statement, which had been largely written by a Romanian.

Then the anti-Soviet the Communists were massive: 254 to 68 in favor of a call for repudiation of limited sovereignty, the excuse used by the Soviet-led bloc to invade Czechoslovakia; 371 to 115 for a call that the Soviet Union remove its troops from Czechoslovakia immediately and the restoration of "full democracy in that country."

The assembly stuck by a massive 293 to 17 vote to its backing of a new state of Palestine, embodying Jews, Arabs and Christians in what now is Israel

General Strike Possible

B. C. Labor Defies Bennett Over Forced Mediation Law

VICTORIA (CP) — Premier W. A. C. Bennett's Social Credit administration, facing open defiance by the British Columbia Federation of Labor and the threat of a possible general strike, scheduled an emergency meeting of the full cabinet today to discuss the brew situation.

Facing cabinet is the prickly question of whether the government will invoke compulsory provisions of the B.C. Mediation Act to end a three-month strike-lockout dispute that has crippled the province's construction industry.

Mr. Bennett turned aside questions about his meeting with a curt "no comment," but the federation was not reticent.

In a 300-word statement, the federation threw its full support behind the building trades unions' announced intention of defying the government by not returning to work without a contract, and reiterated that its affiliated unions should refuse to accept compulsory arbitration and refuse to work under a compulsion.

Labor federation secretary Ray Haynes said union members should be prepared to refuse to pay any fines levied for non-compliance with the legislation and go to jail if necessary.

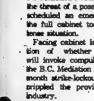
"The law is so bad, so unbearable and so impossible for us that we're going to have to violate it if it's in force and we are ready to pay the penalty," he said.

"We feel so strongly about the legislation and about compulsion that anything but reticent.

if we have to go to jail that will have to be."

F. G. Peskett, president of the B.C. Employers Council, described the federation announcement as "a statement bordering on anarchy." The council, a recently-organized group, represents most employers in the province.

Mr. Haynes, whose federation represents 160,000 workers out of a B.C. labor force of close to 800,000, told reporters that people in the B.C. labor movement have been "pushing for a general strike for a long time."



"We're trying to avoid it and we hope it will be avoided. But if — and that's a big word — if Mr. Bennett doesn't look at this thing and appreciate the situation and if people are jailed, it can lead to the kind of thing you're talking about, general strike."

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: Skies cleared over most of Ontario during the night and the province is assured of a fine sunny day today. In southern regions high readings today should reach the mid 70s to only a few degrees below normal for mid-July. Sunday's weather will be much the same as today's.

Russia to Raise Help to Egypt

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Foreign Minister Abba Eban of Israel has denounced a declaration by the Soviet Union that it will increase its political, economic and military support of Egypt to counter "aggression" by Israel.

Eban said Friday that the Soviet announcement, issued as a communique by the Moscow news agency TASS, contained nothing new and "clearly shows the enmity the Soviet Union harbors against Israel."

"It seems to be clear that the Soviet Union is not set on the course for peace," he said.

Attack on Laos Thought Possible

SAIGON (AP) — United States and South Vietnamese troops might be preparing for a thrust into Laos.

A joint assault, involving nearly 10,000 troops, was launched in jungle mountains 30 to 50 miles south of Da Nang, South Vietnam's second-largest city. Some troops advanced to within striking distance of Laos; one forward base was at Kham Duc, 10 miles from the border.

U.S. B-52 bombers have been concentrating heavy bombing raids along the Laotian frontier during the last week.

Army 'Reconnaisance' of British Ports Brings Union Warning

LONDON (CP) — British Army officers made "reconnaissance patrols" of Britain's major ports as the national dock strike entered its third day today, while a union leader warned that the strike could spread if troops are used to unload ships.

Jack Jones, general secretary of the Transport and General Workers' Union, Britain's biggest, said: "Before troops are used the unions should be consulted to see if there are other ways of moving essential cargoes."

Otherwise, he said, there is "serious danger" of the strike spreading to other industries.

Jones added: "The strike could last a very long time. The dockers are digging in."

The government's emergency committee decided Friday night that troops will not be sent in before Monday because no cargo needs shifting during the weekend.

But with the strike of 47,000 dockers two days old, servicemen from all three armed forces were put on standby in case they have to move perishable goods.

Jones warned that if the troops are moved in, the strike could spread to involve truck drivers, who have already pledged their support for the dockers, lock-keepers, who could paralyze enclosed docks, and river pilots.

Under the national state of emergency declared by the government, 35,000 soldiers are standing by to move foodstuffs jammed by the strike.

Army officers meanwhile visited several ports to map out procedures if the troops have to go to work. Forward parties have been placed on alert.

The crippling strike—over wages—will imperil Britain's economic recovery if it drags on for long. Every day it delays imports and exports worth £37,000,000 (about $92,500,000) and unloading is held up on 150 ships.

Some industrial observers believe that with both sides deadlocked and not even meeting at the moment, the stoppage could last up to six weeks—with disastrous results for Britain.

The country is under emergency regulations which came into force at midnight Friday night, although the government has said that most of the provisions will only be enforced if the situation deteriorates.

Under the emergency powers, strikers may picket peacefully but the army and police can order anyone to leave the vicinity of premises taken over to maintain supplies and services essential to the life of the country.

The regulations also empower ministers to lay down maximum prices for food and animal feedstuffs and to regulate ship and equipment movements in ports.

Employment Minister Robert Carr has announced the creation of a four-man court of inquiry to seek a formula for ending the strike. It will be headed by a distinguished judge, Lord Pearson, who was chairman a similar inquiry to help resolve the 1966 seamen's strike.

Prince, Sister Dance on Lawn

WASHINGTON (AP) — Prince Charles and Princess Anne danced into the early-morning hours today at a White House lawn party highlighted with French champagne, fireworks and rock music.

The royal couple plane more sightseeing trips and a private dinner with President and Mrs. Nixon before flying back to London tonight.

The party on the south lawn was the big special occasion of the three-day visit and the last guest departed about 3 a.m. EDT. The dance pavilion was covered by a canopy of thousands of tiny white lights. There were 57 candle-lighted, flower-decked tables and the Washington Monument and a full moon served as spectacular backdrops.

From across the U.S., 364 young persons, were invited to meet the royal pair. They were mainly sons and daughters of members of the cabinet, U.S. Congress, diplomatic corps, governors and friends of the Nixon family.

The princess, her blonde hair with a curled fall in back, wore a green voile dress and diamond earrings. The prince was dressed in a tuxedo brightened by a blue velvet bow tie and purple handkerchief in the breast pocket. Both held forth in an hour-long receiving line while hosts Tricia Nixon and Julie and David Eisenhower stood on a balcony overlooking the grounds.

Canada's top rock band, The Guess Who, together with the U.S. Marine Band and a U.S. rock group led by 27-year-old Gary Puckett of San Diego provided the music.

Under the national state of emergency declared by the government, 35,000 soldiers are standing by to move foodstuffs jammed by the strike.

Army officers meanwhile visited several ports to map out procedures if the troops have to go to work. Forward parties have been placed on alert.

The crippling strike—over wages—will imperil Britain's economic recovery if it drags on for long. Every day it delays imports and exports worth £27,000,000 (about $92,500,000) and unloading is held up on 150 ships.

Some industrial observers believe that with both sides deadlocked and not even meeting at the moment, the stoppage could last up to six weeks—with disastrous results for Britain.

The country is under emergency regulations which came into force at midnight Friday night, although the government has said that most of the provisions will only be enforced if the situation deteriorates.

Under the emergency powers, strikers may picket peacefully but the army and police can order anyone to leave the vicinity of premises taken over to maintain supplies and services essential to the life of the country.

The regulations also empower ministers to lay down maximum prices for food and animal feedstuffs and to regulate ship and equipment movements in ports.

Employment Minister Robert Carr has announced the creation of a four-man court of inquiry to seek a formula for ending the strike. It will be headed by a distinguished judge, Lord Pearson, who was chairman a similar inquiry to help resolve the 1966 seamen's strike.

OSD Graduate Starts Newspaper to Communicate

Man is born with five major senses giving him the ability to see, hear, touch, taste, and smell. Foremost of these are sight and sound.

To most people, the existence of these senses is taken for granted.

Julius Wiggins, a native of Toronto, was born with full faculties, but at the age of six months, he lost the ability to hear, a condition attributed to appendicitis.

It was a strange world in which he began life. Although he didn't know the difference between himself and others until later life, he was often baffled by not knowing when to do while others were busily engaged.

Both as an autobiography, and as a treatment of one individual's ability to overcome difficult circumstances, Mr. Wiggins' book, No Sound, reveals to the rest of the world, the life of a person who cannot hear, and cannot speak.

Through the pages of the book, the reader is told of the somewhat archaic methods employed by the teachers of the deaf more than 40 years ago.

As Mr. Wiggins said during a recent visit to OSD: "we were much more confined during the time that I was there.

"It's much better now than it was in the 1930s."

Although he explains in the book that methods have greatly changed in the past decades, he praises various members of the OSD teaching staff.

To make himself understood at the young Wiggins formulated his own sign language. Sign language forms a basic means of communication for the deaf. At school, a universal language is taught.

Later, when he went to school, he and the other boys found themselves restricted in it's use.

"We were taught no words at first and we were not taught the names of anything, but just the making and lipreading of single sounds. We weren't permitted to use the 'Sign Language' and therefore were unable to ask the teacher to explain things."

The rest of the world, or people to whom the deaf refer as "hearing people", can place various inflections on standard words. In this manner, much explanation is avoided.

The deaf lack this facility and as a result are considered . . . "It's not what is said, it's the way he says it that counts."

Says Mr. Wiggins." . . . vocabulary is the first and main deprivation of the deaf. Many thoughts and menial pictures have to wait until toe deaf person has a vocabulary and can explain them even to himself."

Mr. Wiggins occasionally comments on this lack and his strong feelings on the subject can be felt throughout the pages as this paragraph indicates:

". . . . the deaf learn very little of humor, or the fine shades of thought, except among themselves. Those born deaf, are apt to be considered unable to grasp ideas. Actually, our education contained no ideas for a very long while, and was usually so institutionalized that the sum total was an exercise in . . . illiteracy."

Through such comments the driving nature which was the mainstay of his existence.

During the war, he attended various regular Toronto public schools which were equipped to teach the deaf. While attending these schools, at the age of 14, his parents encouraged him to follow the family barrier trade and he was sent to work in shops where he learned the art of sewing fur fur coats and wraps.

Through the many years of partime, apprenticeship and eventually, fulltime employment, his driving desire to succeed brought him to the doors of many companies.

Throughout the book he often notes with wry humor the lack of understanding between himself and prospective employers. In many cases he knew their disbelief that a deafmute could hand'e the intricate job of completely prefabricated furs. The art which he learned over many years.

His quest for an improved life took him from Toronto to New York, back to Canada where he started his own business with a hearing brother and then back again to the U.S. where his permanent home is located.

While in New York, he met a deaf girl at one of the deaf clubs in that city and they were later married. The Wigginses have three hearing children. Morton, 14, is a high school student; Adele is a high school junior, and Steven is in first grade.

Children present difficulties to deaf parents which are often difficult to cope with. When a baby cries, deaf parents naturally can't hear it. When the children are older, they learn sign language and the parents can also lip read what they have to say. Up until that time, communication is a problem.

A special baby cry device, available for about $25, can be purchased. The unit consists of a microphone and electronic circuits which monitor the child's cry. The sound waves trip an alarm which turns the light on. Such light signals are used in more ways than that.

Doorbells, telephones, automobile alert signals, and clock alarms are attached to a series of lights to take the place of sound alarms.

At the same time as he was working his way up in the furrier business, Mr. Wiggins decided to pursue an earlier ambition to become involved in the printing trade. He enrolled in a linotype class and learned the trade of typesetting for the printing trade. This second trade was learned on the offchance that the furrier business might become slack.

The friendships he built up in the trade blossomed into an ambitious enterprise. While the deaf in North America have a magazine, the jDeaf American, there was no newspaper of current events concerning the deaf.

Mr. Wiggins formed The Silent Press Inc., with various shareholders and the first issue of the Silent News went to press in 1969. He had visited various linotype press shops but after a few issues, purchased a Varitype machine and the paper is now issued using the photo-offset method.

Utilizing this method enables the Wiggins family to lay out the paper in their own basement. His wife Harriet learned to operate the Varitype and now the tabloid-size monthly is set at their home.

An editor, Walter M. Schuman, supervises the editorial staff of seven and correspondence comes in from other New England states.

Today the circulation stands at more than 4,000, with 3,000 in paid subscriptions. Advertising comes chiefly from various dealers and businesses and content includes news, four nation-wide gossip columns, sports, recipes, a column which straightens out the problems of the deaf, and club news.

On his recent visit to Belleville, Mr. Wiggins made contact with deaf Canadians and he hopes, in the future, to receive news from Canada.

No Sound was one of the first endeavors of the new company and will be reprinted in the future.

Crystal Beach Resort to Close

to challenge local and provincial government attitudes on pollution. A highlight of his campaigning was a mass picket of Ontario cabinet ministers in Belleville last year, during which he personally buttonholed Premier Robarts.

As a businessman in Crystal Beach now has 250 campsites on 300 acres. Its resident registration is about 7,000 signatures a season — most from a signifying family groups, it's listed in confidential tour guides. Mr. Hawthorne believes it is among the top 10 private resort facilities in the province

But, this year, he has started removing color postcards of his resort from the resort's canteen.

They highlight Moira Lake in blue and, Mr. Hawthorne claims he's afraid any tourist attracted by them might accuse him of fraud.

He has a claim that Moira Lake has been infested with algae, he says.

Nutrified by pollutants, stimulated by warm weather the green underwater growth has been the source of many complaints, claims Mr. Hawthorne.

Mr. Hawthorne dates the problems from 1964 when the Moira River Conservation Authority first built a dam, regulating the flow of the river through the lake.

In that year, an Anglican church picnic on his resort resulted in a complaint about the water.

"That was the first time I was ever challenged about the quality of the water here," claims Mr. Hawthorne.

Shortly after, he says, he drew a list of pollution sources and presented it to local government authorities.

He blamed, among other causes, arsenic from old mine tailings at Deloro, inefficient septic tank systems on the lake, dumping of tannan waste as landfill by cygarette, municipal drainage, seepage from a municipal dump and sulphur runoff into tributary creeks at the Marmora-ton Mines.

He claims the political response was that he was "upset duly concerned and giving the place a bad name."

Adds his wife, Elizabeth: "The unforgivable thing is the time element. It's taken six years and not a thing has been done about it."

He is critical of both provincial and federal governments for failure to respond to the situation — and that goes for opposition parties as well.

However, one politician he does not blame is "ntario Resources Minister George Kerr — whose portfolio includes the OWRC.

"We don't blame Mr. Kerr," he says. "We think he is genuinely concerned. But he's sadly, misinformed by his technicians. We challenge every study that's been made on the Moira River system for the last 20 years."

What the OWRC needs is a limnologist — an expert on the study of streams and lakes — but there is not such a professional in the Ontario government's employ, charges Mr. Hawthorne.

He says he offered his resort to the province for purchase as a provincial park. He advertised its commercial sale last year and the only offer was one-third of what he asked.

Come September, the Hawthornes move to Toronto where the owner of Crystal Beach will begin work in organizing the recreational aspects of the $70,000,000 Forest Hills Country Club in Toronto.

Educational Look Changing

Ever since Russia's Sputnik went up, mathematics and science have been in the front of educational concern in the western world.

But everyone forgot that people must learn to cope in the new world technology presented them with.

Now the educational outlook is changing, and focusing on the humanities once more, along with training in problem solving techniques instead of memorization of "facts" that become obsolete the day after tomorrow.

That's the reason for the presence at Centennial Secondary School this summer of 164 elementary school teachers, enrolled in a five-week department of education social studies course for kindergarten through grade 6.

"As teachers, we have a responsibility - to teach children to live with new norms," says Robert Somerville of Kitchener, principal of the summer school.

The course he describes as "a somewhat structured, yet child - centred program", aimed at "developing a child who can live in the modern world."

The department of education in Ontario interest in on social studies as the best place in the course of studies to begin "living and learning", says.

The old history and geography program in elementary schools is now augmented by four new disciplines — economics - anthropology - sociology, philosophy - psychology - religion and political science.

It's a big area for 5 to 11-year-olds to explore, but the path of learning is smoothed with "learning through doing" techniques.

First the history and geography teachers must be retrained — a constant and ongoing way of life for today's teachers, who can no longer sail through a lifetime career on the basis of a year at teachers' college. The summer course counts for credits in improving their qualifications.

One morning recently, the teachers were scrambling through notes, looking for the Upper Canada recipe for "pioneer" — made pioneer style with wood ashes and saved scraps of animal fat.

Their instructor, and student - teachers who had tried the recipe in their classroom, led the group through a discussion of how the soap-making project could be used at all grade levels to give pupils an insight into history, economics, primitive social organization, pioneer mentality, even mathematics (measuring ingredients), language (writing reports) chemistry (the reaction of lye and fat when mixed together) and finally language (report writing).

By leading pupils back through the past, the instigators of the new social studies program hope they will gain insight on the factors that shaped the modern world. And by introducing the new sciences, they expect to send into tomorrow's world individuals capable of functioning as efficiently on the space age frontier as the forefathers did on the frontiers of Canada.

Community Programs Working

The Recreation Department in co - operation with the Hastings County Board of Education has opened Queen Mary and Hillcrest Public Schools during July and August to meet the recreational requirements of those people between the ages of 12 and 16.

As part of this program, active sports including badminton, basketball, volleyball, tennis and baseball are being offered.

Free instructional classes in ceramics and drawing and painting are also included in an attempt to present a diversified program.

Classes in ceramics, under the direction of Miss Audrey Davies and drawing and painting classes under the direction of Miss Lindsey Haslam are scheduled to commence July 15 and 20 respectively.

Registration for these classes as well as for any of the athletic pursuits can be made at either school. All are welcome and invited to attend if you live in these areas.

Cone Picker

The Ontario department of highways built this automatic cone picker last winter as part of an effort to make road painting safer for highway personnel. The vehicle operates at about 20 miles-an-hour picking the cones up with two of the four wheels mounted on the front. The cone is thrown into a basket and then transferred by a belt to a storage bin on the right side. The photo shows the vehicle in operation on Highway 2, east of Bellleville.

Angus Gunter on His Farm

On the Job 33 Years

By MALCOLM JOHNSTON
(Staff Reporter)

WOOLER — Angus Gunter's name is synonymous with clerking in Murray township.

Municipal service and Murray township have long been a way of life for Mr. Gunter.

Then in 1945 council appointed Angus Gunter as the township's first full-time administrator with the title and responsibilities of clerk-treasurer.

During his 33 years of municipal service, the demands of his job and the flavor of the township have changed.

"It wasn't nearly as big a job then as it is now," he explained, "today we have more government regulations, a larger population and we handle a lot more money."

"The tax roll in 1937 was about $79,000 but today it is $362,000 and that's quite a difference." Mr. Gunter said.

"In the early days there was no income tax, Canada pension or unemployment insurance to enlist me." he added in describing some reasons for the greater volume of paper work today.

"The township is more urbanized than it used to be. Today 52 per cent of the population is urban whereas it was once mostly agricultural."

Notice that the trend now is for bigger units of administration and hopefully increased efficiency. Mr. Gunter feels that the rapid changes of the past few years (regional assessment and county school boards are examples) will continue.

"It looks like another change in the near future," he predicted. "There are now 24 municipalities in the United Counties but planners have suggested that there should only be ..."

"A merger of Murray township, Brighton township and Brighton village has been discussed in county council," he revealed.

"I expect it will come and I wouldn't be surprised if it comes in a few years."

Murray township has 5,745 residents within its 50,000 square mile radius and Mr. Gunter has noticed that "as the township gets bigger there is less personal contact."

"And the demands of urban development for municipal services are different than those of farmers, particularly in the form of transportation and better road service." Angus said.

"The biggest effect on the township is its location on the edge of Trenton and the air base," he added. "People want a house and lot but like to live in the country where they have greater room."

"Urban development has spread here and will increase in shadows Murray," he predicted.

All municipalities grow larger and the workload increases, the trend is to separate the roles of clerk and treasurer.

Murray township is about to make this transition and council is now negotiating for a full time clerk to help Angus Gunter with the administrative work.

When a clerk is hired, Mr. Gunter will retain the position of treasurer and welfare officer.

He accepts this shift in venue and says "I welcome more help to get more of the work done."

But this was not always the case.

Before the new building went up, Mr. Gunter operated out of his home and regular council sessions were held in the village hall in Wooler.

Mr. Gunter quit farming to become the township's clerk-treasurer, but at 62 he remains very active in this field, maintaining a herd of 25 purebred Scottish shorthorns on his 50-acre farm.

Located two miles north-east of the municipal offices, the farm is a portion of the original Gunter family homestead, dating back to 1820.

The lives of Angus and Stella Gunter are centred in the community.

Mr. Gunter says, "generations before me lived here and it's home to me."

Turning from the Wooler road onto a concession road to reach the Gunter farm, one is suddenly made aware of the bond between Murray township and generations of the family.

Youth Theatre Series Begins on July 30

Belleville's experimental youth theatre is beginning to turn its wheels at a speedier velocity with its first series of plays slated for the end of July.

The theatre group was organized early in June and 65 to 80 young theatre enthusiasts made their way to St. Thomas' Parish Hall which houses the organization.

The first result of the young people's efforts will be exposed before Belleville audiences July 30, 31 and Aug. 1.

The production will consist of three modern one-act plays all of them theatre-in-the-round — the audience will be part of the set with exits and entrances being made along aisles within the audience.

The three plays have been chosen — Santa Claus, directed by Gordon Mitchell; The Apple Bit, directed by Lindsay Hallam; and Constantinople Smith, directed by Steve Hunter.

Santa Claus is described as an absurd play with the chief characters in it being Santa Claus and Death. In a nutshell, the plot exposes Santa Claus' early failure to give away understanding. Death suggests—that he sell knowledge. The rest of the play develops the theme that understanding must triumph over simple knowledge.

The Apple Bit is a sarcastic, but lighthearted look at matrimonial bliss in a hole in the garden of Eden. The plot surrounds the eating of the immortal apple and Adam's fear of God. Mary Katherine Tagnette portrays Eve.

Constantinople Smith is the story of a romantic idealist who finds his ideals shattered by reality. Stu Arnott plays Constantinople Smith, with Ann Wilson playing Christine and Bill Grover, Reality.

The productions will allow the audience an opportunity to discuss the plays with the cast after the presentations are performed. There will also be refreshments served.

There will be entertainment in between the plays and after the entire program.

Admission in the entire production is $1 for adults and 50 cents for students.

Tickets will be on sale at Rolu's, Zegouras' Variety Store, McKnight's Variety Store and Ed Thomas' Cigar Store.

No Decision On Satellite

Word of any federal cabinet move on deciding the builder of Canada's communication satellite was still awaited by Northern Electric officials in Belleville today.

Yesterday, for the second successive day the contract — which could mean a $5,250,000 work order for Northern Electric — was expected to be discussed in cabinet.

Today, however, a company official in Belleville said he had heard of no new developments from Ottawa.

"The contract wasn't raised (in cabinet) as far as I know," said A. F. G. Tooth, Northern Electric satellite program manager.

"I guess we must just be patient."

After Thursday's cabinet meeting ended without any announcement on the satellite contract, a government source said the cabinet is awaiting more information on the issue, which will take at least a week to arrive.

Also seeking the contract is RCA Ltd., of Montreal, aiming at a $35,000,000 target.

The City of Belleville has publicly reminded the government of the importance of a decision in favor of Northern Electric.

Thursday, Mayor Russell Scott sent a telegram to Communications Minister Eric Kierans expressing municipal concern and urging the minister's support for a Northern Electric work order.

Two Youths Injured

Two Belleville area youths were injured in a motorcycle accident last night on Dundas St. West adjacent to Albert College campus.

Taken to Belleville General Hospital were David Walsh, 17, of Point Anne and Kirk Genereux, 16, of R.R. 4, Belleville. Mr. Genereux was treated and released. Mr. Walsh was admitted with possible head injuries.

The accident occurred when a motorcycle driven by Mr. Walsh and carrying Mr. Genereux came into collision with the rear of a car driven by Beverly Landers of 187 Dundas Street West.

Roblin Lake Public Park Banned to Motor Vehicles

AMELIASBURG — The Township's Centennial Park with the public swimming beach on Roblin Lake is being put out of bounds to motor vehicle traffic in the coming week.

The decision is a result of an on - the - spot inspection of the park and the summer recreation, and tourist facilities there by the members of the Ameliasburg Community Centre Board.

Earlier this week Township Council asked the board to give serious consideration to Mrs. Walter Chaf's report on a series of complaints about powerboat operators perpetrating unpleasant conditions at the beach and nearby picnic area.

Chairman of the board, Arthur Corfield, said however, the proposal to ban all motors on Roblin Lake as a measure to ensure the safety of children swimming, was not being entertained by the board at this time.

"The board has no reason to inconvenience summer cottage residents although I strongly believe the horsepower of motors on boats using the lake should be reduced and regulated," said Mr. Corfield.

"It is the boats pulling water skiers that are causing most of the concern," he explained.

It is the intention of the community centre board to provide a turnabout and boat launching facility at the end of the access.

How Subversion Works

A phenomenon of our times, an extension perhaps of the Nazi propaganda machine perfected during the thirties by Dr. Goebbels, is the manipulation of facts by individuals or groups to suit their own ends.

It is the stickiness of myriad pressure groups, particularly those engaged in subversion and it works on the principle that white can be black and vice versa, and truth can be fiction and vice versa just so long as it suits the people involved.

The Winnipeg Free Press finds the practice at work amid the problems of Northern Ireland. "There is a well-established tactic at work here," it noted in a recent editorial. "It is very simple. Start violence from which the people cannot escape, and their bitterness when the fighting is over will be an asset when it starts again. That is what is happening now. The Catholic community on the Protestant side in Belfast is being manipulated by the 'Irish Republican Army,' a body of psychopaths who are outlawed in the North and the South."

The same process is at work on this continent. Consider the Black Panthers whose record of violence and dissemination of hate and practice of subversion has assumed dangerous proportions.

According to FBI director J. Edgar Hoover the Panthers receive substantial monetary contributions from prominent white liberals. With these funds, he says in his annual report, the Panthers "have been able to travel freely and make frequent public appearances at colleges, universities and even secondary schools. In this way, they are able to spread their doctrine of hate and revolution and further aggravate the volatile situation on our campuses."

Hoover says the Panthers are attempting "to picture the organization as an innocent victim of police and other official oppression." This of course is not borne out by the facts, since Panthers in Baltimore and New Haven are charged with two separate murders and other members in New York are awaiting trial in connection with a bomb plot.

It is the same with the Weathermen faction, of Students for a Democratic Society, which Hoover describes as "a principal force guiding the country's violence-prone young militants."

The public must beware, lest in its general apathy and gullibility it succumbs to a belief there is some credence in the nonsense put out by these people. The name of the game is subversion and you had better believe it.

Belfast Bomb

The Battle of the Boyne celebrations over, relatively peacefully, Northern Ireland nevertheless has a long way to go before order is restored, and even then the old underlying animosities will remain.

Meanwhile a bomb explosion is reported to have damaged the Northern Bank in High Street, Belfast. One of the country's leading fiscal establishments, with branches in both Ulster and the Irish republic, the bank has a branch in the area mentioned as the scene of head office farther along the street. Which one was hit is not specified but either could be almost predictable targets for anarchist groups like the outlawed Irish Republican Army.

Both are on a main thoroughfare close to the docks and the Albert Clock — a traditional New Year gathering place where until the present campaign of lawlessness erupted only the normal hoopla of a new year celebration occupied the police.

In the circumstances the larger banks should be the special concern of security forces. Police say the explosion was from a bomb planted inside the bank, an indication that the authorities were not on the alert for such a circumstance.

Reports of injuries vary, but as many as two dozen are said to have been hurt, mainly by flying glass. Certainly the security of other public buildings must now be a prime concern.

Canny Coco

Fashion designer Coco Chanel is playing it cool. She will be showing her fall and winter lines next week but is giving nothing away of their latest style. Only such canny observations as this: "I am the enemy of eccentricity, and I am most depressed at the way people look . . . Don't the women realize their first duty is to remain feminine and please men? And not try to look 20 when they are 60? Or like a long-haired kid? Why do they do it?" As for the men, the designer says they "are just as bad." Long-haired hippies she says she would "send packing!"

Self-interest Now the Watchword

P.M. Clips Canada's Handmaiden Role Overseas

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — There is more to Prime Minister Trudeau's downgrading of the over-indulged diplomats and the bringing back in force of the high-flying Department of External Affairs than appears, at first casual glance, in the Government's White Paper on Foreign Policy.

You have to read between the lines of the fine print to get the real meaning of the message.

Basically, it is this:

Usually unrealistic and largely unproductive do-gooding and world-saving is on the way out — and some practical self-interest and pragmatic what - is - in - it - for - us is coming in.

And almost nothing so marks the end of the Lester Pearson era and the beginning of the age of Pierre Elliott Trudeau as this abrupt 180 degree change of Canadian foreign policy direction.

The new Prime Minister has let the last air out of that overinflated balloon of national illusion that Canada has a special mission as an international physician binding up the wounds of the world.

Ever since World War II, successive Canadian governments have rushed first-aid teams from External Affairs to the scene of international collisions and conflicts.

At a cost of still - to - be - accounted hundreds of millions of tax dollars, what did it accomplish?

Great things for Lester Pearson. A Nobel Peace Prize with its $50,000 cash reward. Personal acclaim. Leadership of the LIberal Party. Finally, the greatest Canadian prize of all, the prime ministership.

But for Canada?

We built an airport in Colombo, as aerial Taj Mahal far grander than Toronto, Montreal or Vancouver international — and Ceylon has turned its back on the democratic West, including Canada, to embrace Red China.

We provided Tanzania with military equipment and training, and for our time, trouble and expense have been unceremoniously booted out and the red carpet rolled out for the Chinese.

We have assigned peace-keeping forces and spent more millions in the Middle East, Cyprus and the Congo, and settled nothing.

And those are only starting entries in a long and continuing catalogue of frustration and failure.

Why did we become involved?

Senator Grattan O'Leary, long-time editor of The Ottawa Journal, put it this way:

"It came about through carefully-cultivated phony national pride. We attempted to take on troubles all over the world, and while it may speak well of our good heart and intentions, it betrays our lack of realism and good sense.

"It is all very well to send our troops, our peace-keepers and our bureaucratic missionaries here, there and everywhere we think duty calls — but it serves only to minister to the costly vanity of certain self-servers who strut their little hour of phony glory in the field of External Affairs.

"This is not a large nation. We are not a big power, not even a middle power — and it is utter nonsense for us to be undertaking these obligations for the deification of the self - acclaimed East Block elite."

It was all so gloriously magic-making for the brahmins of External Affairs. With Lester Pearson in charge, first as deputy, then as Minister of External, and finally as PM, the Department hoarded its budget lavishly over his years, and to be a diplomat was to be a VIP with status like no other in the Capital.

Now, Prime Minister Trudeau has brought down the curtain with a crash on the Golden Era of External Affairs.

The budget is cut. There are staff layoffs. Missions abroad are closing.

Departmental cons are being told to take off their striped pants and put on the bushes suits of salesmen.

The big sheriff in the diplomatic downgrading has come in the Middle East. Only three years ago with Pearson on the stage and Trudeau in the wings, Canada would have been rushing around looking for some role as peace-keeper between the Israelis and the Arabs hoping for an encore of the short - lived glory of the Suez crisis. Now we are keeping well out of it.

The White Paper on Foreign Policy emphasized trade and economic growth. Or, as the document bluntly puts it: "How best to serve Canadian interests."

This comes through loud and clear in the White Paper's put-down of both the official and unofficial do-gooders and world-savers inside and outside External Affairs.

They have been clamoring for Canadian crackdowns in the form of tighter trade sanctions and other economically self - sacrificing restrictions and discriminatory practices against South Africa and Rhodesia.

The White Paper answers them: "Canadian interests will best be served by maintaining current policy balancing two themes of importance to Canada." Which means that Canada will continue trading well with South Africa and Rhodesia while deploring racial apartheid we literally here at home against Indians and Zimbabwe.

Now as the do-gooders demand, will we end our defence alliance with Greece or Portugal, much less punish ourselves economically with trade restrictions, simply because those two NATO powers are less democratic than the world-savers think they have any right to be.

Live and let live seems to be the theme of the White Paper. And what a refreshing amnesia-making change of foreign policy pace from that of playing the International Missionary.

Tiger Country

Australia has its aborigines — a racial strain unique to that island continent — and Tasmania, the mini island state to the south, not to be outdone, lays claim to this phenomenon of the animal world. For long believed extinct, some specimens of the Tasmanian Tiger, or marsupial wolf, are believed to have survived, not only in the rugged mountain country of western Tasmania but on the mainland as well. This photograph of a tiger in captivity was taken at Hobart soo about 1933 and is one of the few in existence showing the animal alive. Its ancestors came to Australia over the then existing land bridges more than 100,000,000 years ago.

Public Still the Loser

Post Office, Strikes and Lockouts

The Globe and Mail

The national joke we insist on calling a postal service becomes more incredible every day.

The Government and the postal unions have been playing their little games for more than a month now, and no end is in sight. The rotating strikes, the unions' running guerrilla raids have caused tremendous disruptions, with the public the consequence that taxpayers are paying for a service which they are not receiving. The costs of the disruption could push the Post Office's projected deficit another $40 - million higher than the already staggering $70 - million estimate. The taxpayers, who are not and have never been considered by bargainers on either side of the table, will of course pay for that too.

How the Government has introduced the regional lockout to match the regional strike. It has shut down postal services in Quebec and Ontario ostensibly by locking out more than a thousand men. So in the next few weeks, should there be a lockout in the state of postal service in this country, we will have to consult two lists — one naming the centres where the unions have struck and the other telling us where the Government has locked them out.

The move is only the latest example of the ineptitude which has characterized the Government's handling of the postal situation. From the outset it has mauled the collective bargaining process, publicly proclaiming that it would not improve its offer of a little over 5 per cent a year in a 36-month contract.

Eric Kierans, the Postmaster-General, pontificated last month that his Government would never destroy the union by legislation. But he obviously doesn't think much of their right to bargain when his Government applies a ceiling beyond which its negotiators cannot go. Ottawa now has only two alternatives: to shut down the Post Office completely in what would be a national lockout or to legislate the men back to work.

This business of fighting union fire with Government fire is conducive to the rights of the third, silent party, the Canadian people.

The Czech Tragedy And Imperialism Soviet-Style

Norman Smith in
The Ottawa Journal

Czechoslovakia is a country of people who have every reason to be sad — and are sad; it is a people whose nature is to be cheerful — and they are trying; it is a people whose future for the next decade or more is not in their own hands — and they know it.

Czechoslovakia is a country whose plight should make us long beware of Russians bearing gifts or noble words. Czechoslovakia proved in 1968 that between might and right the Kremlin has no difficulty choosing. Czechoslovakia and what has happened to Dubcek should remind some of the starry-eyed here that the Soviet Union is not the world that Russian Imperialism is just that and not the benevolent comrade for the Brotherhood of Man.

Seatbelts Cut Road Toll Particularly Under 60 MPH

The Christian Science Monitor

Some remarkable statistics were reported recently by the director of the National Highway Safety Bureau of the Department of Transportation.

At speeds below 60 miles per hour, no one wearing a lap and shoulder belt has been killed in an auto accident. And below 30 miles an hour, no one wearing a lap belt was driving a car with a collapsible steering wheel has been killed.

Even allowing that persons who think to fasten their safety gear are probably less likely to get into an accident in the first place, this appears to be further dramatic evidence of the effectiveness of such gear. It bears out a study made several years ago by Volvo in Sweden. That automaker found no deaths at under-60 speeds belts and harnesses were worn.

These findings are helpful. They point to the fact that something can be done about the awful toll in lives on the world's highways.

Of course, more still can be done. We have not in mind, simply, more, mechanical protection devices, such as impact-inflated bags that are being developed. Though these may be useful. We're thinking: about progress against mental failures — inalertness, aggressiveness, or resort to alcohol. (The latter alone contributes to more than half of all auto deaths.) Progress is possible against these no less than against mechanical failures. And not until such progress is made will our roads be fully safe.

Parties...Permissiveness

The Way It Is With Some Kids and Parents

Letter to Globe and Mail
Toronto Column

When our kids were small we thought, they'd never be old enough to do without a baby sitter. We counted the days until our oldest would be 13 so we could go out to a movie without the fuss of arranging for picking up the paying and taking home a sitter.

Now our children are 15 and 14 and I worry more about leaving them alone in the house than I did when they were younger. They are out with friends-agers. In our area there are quite a few whose parents don't give a second thought. They cruise around looking for parties nearly every night of the week and on weekends the big deal is to find a house where the parents are out and bring in gangs of kids to have a party.

The kids whose house has been picked haven't got a chance. They push in past the host, help themselves to what they aren't allowed to have around in the parents' absence. Some of them are glad to see the friends coming and encourage the whole thing. Some are quite frightened of what might happen.

Recently two ages don't care how they behave when the adults are out and sometimes they have the nerve to raid the parents' liquor supply. I have heard that they have pot parties and God knows what else — completely taking over the house.

I know of one couple who went to Florida and left their teenage son alone. He invited in all his friends to stay for an Australian Girls and boys together set up a house party that lasted for weeks. I don't know what happened when the parents got back, but I hear the boy is attending and living with a previous girl. The parents have simply opted out on their responsibility. It is no wonder kids are dropping out of society with such lousy parents as models.

Our two, a boy and a girl, are good kids really and fortunately have the knack of turned over to one of these gangs. Still, I am frightened by what we have to face such a situation some night when we're out.

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — The religious leaders of this proudly Islamic nation are on the warpath—against communism, co-eds, miniskirts and other symptoms of Afghanistan's entry into the 20th century.

Their wrath recently prompted marches, violent demonstrations and retaliation from the Afghan army. At least two persons were killed in clashes between the militants and preachers, and students in Kabul.

The religious uproar was the most defiant reaction to Afghanistan's steps toward modernization since King Mohammed Zahir Shah gave his country a fairly democratic constitution in 1965.

The constitution proclaimed, among other basic rights, that "torturing a human being is not permissible"—although Islamic law sanctions fairly cruel punishments. But the mullahs feel that the nation never does has been going from the Holy Koran to Peyton Place.

"Even in the United States, most people are against miniskirts," asserted Sigbatullah Mowlaqeel, a militant mullah and leader of the anti-modern movement.

Sigbatullah—his name means "colored by faith" — spent three months in the U.S. in 1963.

"When a man is excited when he sees this dress, it must bring adultery," the 43-year-old mullah said in an interview. "Marriage is the best answer to the miniskirt."

"Nothing must touch our faith," he emphasized. "So it must be with communism. In communism comes to Afghanistan, nothing will be left to the people."

Protesting mullahs also sought a ban on Afghan women baring their limbs and an end to co-education at Kabul University. Here, Hema fell and dancing couples at the chic 25 Hour Club went underground. The army was called in to quell protesters who burned movie theatres and attacked girls' schools.

Catholic Colleges Advised To Define Their Identities

TORONTO (CP) — Roman Catholic colleges and universities have been urged to define their own identities and determine what kind of institutions they really are.

A commission of inquiry into 40 Roman Catholic colleges and universities said in a recent report that the traditional expression "church-related" no longer is an adequate description of these colleges and universities.

The report says that few of the 40 institutions, representing an enrolment of about 18,000 across the country, had received significant financial assistance from the Roman Catholic Church.

Also, less than half considered that the institution's president be a priest, and only 22 specify that he should be a member of the Roman Catholic Church.

The commission says it was unable to find a single instance of a faculty member feeling that his freedom was restricted unduly as a result of the institution being officially Roman Catholic.

It strongly recommended the establishment of independent boards of governors to administer Roman Catholic colleges and universities.

Representation on these boards should not only include the diocese religious order, but the faculty, the students, the alumni and the constituency the institution serves, the report says.

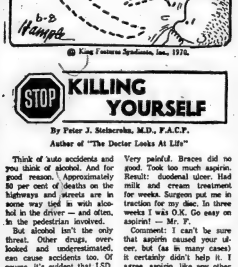
Four Injured In Accident

PICTON (Staff) — Four Prince Edward County men were treated at Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital Thursday night following a one car collision on Waupoos Road.

A spokesman for the Ontario Provincial Police said today that the car driven by Stanley Jeffery, 20, Picton, apparently went out of control while travelling on County Road Eight.

Jeffery escaped unhurt, but his four passengers were treated and released from hospital following treatment.

Injured were Gary Storms, 20, RR 1, Cherry Valley, Peter Guernsey, 19, RR 3, Picton, Robert Stelter, 19, Picton, and Carman Brown, Milford.



Damage to the car was estimated by the OPP to be $600.

Bomb-making Instructions Easy to Obtain

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senators investigating the recent wave of politically-motivated bombings in the United States have been told that bomb-making instructions are circulating widely, even in junior high schools.

The chief of New York City's police bomb squad told senators Thursday bomb-making plans appear in underground newspapers, magazines and leaflets distributed throughout the city, especially among college, high school and, recently, junior high school students.

Children's Letters To God

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Think of auto accidents and you think of alcohol. And for good reason. Approximately 50 per cent of deaths on the highways and streets are in some way tied in with alcohol in the driver — and often, in the pedestrian involved.

But alcohol isn't the only threat. Other drugs, overlooked and underestimated, can cause accidents too. Of course, it's evident that LSD, marijuana, amphetamines and heroin users are unstable and dangerous drivers.

But millions of us who take tranquillizers, sedatives, and antihistamines may not be aware that potential danger is around the corner when we get behind the wheel of a car.

Perhaps we doctors should keep on warning you more often. When you take drugs that act on your brain it is inevitable that they slow your reflexes, sometimes to the point of making you drowsy and actually causing you to fall asleep as you drive.

Consider this, then, another such warning. If you are about to drive review your medicine intake: how much have you taken? When did you take it last? Has it worn off sufficiently so that you are alert enough to guide your machine through traffic?

Another reason for highway accidents is drivers who suffer from sleep apnea (an inability to stay awake without frequently falling off to sleep.) In a recent study nine drivers per cent of patients with narcolepsy reported actually fell asleep while driving.

It is evident that the sleepy driver is as much of a threat (if not more) to, himself and others than the alcoholic. We keep warning you not to drink; it's time we kept warning you not to drive when sleepy.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I had a slipped disc for four months. Very painful. Braces did no good. Took too much aspirin. Result: duodenal ulcer. Had milk and cream treatment for weeks. Surgeon put me in traction for my disc. In three weeks I was O.K. Go easy on aspirin! — Mr. F.

Comment: I can't be sure that aspirin caused your ulcer, but (as in many cases) it certainly didn't help it. I agree, aspirin, like any other drug, should be treated with respect.

However, I do not go along with those who say aspirin is too dangerous for anybody to take. Remember that it helps millions, even though other thousands can't take it because (in them) it may cause bleeding or otherwise aggravate an existing ulcer.

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Wish you would let me know if you have any definite medical proof that anybody died from cigarettes. I have fulfilled my smoking problem very carefully. I feel that it is another mucker's campaign just like the prohibition business years ago.

I think that the cause of lung cancer is air pollution. Cigarettes have nothing to do with it. I have smoked everything that burnt for 50 years, and now at 79 I haven't got cancer. Cancer. Just be honest with the American people and don't try to hoodwink them. — Mr. W.

Comment: I'm looking for the exception that proves the rule. You're it. Congratulations! Ask heavy smokers who have developed chronic bronchitis, cancer or arterial disease. Better still, examine the lungs of a smoker.

I'm trying to be honest with you. So much so that I'm not even asking you to stop smoking. I rarely advise a change of habits (good or bad) in anyone who has reached or passed the Biblical quota of years. (But - please don't preach your philosophy to your grandchildren.)

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — The religious leaders of this proudly Islamic nation are on the warpath—against communism, co-eds, miniskirts and other symptoms of Afghanistan's entry into the 20th century.

Their wrath recently prompted marches, violent demonstrations and retaliatory from the Afghan army. At least two persons were killed in clashes between the mullahs, or preachers, and students in Kabul.

The religious uproar was the most defiant reaction to Afghanistan's steps toward modernization since King Mohammed Zahir Shah gave his country a fairly democratic constitution in 1963.

The constitution proclaimed among other basic rights, that of "torturing a human being is not permissible"—although Islamic law sanctions fairly cruel punishments. But the mullahs feel that the nation ever since has been going from the Holy Koran to Peyton Place.

"Even in the United States, most people are against miniskirts," asserted Sighatullah Mojadedi, a millionaire mullah and leader of the anti-modern movement. Sighatullah—his name means "colored by faith"—spent three months in the U.S. in 1968.

"When a man is excited when he sees this dress, it must bring adultery," the 45-year-old mullah said in an interview. "Marriage is the best answer to the mullahist."

"Nothing must touch our faith," he emphasized. "So it must be with communism: if communism comes to Afghanistan, nothing will be let to the people."

Protesting mullahs also sought a ban on Afghan women baring their limbs and an end to co-education at Kabul University. Hems fell and dancing couples at the chic 25 Hour Club went underground. The army was called in to quell protestors who burned movie theatres and attacked girls' schools.

Catholic Colleges Advised To Define Their Identities

TORONTO (CP) — Roman Catholic colleges and universities have been urged to define their own identities and determine what kind of institutions they really are.

A commission of inquiry into Roman Catholic colleges and universities said in a recent report that the traditional expression "church-related" no longer is an adequate description of these colleges and universities.

The report says that few of the 40 institutions, representing a student enrolment of about 18,000 across the country, had received significant financial assistance from the Roman Catholic Church.

Also, less than half require that the institution's president be a priest, and only 32 specify that he should be a member of the Roman Catholic Church.

The commission says it was unable to find a single instance of a faculty member feeling that his freedom was restricted unduly as a result of the institution being officially Roman Catholic.

It strongly recommended the establishment of independent boards of governors to administer Roman Catholic colleges and universities.

Representation on these boards should not only include the diocese religious order, but the faculty, the students, the alumni and the constituency the institution serves, the report says.

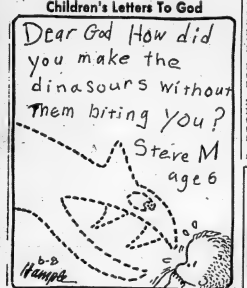
Four Injured In Accident

PICTON (Staff) — Four Prince Edward County men were treated at Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital Thursday night following a one car collision on Waupoos Road.

A spokesman for the Ontario Provincial Police said today that the car driven by Stanley Jeffery, 20, Picton, apparently went out of control while travelling on County Road Eight.

Jeffery escaped unhurt, but his four passengers were treated and released from hospital following treatment.

Injured were Gary Storms, 20, RR 1, Cherry Valley, Peter Gowsney, 19, RR 3, Picton, Robert Shelley, 19, Picton, and Carman Brown, Milford.



Damage to the car was estimated by the OPP to be $600.

Bomb-making Instructions Easy to Obtain

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senators investigating the recent wave of politically-motivated bombings in the United States have been told that bomb-making instructions are circulating widely, even in junior high schools.

The chief of New York City's police bomb squad told senators Thursday bomb-making plans appear in underground newspapers, magazines and leaflets distributed throughout the city, especially among college, high school and, recently, junior high school students.

Children's Letters To God

KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Think of auto accidents and you think of alcohol. And for good reason. Approximately 50 per cent of deaths on the highways and streets are in some way tied in with alcohol in the driver — and often, in the pedestrian involved.

But alcohol isn't the only threat. Other drugs, overlooked and underestimated, can cause accidents too. Of course, it's evident that LSD, marijuana, amphetamine and heroin users are unstable and dangerous drivers.

But millions of us who take tranquilizers, sedatives, and antihistamines may not be aware that pictorial danger is around the corner when we get be'ind the wheel of a car.

Perhaps we doctors should keep on warning you more often. When you take drugs that act on your brain it is inevitable that they slow your your reflexes, sometimes to the point of making you drowsy and actually causing you to fall asleep as you drive.

Consider this, then, another such warning. If you are about to drive review your medicine intake: how much have you taken? When did you take it last? Has it worn off sufficiently so that you are alert enough to guide your machine through traffic?

Another reason for highway accidents is drivers who suffer from narcolepsy. (An inability to stay awake without frequently falling off to sleep.) In a recent study about 80 per cent of patients with narcolepsy reported actually falling asleep while driving.

It is evident that the sleepy driver is as much of a threat (if not more) to himself and others than the alcoholic. We keep warning you not to drink; it's time we kept warning you not to drive when sleepy.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I had a slipped disc for four months. Very painful. Braces did no good. Took too much aspirin. Result: duodenal ulcer. Had milk and cream treatment for weeks. Surgeon put me in traction for my disc. In three weeks I was O.K. So easy on aspirin! — Mr. F.

Comment: I can't be sure that aspirin caused your ulcer, but (as in many cases) it certainly didn't help it. I agree, aspirin, like any other drug, should be treated with respect.

However, I do not go along with those who say aspirin is too dangerous for anybody to take. Remember that it helps millions, even though other thousands can't take it because (in them) it may cause bleeding or otherwise aggravate an existing ulcer.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Wish you would let me know if you have any definite medical proof that anybody died from cigarettes. I have following a smoking problem very carefully. I feel that it is another smoker's campaign just like the prohibition business years ago.

I think that the cause of lung cancer is air pollution. Cigarettes have nothing to do with it. I have smoked everything that burnt for 50 years, and now at 79 I haven't got lung cancer. Just be honest with the American people and don't try to hoodwink them. — Mr. W.

Looking for the exception that proves the rule. You're it, fortunately. Proof? Ask heavy smokers who have developed emphysema, cancer or arterial disease. Better still, examine the lungs of a smoker.

I'm trying to be honest with you. So much so that I'm not even asking you to stop smoking. I rarely advise a change of habits (good or bad) in anyone who has reached or passed the Biblical quota of years. (But please don't preach your philosophy to your grandchildren.)

The wedding will take place on Saturday, September 5, 1970 at 3 p.m. in Mount Pleasant United Church. New Book Published On Birth Control

LONDON (CP) — The contraceptive pill which has revolutionized birth control and changed the course of society in the 1960s may give way in the future to more-traditional methods, says a new book published here.

Author Paul Vaughan, formerly chief council for the British Medical Association, governing body of British doctors, says The Pill On Trial that, although 18,000,000 women now take the pill daily throughout the world and it has been proved the most effective and reliable contraceptive, its future outlook seems "darker."

Vaughan says steroid contraception is likely to remain a fact of 20th century life for some time, but adds: "It is a fact that will become increasingly difficult to live with, as women continue to take their chance with the pill with a greater feeling of unease."

He suggests that uncertainty about side effects and possible long-term effects of oral contraceptives may lead to a swing back towards intra-uterine devices, sterilization operations and, "unless someone turns up with something better, a social return to the cap and the condom."

It would be ironical, he says, if after years of advanced research, "we are left with nothing much better than the contraceptive Casanova used."

But he notes that one answer may lie in a device known as the C-film, now on sale in Hungary. Described in the journal World Medicine as "the first hi-and-hers contraceptive," it consists of a small square of thin, flexible film treated with a sperm-killing chemical — one for a small woman can use it.

C-films now are on trial in 19 other countries, including Britain. Vaughan says that so far no side effects have been reported and its efficiency seems as high as that of some oral contraceptives. It is also simple to use.

Vaughan, whose researches involved interviews on both sides of the Atlantic with doctors, chemists, social workers, government officials and users of the pill, displays no medical or religious bias against oral contraceptives.

No Longer Lonely

PERTH, Australia (AP) — Kristine Sobieszczanska, 21, moved to Australia five months ago to join her immigrant parents. Life on the farm was dull, so she hung a sign on the front gate reading: "Nice girl wants to get married." She and her family now are weighing the merits of 200 suitors.

'COPPED OUT'

MONTREAL (CP) — Soel Moss, a graduate of social work at McGill University, said there is a gap between the practice of social work and reality. "Social work is aloof from the very battle . . . it started. What the critical social workers did was pick & beef with society on some very basic grounds; and, when the beefs became a fight about the begging became demands, they backed off and copped out."

Married and the father of four children, he has traced the pill's history from the first discovery of synthetic progesterone in the Mexican wild yam to its effect on modern social life and the controversy which has split the Roman Catholic Church. He carefully outlines factors for and against the pill, including the debate over possible concentration with cancer and thrombosis.

Vaughan points out that one difficulty in nailing down cause and effect with pill users is that many doctors, in Britain at least, tend to prescribe up to a year's supply of pills and don't follow up developments.

He quotes one London general practitioner as saying:

"There's no doubt at all that some doctors haven't the vaguest idea what happens to their patients who take the pill, for the simple reason that once they've given the prescription, they never see them."

Often, too, there is no examination of the patient. One member of four family practices on a survey in 1968 that she had been put on the pill without a blood pressure test even though she already had suffered one thrombosis.

Vaughan's book makes no attempt to persuade women either way on the merits of the pill, which incidentally has proved one of the biggest money earners in the history of the pharmaceutical industry. His assembly of well-documented facts and medical opinions is designed to provide a comprehensive background against which readers can make up their own minds.

PAPER DOLLS AND SUCH

"Little would appear to be recorded about the minor arts associated with paper." — Geoffrey Wills.

* * *

Over at a friend's house this morning we were shown, what she called her "paper treasures"; rows of paper dolls, "my uncle used to entertain us children by the hour cutting things like these with just a pair of scissors and a piece of newspaper. I'm glad I've kept them, for such cut outs seem rare nowadays."

From the same box in which she had these she took out a black silhouette of a lady's profile mounted on white cardboard, "It's me, before I'm not, done one time at the Plaza in the Persian Room when visiting friends in New York. A young lady with a pair of scissors and a piece of black paper cut out your profile as you sat, chatting and gossiping, it presented it to you — as a complimentary gesture of the house of your companions, I don't remember which; but it brings back memories . . .

"One sees little of this art in this mass production of thing; it seems an art of the past."

"Yes, true enough. There is not much about the art, even in books. Examples are few, for the work is so perishable. Last month when I was in England, being interested, I did a little research, and found this entry in a lady's diary, dated November 17th which read:

"We went one morning to town and saw the new artificial flower garden,' a pretty invention, worth seeing once, all kinds of flowers being cut out into beds of earth and box edging, sand walks between. So you see, they had artificial flowers — even then!

"Another entry I read was recorded some years later by a Mr. W. Hone, about the work of a blind man with a sheet of plain writing paper.

"By a motion of his hand he changed it into various forms. 'Here,' said he, 'is a garden chair for your seat in this is a flight of stairs to your chamber, here is a flow-

Educational System Revamped

BONN (Reuters) — West Germany plans to revamp its education system by doubling the number of university students by 1980 and uprooting the elite academic structure it established here after the war.

In a report now before parliament, Science and Education Minister Hans Leussink proposes the first long-term education program ever prepared at the federal level in West Germany, whose school system lags far behind those of most industrial nations.

Leussink envisages a fourfold increase in education expenditures, modernization of the curricula, student participation in administration, and comprehensive secondary schools and universities.

As in many countries, the federal government can only contribute to education if the individual states permit it. Therefore Leussink must convince the education authorities in 11 regions before the program can be implemented.

He regards his program as a foundation for discussion and hopes a detailed plan can be formulated within a year.

The plan calls for an increase in the numbers of university and technical college students from the present 482,000 to 1,000,000 by 1980.

The country's present education budget is about 20,000,000,000 marks ($5,400,000,000), but this will have to increase at least fivefold by 1980.

Kindergarten and pre-school classes are expected to double from 1,000,000 to 2,000,000 in the next 10 years, and 86 per cent of the school-age population is expected to remain at school for 9 to 13 years.

Yet despite West Germany's ambitious 1980 aims, the United States, Japan, Norway and Sweden have passed these quantitative goals by this year, according to the state secretary for education, Hildegard Hamm Brucher.

More embarrassing still is the fact that 18 per cent of young people in East Germany stay at school for 10 years compared with only about a third in West Germany. And despite its economic and construction boom, West Germany spends only 4.2 per cent of its gross national product on education, compared with 5.7 in France, 6.4 in Britain and about seven per cent in the U.S. and the Soviet Union.

Only 10 per cent of West German students receive a professional or university education after the age of 18, compared with 17 per cent in France, 30 per cent in Britain, and 40 per cent in the U.S.

Leussink's program of reorganization calls for the abolition of the death knell for the rigidly academic old-style university, and the creation of comprehensary schools into comprehensive schools—thus ending the individual chains of academic high schools—standardizing university entrance tests, and upgrading teaching and engineering colleges to university level, so that they can award internationally recognized degrees.

University students, whose early demonstrations are acknowledged to have helped build the reforms, have characterized them as "too little, too late." One Berlin student said: "We are afraid they are just streamlining the feudal system to keep up with industry's demands."

The German Students' Association, in a statement on the program, accused the government of attempting to raise income taxes rather than financing it by corporation taxes or defence budget cuts.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Wellman Mark Golden Anniversary

Approximately 200 guests greeted Mr. and Mrs. George E. Wellman at Westminster United Church hall, recently when they marked the occasion of their golden wedding anniversary.

The "Open House" was arranged by Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe Garrison who were assisted in the serving by Mrs. Gilbert Sills, Mrs. Byron Harder, Mrs. Mac Nobes and Mrs. Louella Christie.

Mr. and Mrs. Wellman were married June 30, 1920 in St. Mary's Church by Rev. A. C. Hie. Mrs. Wellman is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Embury. The couple moved to Belleville when they were married and have resided in this area all their lives. Mr. Wellman owned and operated a farm and later a grocery business for a number of years. He is now retired.

Along with numerous gifts from family and friends the usual governmental congratulations were received as well as a plaque from the Ontario Government.

The hall was beautifully decorated for the occasion with the attractive tea table centred with a three - tier anniversary cake enhanced with golden decor. This in turn was flanked with gold candles in matching colored holders and vases with golden shade roses.

Throughout the afternoon tea and coffee were poured by three sisters of the "bridegroom". Mrs. Nellie Greenwood, Mrs. Maude Ray and Miss Estell Wellman and two sisters of the "bride" Mrs. Emma Moore and Mrs. Edna Francis.

At the supper hour a buffet meal was enjoyed by approximately 50 members of the family and close friends.

Ridicule Damages Children's Egos

By DORIS CLARK

In a discussion group, parents were talking about ways in which to impress their children about what is right and wrong. The idea was expressed that ridicule accomplishes a lot in getting principles across.

I don't like the idea. Ridicule may prevent a child from doing something wrong, but the belittling effect on his personality does worse damage — perhaps unseen at the time.

Making fun of people just isn't fun. Anything that can make another person feel like two cents ought to be banned from civilized behavior. Laughing care, a constant build-up mated with firm but kind controls — these are the tickets, in my book.

„Dear Doris: My sister is 11 years older than I am and she discourages any invitations I get to go out. I am 19, and share an apartment with her.

The trouble with her is that the one date she had years ago turned out worse than terrible. So she sits around feeling depressed because she is getting older, doesn't date, isn't married, etc. It gets hard on the ears having to listen to the same story until 3.00 a.m. repeatedly.

I want to get her into the habit of meeting people but how could this be done? Would it be all right to invite a mixed group around her age?

I know single professional guys around 30, but these fellows cannot be thrown at her or she will crawl into her shell, pretending she is stuck up. Furthermore, the fellows won't allow themselves to be pitched around like footballs. — Unclaimed Treasures.

Dear Treasures: Go ahead. Invite them. That guilt feeling that a younger sister gets when she comes home from a happy evening and discovers an older sister in the depths of despair — it just shouldn't happen!

The only sure way to begin to be a person who enjoys people is to practise at being what they are.

When you get a date, accept it. Don't be too choosy. Someone who seems bo-bum may turn into fab after a while.

To do this you may have to defy your sister. Do so. Her way will get you nowhere. You can win her over.

Dear Doris: I feel like being melodramatic and printing a placard: "Housecleaners Beware!"

Some year ago I read a fascinating book — I think it was called "Fortune in the Trash Can." telling about all the things one might find in an attic that were literally treasures. Never thought it would happen to me — but it has.

In the bookcase of a long dead uncle were two petite volumes. One, beautifully bound in green and embossed in gold, was a century - old pictorial history of one city's commercial firms. My friend who knows about books sold it for $100. The second was a folio — the title of which I must not state — printed in 1692. That brought me $400.

These days you daren't even throw out an old shoe without wondering if the sole has a secret. Search your attics, girls. Even a quart preserve jar is worth dollars if it has a beaver or a crown on it! — Now I'm a Rich Rat.

Dear Rat: It's true. Even so - called white elephants often hold unsuspected charms — for some ardent collector.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Slightly Different Sweet Tomato Aspic

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION: I wondered if you had a copy for a tomato aspic which is slightly different from others I have tasted. This one is made with a lemon jelly powder, tomato juice and in some way has some amount of cream cheese blended in it. Enough cheese to make it very smooth in flavor and to cut the tang of the tomato juice . . . when I tried experimenting on my own I had trouble getting the cream cheese to dissolve without leaving a granular substance. Any suggestions? — Barbara B.

ANSWER: Yes, I know how to make it but never serve it.

SWEET TOMATO ASPIC
1 3-oz. package lemon jelly powder
1 cup boiling water
1 3 oz. package plain white or relish cream cheese (room temperature)
1 tbsp. horseradish
½ tsp. salt

In a bowl pour boiling water over jelly powder and stir until dissolved. Chill until it begins to congeal. Put horseradish in measuring cup and fill to brim with tomato juice. In beater bowl beat cheese until creamy then slowly add ¼ cup of the tomato juice beating until blended, scraping down sides of beater bowl. Add remaining tomato juice as you beat and the salt. Scrape down sides of bowl and chill. When lemon jelly is partially set add it to the tomato - cheese mixture and beat until thoroughly blended, scraping down sides of bowl. Pour into three ½ cup moulds or individual moulds to chill until set. To turn out, lower mould into pan full of hot tap water and count to seven or eight steadily. Invert serving plate over it and turn over and out.

Home Dough Boxes Simulate Cradle on Stilts

Most dough boxes made in Canada are pine. Some are simple boxes with a flat bottom which fits on a table. Fifty - six pounds of rising dough are difficult to manipulate and must have a base for support. The height made it easier to knead the dough. The box had to be moveable to place it somewhere in the kitchen which was warm, yet out of a draft.

Picture Credit: Upper Canada Village

Dough box lids fit loosely. They are sometimes used for kneading dough and may have one side painted. Most have sides that slope which made it easier to knead. The inside is smooth - planed and unfinished. Years of bread making fill the surface cracks and develop a smooth interior finish not unlike that obtained by cornstarch furniture finish fillers today.

Dough boxes must be watertight and therefore the sides are made from single planks dovetailed to fit together closely. The average box is about 3 feet long by a foot deep and about 18 inches wide, set on a truss base or legs.

Examples from French Canada are frequently beautifully finished. They were mentioned in old records at the beginning of the colonization of Quebec. The earliest and best examples are on handsome table bases with turned legs. Later examples have shaped legs, panelled sides and fancy decorative trim.

American examples are often elaborate with overhanging ends that can be used as handles to move the box. Pine is the commonest wood for dough boxes but they also come in maple and less frequently in walnut and butternut.

Prints range from $45.00 up with every expectation that like the dough box box once contained, the price will rise.

Points for Parents

Mother: "I have to keep the water heater turned high so I'll have hot water for the diapers, but I'm always afraid Jenny will turn on the faucets in the bathtub and get burned."

Turn the water heater down so water will not be scalding hot. If you need hotter water for laundry or household chores, turn the heater up temporarily but don't leave it that way.

May Be Danger Opening Golf Balls

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Please tell the parents who read your column to warn their children against cutting open golf balls to see what's inside. A child in our neighborhood did a little "investigating" yesterday and he was horribly injured. I don't want to go into detail but the boy will never look the same.

Kids don't realize that the centre of the ball sometimes contains sulphuric acid as well as zinc sulfide and other materials which can be harmful. .

ANN LANDERS

DEAR LAF: I'm passing it. And now I hope millions of parents will mention this to their small fry — especially the bright ones with inquisitive minds.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: It happened again Wednesday and I decided this time I would sit down and write to Ann Landers. My husband and I attended the funeral of a dear friend. She was in her 60's and had been ailing for quite some time. As we stood in a small group outside the funeral chapel several neighbors and acquaintances exchanged small pleasantries, mostly about what a wonderful woman she was — how many acts of kindness she had performed for others. Repeatedly we heard this sentiment expressed: "I was going to see her tomorrow . . . "If I had known she was so sick I surely would have gone to see her . . . ."

When will people realize that tomorrow is promised is no one? Why must sorrow come before we realize the transitory nature of life? Why can't we try to be kind to ease someone's burden? Those of us who are well and able to do for others should stop for just a moment and think "I am fortunate. What can I do for someone who is not so lucky?"

I'll bet if you print this letter almost everybody who reads it will wonder if he is the guilty one. Sincerely, — A FRIEND

DEAR FRIEND: Here's your letter — and those readers who find that the shoe fits, I hope they put on a pair and walk over to see someone they've been meaning to visit. — one of these days."

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I married a man four years ago. It was my first marriage, his second. He gained custody of his son who was then eight years of age. Buddy is now 12.

Three weeks ago my husband died of a heart attack. It was a terrible shock. He had never been ill. Buddy was very close to my dad and I was counted sick that he would go, too. He surprised us all by being the most stoic one in the family.

Last night Buddy came to my bedroom about 11:30 p.m. He was missing his dad and wanted to sleep with me. I said yes although I wasn't sure it was the right thing to do. I asked my sister about it this morning. She said there was nothing wrong with letting the boy in my bed until he gets over his grief. May I have your opinion? — NOT CERTAIN.

DEAR NOT: A 12-year-old boy should not be sleeping with his mother or any other female. When he came to your bedroom you should have taken him to the kitchen for a glass of warm milk and a little talk. I realize several days have elapsed since you wrote to me. If the boy has been sleeping with you I urge you to put an end to the practice at once. It could lead to trouble. Counseling might be useful if Buddy continues to show signs of continuing grief.

Tax Debate Winding Up

Basic Questions Raised About Pattern of Life in Canada

OTTAWA (CP)— Basic questions about the future pattern of Canada's way of life have emerged from protracted public debate about federal proposals to change the system of income taxes.

The debate, conducted for eight months largely by businessmen and politicians, winds down with a midsummer series of hearings in Atlantic and Western Canada.

The Commons finance committee has split in two for simultaneous hearings starting Monday in the provincial capitals of Quebec and Quebec.

On both excursions, as in the Ottawa sessions since Finance Minister E. J. Benson published his tax-reform policy paper last Nov. 7, the agendas of witnesses consist largely of businessmen.

Thus the MPs on the committee can expect to hear more of what they have been getting through weeks of hearings in Ottawa—cries of complaint from businessman and professionals that the federal tax proposals would be unconscionable, unworkable and a violation of the Canadian free-enterprise way of life.

Whether or not the government intended it, the federal white paper on tax reform has become the focus of an argument about the direction Canada should take politically, economically and socially.

Among the 117 companies and organizations that have already testified to the Commons committee in Ottawa and the 108 that went before the counterpart Senate committee this year, most have voiced suspicions that the plan is as much a social document as a technical paper on taxing techniques.

Some of the angrier businessmen have denounced it as socialistic. At least one—Toronto businessman Harry Jackman—said it was communistic.

Those who imply charges of social subversion are also those who would stand to lose most under the tax revisions.

The Trudeau government has characterized the tax debate as a major experiment in so-called participatory democracy. Instead of simply publishing tax legislation for debate in Parliament, the proposals were issued with the idea of stimulating public discussion that would serve as a guide to final legislation.

In fact, participation in the debate has been limited largely to the business community.

The experiment has failed to stimulate participation by the majority of Canadian voters.

The mathematical obscurity of debate about taxes may have left most Canadians cold.

Basic to the argument on the economy is a dispute about whether Canada should opt for what might be called the trickle-up theory instead of the traditional trickle down.

Witness after witness has said heavier taxes for wealthier citizens and leaving the lower-income groups with more of their cash to spend is a wrong set of priorities.

The businessman's argument says that giving the workers more spending power would provide only a limited push to productive activity and economic growth. It would be better, the argument goes, to have a tax system that provides incentives for business to grow, thus providing jobs and wealth that trickles down to everybody.

The businessmen imply that the tax proposals would tend to direct Canada toward a way of life in which its government would be providing more services.

The argument about the share-cut of wealth between individuals and the federal government also has given a twist to the constitutional debate: Several provinces, notably Ontario and Alberta, have challenged the federal tax proposals.

Their opposition is based on a suspicion that the white paper proposals would pre-empt for Ottawa the major future growth in tax revenue. In a federal system, the government with the greatest tax power has the most spending power and, therefore, the most political power.

Following the final tours—four days in the East to hear 13 witnesses, two weeks in the West to hear 48—the finance committee will quiz Mr. Benson and his officials in Ottawa early in August, then start drafting its report.

The government's original target for enactment of legislation—before next Jan. 1—has been abandoned because of the duration of the debate.

Jan. 1, 1972, now is regarded as a likely date for enforcement of final legislation.

Teachers Back Native People's Right to Choose Own Future

HALIFAX (CP) — The rights of Canada's native peoples to determine for themselves their educational future received support here Friday from delegates to Canadian Teachers' Federation annual meeting.

A British Columbia resolution calling for federation backing of Indian and Eskimo demands won unanimous approval without debate as the week-long meeting ended.

The resolution, seconded by the Nova Scotia delegation, asked that federation activities be directed towards securing for Canada's native peoples full citizenship rights in matters concerning their own education.

D. J. S. Smith of Vancouver, who moved the resolution, added later the B.C. delegation thought Canada's native population should decide for themselves what they wanted in education.

"Indians have not been treated as full citizens and get "what we think is best for them," said Mr. Smith. They should have the right to "participate and make decisions."

The cost to the taxpayer would be "small payment for what has been done" to the native peoples.

The delegates later backed the decision with money, increasing to $3,000 from $2,000 a budget allotment for Indian-Eskimo education.

The approved federation budget for 1973-74 forecast revenues of $645,156 and the same amount of expenditures, the largest being $468,708 general operation.

New president Peter P. Figer denied in an interview Friday suggestions that a shortage of qualified teachers had been eliminated and the profession now had more than enough to go around.

If there is an oversupply, he said, it is an "artificial one" created by "political demands" for a better teacher-pupil ratio.

Trudeau Said Like Nixon

DETROIT (AP) — The president of the United Auto Workers union said Friday that Prime Minister Trudeau's plan to limit wage increases in Canada to six per cent is of no concern to the union.

"We are not concerned with Mr. Trudeau's position over there. We're going to have free bargaining for both our Canadian membership and our American membership," Woodcock added.

"There's one thing you can say about Mr. Trudeau," Woodcock said. "He's doing in Canada what Mr. Nixon is doing to the U.S.

"But he does do it with a little more finesse."

mands" for teachers, said the 43-year-old Regina high school principal.

Mr. Fieger, who replaced Rev. A. F. Brennan of St. John's, Nfld., as president, said teachers were continually educating themselves to match the innovations in teaching methodology.

But "teachers are paying for their own personal education" with only few instances of school boards providing leaves of absence and money, he said. This was going to have to change.

Delegates earlier approved the cost of an education study designed to get a clear picture of what Canadians need and want in education—"not what they think they need and want."

The study is expected to take between one and two years to complete.

Cottage Dream of Decade Ago Turns Into View of Cesspool

TORONTO (CP) — Getting away from the polluted environment of metropolitan areas by building a cottage among the pines on some secluded lakefront probably seemed like a good idea 10 years ago.

But today, many cottage-owners have found themselves with only a view of what is virtually a cesspool.

The lakeside cottages they spent thousands on to get away from pollution themselves exist amid pollution in many cases. If there are still any fish to be caught, they can't eat them. Swimming is out. And the provincial health department says:

"We don't advise anyone to drink surface water from any lake or stream in Ontario. In all cases he should disinfect or chlorinate the water."

Conservationists are quick to blame industrial wastes for pollution, but Ontario government investigators have found water pollution exists in recreational areas far from industrial outlets.

Ontario's 412,582 square miles are dotted with more than 250,000 lakes. Summer cottages now total about 130,000 and more are being built every year with a trend to year-round use. Water comes from campsites and the hundreds of lodges and fishing camps moosta.

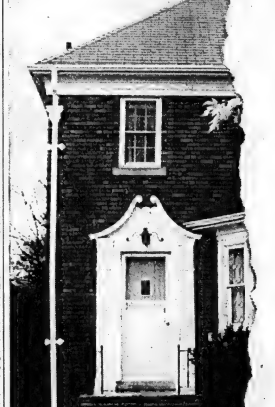
Investigators lay the blame on too many people in too small an area, many of them pushed by real estate developers into bad locations.

The man who paid a stiff price for his rural retreat often finds his sewage and garbage disposal facilities are outmoded. The lot he bought is on recreational ground with a thin soil cover that won't absorb effluents and his lake is ruined for fishing and swimming.

Riley Lake, a small body of water 100 miles north of here that was first settled two decades ago, was surveyed recently and found to have a capacity for about 60 cottages. It now has 150 and 60 other lots have been approved for sale.

A government study found the lake was biologically dead due to human effluents seeping into it through rocky ground.

Pollution experts say it can be brought to life again but it will be costly. They suggest installation of storage lagoons serving a number of cottages with the wastes being periodically pumped out by the township and disposed of safely.



Now, six government departments and the Ontario Water Resources Commission linked through an advisory committee are starting to fight back against recreation pollution and its causes.

The committee discovered in March that at least 10 per cent of existing cottages contribute to pollution and another 10 per cent are a potential pollution sources.

One of its major recommendations—that further uncontrolled cottage developments be prevented—was passed and last month universal subdivision control was imposed on all Ontario lands.

The health department is rewriting its regulations to impose minimum standards for septic tank sewage units, to give local health inspectors the right to refuse to private property and to lock out owners if faulty sewage systems are not corrected.

The committee says the subdivision control was imposed because municipal ambitions too often permitted approval of cottage subdivisions that should never have been built.

Bourassa Will Decide Soon On Study of Separation Cost

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Robert Bourassa said Friday his cabinet will decide next Wednesday whether to set up a parliamentary committee to study how much Quebec's independence from Canada would cost the province.

He told a news conference that even if such a committee is formed it would not be able to give the "exact cost" of separation because there are "many intangibles" involved.

The premier said the only sure way of determining the cost of an independent Quebec would be for the province to actually separate from Canada.

A period of economic uncertainty following independence is one of the intangible elements, Mr. Bourassa said, because there is no way of determining how investors would react.

"If they had the choice between a weak economy and a stronger one they would move towards the latter.

During the recent election campaign that brought his government to power, Mr. Bourassa said if elected he would study the cost of separatism.

"I can't see any reason why I shouldn't keep my promise," he said Friday.

The actual motion to be studied by the cabinet is one tabled in the national assembly by Dr. Philippe Demers (UN—St. Maurice) who called for a study of the "economic, social and political aspects" of separation.

Mr. Bourassa said if an investigation is made, the results will be released to the public before the next provincial election, likely to be held in 1974.

A preliminary investigation has already been completed by the industry and commerce department concerning Quebec's balance of payments, the premier said. Its results would be made public before the next general election.

During the last election campaign, several spokesmen for the Union Nationale said if their party was re-elected and constitutional discussions did not progress satisfactorily by 1974 a referendum on separatism would be held.

Lapierre, Watkins Not Favored

OTTAWA (CP) — It will be "tough sledding" for either Laurier Lapierre of Melville Watkins to win the national leadership of the New Democratic Party, national president Allan Blakeney said Friday.

Mr. Blakeney listed prospective candidates for the leadership job at the urging of reporters at a news conference. He said he based the list on rumors that had appeared in newspapers.

In it were Ed Broadbent, MP for Oshawa-Whitby; national deputy leader David Lewis, MP for York South; Mr. Watkins, a professor at the University of Toronto; Mr. Lapierre, a professor at McGill University; John Harney, Ontario secretary of the party, an Mayor Allan O'Brien of Halifax.

A convention to choose a successor to T. C. Douglas as national leader will be held next April 21-24 in Ottawa.

Mr. Blakeney is Saskatchewan leader of the NDP in addition to being the national president. He is in Ottawa for this weekend's meeting of the federal executive.

Support and Custody Needs Will Be Given Consideration

HALIFAX (CP) — Canada's Attorneys-General agreed here Friday to see that divorce actions under federal jurisdiction take into account support, custody, alimony and the possibilities of reconciliation, all of which are currently provincial powers under the constitution.

Justice Minister John Turner said at a news conference after three days of meetings with his provincial counterparts, that the provinces and federal government had agreed to pursue this objective.

The provinces might take over current federal powers over marriage and divorce as part of constitutional revision, enabling them to be certain that their activities meshed with the operation of divorce laws.

Alternatively, the various levels of government might co-ordinate the activities of the various tribunals and agencies concerned with these family and social problems.

The conference also agreed to a federal proposal to create a special committee of chief justices to deal with disciplinary action involving judges.

The committee would examine complaints about the bench and recommend action to the governments, said Mr Turner. Their jurisdiction would include personal misbehavior by judges, complaints about inadequate hearings and of the attitude and demeanor of judges during trials, and potential conflicts of interest.

The chief law officers spent several hours discussing ever, ironic eavesdropping, wiretapping and similar invasions of privacy, resulting in a pledge from Mr. Turner to try to introduce a bill in the Commons before Christmas to provide for right of privacy.

While the attorneys-general could not agree on general agreement on what exceptions there should be to a ban on electronic eavesdropping, Mr. Turner indicated the bill will permit it where national security is involved or where "serious" crimes are under investigation.

A definition of a "serious" crime will come later.

Mr. Turner said he favors authorization of wiretaps by attorneys-general, a view not shared by some provinces which want authorization by judge as well.

The ministers also agreed in principle that victims of violent crime should be compensated and legislation providing this should be uniform across the country.

How much home are you missing through outdated wiring?

When they built this house, it was hard to imagine the many wonderful ways electricity would be used today. To save time. Make work easier. Make the most of your leisure hours. Add beauty and comfort to your home.

That's why so many homes are now showing the signs of inadequate wiring. Fuses blowing. Lights dimming. Appliances performing sluggishly. Too few outlets. Cluttered extension cords. In short, an electrical system that doesn't let you enjoy all the benefits of modern electrical living ... with safety and convenience.

So if you're planning to modernize your home, think first of the wiring. Have it checked by a qualified electrical contractor and see how easily and inexpensively it can be updated. The Hydro Finance Plan can help you get started right away. Just ask your hydro.

Get complete enjoyment from your home. Your complete home.

Canadian Swimmers Battle Australia While Africa Heads Track Contingent

EDINBURGH (CP) — A rousing battle between Australia and Canada for supremacy in the Commonwealth Games pool shaped up today as eight gold medals in swimming and diving went on the line.

African and West Indian sprinters appeared to have the edge on the track, England continued to dominate the fencing competition and Hong Kong closed in on a lawn bowling title. Anybody seemed to have a chance in weightlifting and other events were not far enough advanced for any trend to show.

But Friday's opening events set the pattern for a two-day struggle in the pool that promises to continue all week.

The Australians drew first blood with a narrow victory over Canada in the 400-metre freestyle relay but Canadians were bitstered by a pre-race squabble between officials of the two teams over lane assignments.

Canada expected to get that gold medal back today in the women's springboard diving. After seven preliminary dives, Beverly Boys of Pickering, Ont., led by a wide margin with team-mates Jill Carruthers of Edmonton and Nancy Robertson of Pickering in third and fifth place.

Qualifying heats heading to today's swimming finals produced fields packed with Australians and Canadians competing with each other for the fastest times. Apart from an occasional English treat, the rest of the Commonwealth barely had a look-in.

A key contest shaped up for the men's 200 freestyle between Mike Wenden, Australian holder of the world record for 100 metres, and Ralph Hutton of Ocean Falls, B.C., who formerly held the world mark at 400.

Wenden was fastest qualifier but the versatile Hutton, who also swims butterfly and backstroke events, was just coasting.

"I feel great," Wenden said Friday night after his strong another leg broke up the tight battle in the freestyle relay.

"It should be a great race," said Hutton, who blamed himself for a slow start on the opening leg of the relay. He calls bad memories of the 1966 Games when he swam in five finals in individual events, finishing second in three and third in the fifth — his only gold medal came in a relay.

Bill Mahony of New Westminster, B.C., qualified with the fastest time in the men's 200 breaststroke and Georgs Smith of Edmonton, a heat winner, led three Canadians into the final of the 400 individual medley.

Goerge Smith's sisters, Sue and Sandra, also qualified for finals. Sue making it in the 200 individual medley and Sandra in the 00 freestyle.

On the track, Canada received surprising performances from three hurdlers and lost its most experienced sprinter in the women's 110 metres.

Backed by a brisk tail wind that wiped out all times for consideration as Games' records and threatened to throw the rhythm off stride, Brian Donnelly of Oakville, Ont., turned in the third-fastest qualifying time as he ran his semi-final of the 110-metre hurdles in 14 seconds flat. George Neeland of Thornhill, Ont., and Rich MacDonald of Toronto also reached the semi-finals with identical times of 14.3.

David Hemery of England, Olympic gold medallist over 400 metres, was the fastest qualifier, Paul Poce, the Canadian track coach, was willing to concede him the gold medal in today's final.

"But we'll take a silver and bronze if we get it," he added.

Stephanie Berto of West Vancouver and Paul Lovereck of Vancouver were both timed in 11.6 in their first-round heats of the women's 100 metres and qualified for the semi-finals. But they lost to the 1966 Games, did not join them.

Ailing since her arrival in Scotland a week ago, Mrs. Pitrowski got away to a bad start and finished in 12 seconds flat, one of the worst races of her career.

"I knew I wouldn't be sharp and I guess I just sat in the blocks too long," she said.

Rick Cuttell of Vancouver and John Hawkins of Courtenay, B.C., reached today's high jump final by clearing the qualifying height of six feet five inches.

The English fencers, who have yielded the individual foil and sabre medal once in six Games since fencing first appeared on the program, scored a 13-3 sweep this time with the title going to Michael Breckin. Maciej Gorecki of Vancouver, the only Canadian to reach the final, finished sixth.

Australia and England shared the first two weightlifting gold medals, George Vasil of Australia winning the flyweight title and Precious McKenzie repeating his 1966 triumph in the bantamweight division.

Chun Hon Chan of Montreal tied with C. H. Tung of Singapore for third place in the bantam class but lost his bid for a record of consecutive lawns medal when he was broken on the basis of body weight. Australia did not enter a flyweight liter.

A successful Canadian protest knocked in the 400 freestyle relay final.

Originally, two qualifying heats were scheduled in the event since there were nine entries and only eight lanes in the pool.

Withdrawal of the Papuan team made heats unnecessary and the judges set the lineup for the final, assigning Canada the unfavorable No. 1 lane and giving Australia Lane 8.

Canadian officials demanded a draw. This time Australia wound up in Lane 1 and Canada drew Lane 4 which gave them a good view of the entire field. Australia launched a counter-protest but was overall.

The aroused Aussies took an early lead at Hutton's expense. Smith and Wenden pulled on almost even terms and Ron

Sport Briefs

EDINBURGH (CP) — Three hurdlers gave the best opening-day performance by Canadians at the Commonwealth Games Friday and people are whispering that maybe Canada can win a silver medal in the 110-metre event. The top performance was given by Brian Donnelly of Oakville who has been insisting that he "could win it all," and turned in the best time ever recorded by a Canadian, running the quarter-final heat in 14 seconds. All times in Friday's track events were wind-assisted, however, and Donnelly's time will not stand as a Canadian native record. George Neeland of Thornhill, Ont., matched Donnelly's third-place finish in another quarter-final heat with a time of 14.0 seconds and Rich MacDonald of Toronto was fourth, also in 14.3 seconds, which qualified all three Canadians for this afternoon's semi-finals. Donnelly's time was only three-tenths of a second off the winning time of Commonwealth record-holder Dave Hemery of England, who is the favorite in the event. Donnelly's time was tied for the third-best of the day, Neeland said he "was too tight." "I kept remembering the Pan Am Games at Winnipeg in 1967 and how I took a header," he said. "I couldn't get loose, but maybe this will help me." MacDonal said he made "a horrible start." And fell forward just before the gun sounded. The experta give Canada no chance of winning a gold medal in the hurdles, "but we'll take a silver and bronze if we get it." said track coach Paul Poce of Toronto.

EDINBURGH (CP) — Don Domansky of Thunder Bay and Tony Powell of Dundas, Ont., a pair of runners who specialize in the 400 metres, tried the 100-metre distance Friday and actually got past the first heat. Both failed to qualify for today's semi-final in the Commonwealth Games, however, although the fact that both got beyond the first round was unexpected. Powell was tied for third but given fourth place after running the first heat in 10.6, while Domansky placed fifth in the second heat with a time of 10.5 Paul Poce of Toronto, the Canadian track coach, explained that Domansky and Powell, who have best times over the distance in 10.4, were forced to enter the 100 metres because "the 200 metres and 400 metres events are scheduled an hour apart on the same day and we can't do one double like that." "Anyway, Domansky will probably enter the 200 metres and forget the 400. He hasn't turned in a good 400 metres this year and he will have a better chance in the 200." Powell has a best time of 47.2 seconds in the 400 metres and this is considered good enough to win a bronze medal here. "Right now, it looks as if Powell will run in the 400 metres and Domansky will go in the 200 metres," Poce said. "We might change our minds before the day of those events though." The 200-metre final is scheduled next Wednesday afternoon about an hour before the preliminary heats of the 400-metres.

EDINBURGH (CP) — Three of the eight members of Canada's badminton team survived the first day of singles competition at the Commonwealth Games Friday and advanced to tonight's quarter-finals. Both Bruce Rollick of Vancouver, the Canadian champion, and Jamie Paulson of Calgary breezed through three rounds without dropping a set. Yves Pare of Montreal, Canada's second-ranked singles player, went out in the first round against a Malaysian opponent. Dave Charron of Toronto won his first match, drew a second-round bye and finally bowed in straight sets to a seeded Penglish opponent. Alison Daysmith Ridgway, the Canadian women's singles champion from Vancouver, recovered from the loss of her opening set to win her first-round match and gained her quarter-final berth with a straight-set victory in the second round. Judith Rollick of Vancouver ousted her Jamaican opponent 11-0,11-0 in the first round before losing her second match in straight sets. Patricia Moody of Montreal, another first-round winner, was eliminated by a Scottish opponent after winning her first set. Nancy McKinley of Toronto was able to salvage only three points as she lost to a Malaysian player in the first round.

Needs Body and Control

EDINBURGH (CP) — Jerome Drayton's epoch is conceived his runner will win the 10,000 metres at the Commonwealth Games today if his mind functions as efficiently as his body.

"Oh, he knows his own problems, and he can be put psyched right out of it," says Paul Poce, the Toronto runner's personal coach as well as the mentor of the Canadian track team.

Poce considers Drayton is the class of a field that includes Ron Clarke of Australia, the world record holder, Mohamed Gammoudi of Olympic Kipchoge Keino of Kenya, who has psyched Clarke out of more than one gold medal in Olympic and Commonwealth Games.

"Now, Drayton will have to get out there and make himself believe he can beat anybody in the field," Poce said.

"That has always been his problem, a psychological one. When he tries to kick, he starts flailing his arms and going nowhere.

"But we were timing him over 40 metres the other day and he was covering it in 54 seconds."

Drayton, who won the international open world marathon championship in Japan last December, has not entered a race he has not won.

"That's simply because he has to get so far out front by the three-quarter mark that no one can catch him," said Dave Ellis of Toronto, another starter in today's 10,000.

"When someone sticks with him, he knows he can't outkick them over the final laps, so there is no sense in continuing."

Drayton, a 25-year-old native of Germany who holds the Canadian 10,000 record, dropped out of the Boston Marathon just above Dave Hill of England and stayed with him for 12 miles. But Poce disagrees with the diagnosis that he was bothered by Hill's pursuit.

Drayton was the favorite at Boston on the strength of the Japanese victory and the coach feels he was bothered by the pressure.

"This time the press has stayed away and that's good," Poce said.

Marathoner Andy Boychuk of Sarnia, Ont., was expected to be the third Canadian in today's field and Poce planned to try to bunch his runners.

"Drayton will try to get out there and make Ellis try to have Ellis and Boychuk close to hold the pack like the English do."

Poce said the English runners always make a move, running long in turn to test the pace-setters.

The coach predicted the English and Australians would stagger close to Drayton all the way.

"We know they don't let him build that lead. So we told him to be ready to charge over the last three laps or so."

The weather for the race, scheduled for late afternoon, was expected to be cool and windy and Ellis was not pleased.

"This cold weather is good for distance running," said the 33-year-old veteran, "but it's awful hard on the bursitis in my knees."

Jacks of Vancouver stayed at the shoulder of his Australian rival throughout the third leg. Bob Kasting of Lethbridge appeared to be narrowing the gap on Wenden in the anchor lap but the sprint champion pulled away to win by two yards.

Three of Canada's eight backstroke players reached the quarter-finals. Bruce Rollick of Vancouver and Jamie Paulson of Calgary bowing it with three victories apiece in the men's singles while Alison Daysmith Ridgway of Vancouver stayed Hamilton, who lost to Winnipeg Blue Bombers in their only other exhibition game, combined sharp passing with a strong running attack to hand Saskatchewan their first loss in three pre-season encounters.

For the Roughriders, defending Western Conference champions, the only bright spot was halfback Bobby Thompson who ran back the opening kickoff for a 115-yard touchdown and scored another major on an 81-yard pass-and-run play later in the quarter.

Ti-Cats Claw Riders

REGINA (CP) — Hamilton Tiger-Cats, second-string quarterback John Eckman of the controversial Saskatchewan Roughriders 27-15 in an exhibition Canadian Football League game before 10,189 fans Friday night.

Eckman, 23-year-old graduate of Wichita State University in his second year with Hamilton, handed off to Dave Fleming for two touchdowns and to Willie Beshara for another as Tiger-Cats got Waterback, Joe Zuger, sat out the game.

Clemente Accepts Simpson Offering

The homer gave the Pirates a 4-3 victory over the Cincinnati Reds and increased to 2½ games their National League East lead over the New York Mets, who lost 1-0 to Los Angeles Dodgers on Wes Parker's bases-loaded double.

Clemente, who said he had trouble hitting a pitch thrown in winter ball, praised the young right-hander's ability and said:

"I told General Manager Joe Brown during the winter that if he had a chance to get him—I'd take him with my eyes closed."

Clemente not only did in the object of his praise with his bat, he kept Simpson, who had won 10 straight, from getting off the hook by cutting down Tommy Helms at the plate with a perfect throw from right field in the ninth.

In other action, Willie Mays singled in the ninth inning, his only hit, to move within one hit of the 3,000 mark in San Francisco's 2-1 victory over St. Louis. Real Expos, St. Louis Cardinals snapped an eight-game losing streak, defeating Atlanta Braves 11-4, Houston Astros downed the Cubs 5-3 in 10 and Philadelphia Phillies ripped San Diego Padres 8-3.

Milwaukee Brewers started Pittsburgh's comeback by smacking a two-run homer in the fourth to cut the Pirates' lead to 3-2. Clemente tripped in the sixth and scored on Al Oliver's sacrifice fly to make it 4-3 and it held up.

Clemente then nailed Simpson's streak and loss in 15 decisions and preserved reliever Dave Giusti's 14th record by sailing Helms to the plate when he tried to score on Jim Stewart's pinch single.

Manny Mota opened the inning with a pinch single and was sacrificed to second by Ron Sutton. Bill Grabarkewitz was intentionally walked. Willie Davis beat out an infield roll, and Parker delivered his third hit of the game to back the first-hit, 12-strikeout pitching of Sutton, 11-6.

Knudson, Bowerman Only Canadians to Make Classic Cut

Gary Bowerman was travelling in some pretty illustrious company yesterday as the Belleville - born golfer, who now plays out of Toronto and George Knudson were the only Canadians to make the cut at the Philadelphia Golf Classic.

A blistering 34 on the front nine allowed Bowerman to close with a 73 for the day. It placed him at 152 for the first two rounds, ten strokes back of the leader Billy Casper.

The scores:

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Billy Casper pocketed the question for about 10 seconds. Why is he one of the most consistent players on the professional golf tour?

"I think it's because I'm a well-rounded golfer," said Casper after carding a 33-34—67 for a 36-hole total of 135 to take the lead in the $150,000 Philadelphia Golf Classic.

"I don't have to rely on one area of my game," Casper explained. "When one area is weak another gets stronger. Something always seems to pick up when the other leaves off."

Casper's five-under-par 67 Friday along with his first-round 68 left him nine-under-par for 36 holes, a one-stroke lead over Charles Coody of Abilene, Tex., who has put together two rounds of 68 for a 36-hole total of 136 over the 6,815-yard Whitemarsh Valley Country Club course.

Bob Murphy of Jacksonville, Fla. had a two-under-par 70 in the second round and a tie at 137 with Ray Floyd, who fired a four-under-par 66 to go with his initial day 69. Australia's Bruce Crampton and Bunky Henry of Valdosta, Ga., are bracketed at 138 as 73 made the cut of 146 for the final two days of the 72-hole tournament. Crampton shot a 67 and Henry 69 Friday.

Two Toronto golfers made the cut. George Knudson had a 70 Friday for a 142 total while Gary Bowerman had rounds of 73 and 72. Al Balding of Toronto, 74-72—147, and Ken Fulton of Ste. Julie, Que., 76-74—150, did not qualify.

Belleville Grid Star Hopes to Improve On 'Lansdowne-Hilton'

By ERIC EMERSON
Staff Sportswriter

While Ottawa Rough Rider veterans were steamed up enough about the poor accommodations for the CFL team's training camp, a group of rookies, including Belleville's Terry Wellesley, are more concerned with just becoming veterans.

The group of 15 first - year players quartered in Ottawa's Carl-O-Drome, an even meaner age a few wisecracks about their less-than-plush surroundings.

A Rough Rider secretary warns would-be callers to the rookie dorm, "don't be surprised if they answer the phone as 'the Lansdowne - Hilton', they like to make jokes about it."

Veteran players found little to joke about at the start of the training camp, turning down a plea from the management to live in barrack - like accommodations similar to those of the rookies.

Since they were living at home and eating most of their meals away from the training camp, the veterans demanded $10 per day, rather than the $3 offered players making use of the facilities.

When the management rejected their demands, 28 players staged a one - day protest and an agreement was reached, with the out-of-residence players getting their $10 per day, but having to pay for any meals eaten at the training camp.

Since the life - span of a football rookie is often about on par with a sheepdog suffering from acute acrophobia, the remaining rookies are happy just to have survived the several player cuts that the team has made during the past month.

Wellesley, a 20-year-old Quinte Secondary School graduate, is currently working in the offensive backfield behind first string left-halfback Wayne Giardino.

"You can't really tell whether you'll be staying or not, because they still have to cut about three Canadians and a dozen Americans," he says, "but I think that right now I stand a pretty good chance of making it."

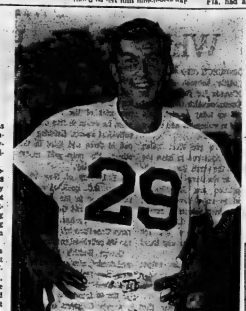
He saw action for several plays in Ottawa's 26-17 loss to Calgary, Monday, and has been dressed for all of the Rough Riders' pre - season contests, including the all-star game.

"I think probably the biggest difference between playing college ball and professional is that the players here are so experienced and the system is much more complicated", says Terry, "I couldn't even guess at how many plays we have."

Besides working out at halfback, the Riders have been utilizing Wellesley's 9.3 speed at flanker, on occasion.



Now that the exhibition games have begun, the team has cut down to one workout per day, which generally lasts about two hours. In addition, most of the contact work that marked the early practices has been eliminated.

Besides football, Wellesley was a standout high school performer in track and field, basketball and badminton, while also performing on local hockey, baseball and softball squads.

"I think that Wood is a real good quarterback, all he needs is a little more experience playing Canadian football", says Wellesley of the former New York Giant pivot.

Terry has two more exhibition games in which he hopes to be able to show enough to remain with the Big Four club, and improve his "Lan-down-Hilton accommodations.

Cost Goes Up On Stadium

BUFFALO (AP) — The possibility that the cost of the proposed Erie County dom - stadium could rise to $70,070,000 became apparent Friday when the lone bid for general construction was opened.

The only bid a joint offering of the Siegfried Construction Co. o Buffalo and Hunkey-Conkin Co. of Cleveland, Ohio, totalled $35,750,000.

In May, the county opened excavation and steel bids totalling $12,116,700. No contracts have been awarded.

Beverly Boys Wins Gold

Swimmers Mine Gold

EDINBURGH (CP) — Angela Coughlan of Burlington, Ont., won Canada's first swimming gold medal of the Commonwealth Games today in the women's 100 - metre freestyle after a furious battle from the start with a pair of Australians.

Miss Coughlan, who at 18 is the most experienced girl swimmer on the team, won the medal in the second day of swimming competition began.

It was the second straight medal battle between the Canadian and Australians in swimming. Friday Australia won the men's gold in the 400 metre freestyle relay and Canada the silver.

Today, the Aussie women settled for the silver and bronze in the women's freestyle 100. Lynne Watson, a bank clerk, was second and Jenny Watts third.

The London-born Miss Coughlan shot into the lead from the outside of Wellesley's speed at flanker, on occasion.

Now that the exhibition games have begun, the team has cut down to one workout per day, which generally lasts about two hours. In addition, most of the contact work that marked the early practices has been eliminated.

Besides football, Wellesley was a standout high school performer in track and field, basketball and badminton, while also performing on local hockey, baseball and softball squads.

"I think that Wood is a real good quarterback, all he needs is a little more experience playing Canadian football", says Wellesley of the former New York Giant pivot.

Terry has two more exhibition games in which he hopes to be able to show enough to remain with the Big Four club, and improve his "Lan-down-Hilton accommodations.

Meet your travel agent. He works for you. Free.

What you will get is all the help you need to get wherever you're going.

Say you're planning a trip to Florida.

He'll arrange your flights. (Eastern flies there every day of the week.)

He'll find you the kind of accommodations you're looking for. (Perhaps in an Eastern Travel Club Hotel in Miami or Fort Lauderdale.)

He'll arrange rental cars. Tours. Meals. And even give you the prices so you know when to stop.

Most important of all, he'll do all the worrying, fussing, and fuming to make sure that everything goes right.

From the minute you take off, to the minute you return.

All in all, we think his advice makes him a great man for you to know.

For what it gives you. Like help.

Tradeau Spurs Team

HICKSTEAD, England (CP) — The Canadian equestrian team, spurred on by a congratulatory telegram from Prime Minister Trudeau, captured four major ribbons at the Hickstead International horse show Friday.

The telegram, received prior to the evening's competition, commended the Canadians for winning the Nations Cup Sunday in the world championships at La Baule, France.

Moffat Dunlap of Newmarket, Ont., finished in second place in the speed class after looking like a sure winner until the last rider was up.

Dunlap navigated Argyle over the tricky, 13-obstacle course with a perfect performance in 70.3 seconds, but was beaten by British farmer David Howe with a time of 68 seconds.

Barbara Simpson of Calgary, who won Thursday's speed competition, brought her Swedish horse, Magnor, into sixth position. She also piloted Australia to a 10th-place ribbon in the 43-horse field.

Tom Gayford of Gormley, Ont., distinguished himself with a fourth-place finish in the fault-and-out competition which settled a field of 45 down to 10 on the jumpoff.

Seven of the 10 including Gayford and world champion David Broome connected with the big vertical Olympic fence for a single fault and tied for fourth position.

Weslock's Crystal Ball Forecasts Ontario Win

AURORA, Ont. (CP) — Nick Weslock proved himself an accurate forecaster Friday when he shot a par 71 to take the Ontario Amateur Golf championship for an unprecedented eighth time.

Prior to the last round, the Burlington resident said a 71 would be enough for him to win. His 54-hole total of 208 was seven strokes better than runner-up Stu Hamilton of Brampton.

The 52-year-old Weslock, who has been playing competitive golf for 33 years, fought off a direct challenge from Kitchener's Gary Cowan and was the only golfer in the tournament to post a sub-par score over three rounds.

His 208 was five under par for three rounds on the 6,525-yard Aurora Highlands Golf Club course. Hamilton's two-over-par 215 was followed by Wayne McDonald of Brampton at 216 and Cowan at 217. Bolton's Ken Trowbridge was tied for fifth place with Bob Jarvis of Fonthill at 218.

Cowan, a former United States and Canadian amateur champion, considerably predicted a run at Weslock's title after scoring 68 in the second round. Cowan, paired with Weslock for the last 18 holes, quickly ran into trouble.

He placed himself out of the running when he drove out of bounds and subsequently took three trees on the par-four fourth hole. He ended up with a three-over-par seven on the 390-yard hole while Weslock made par and grabbed a six-stroke lead.

The issue was decided at the 13th hole Weslock hit for an eagle three and his rival went three over par again.

While Cowan stumbled, Hamilton breezed with a four-under-par 67, the day's best round, and took over second spot.

Toronto's Dale Tallon, the junior hockey players with Toronto Marlboros and defending national junior golf champion, ran into disaster after he finished Friday's final round of amateur play. He filed an incorrect scorecard—marking a three for the 18th instead of a four—was disqualified.

Cowan accepted defeat gracefully.

"I've played so much golf," he said. "I've done this (a bad round) before and I'll do this again. I'm a fatalist.

"This has been my philosophy ... well, on life. You know, the old cliche—whatever will be, will be.

"I was in a lot of difficult places," Cowan said of his erratic final round, which included two-birdies and 11 pars. "It's a good thing I made a few putts."

Cowan anticipates better things in the Canadian amateur next month at Ottawa, and the U.S. Amateur at Portland, Ore., this September. "I like playing 72-hole tournaments," he said.

Weslock took his eighth Ontario amateur success in stride and talked more of his lengthy career in competitive golf.

He said he has no desire to make golf a full-time effort. "I love golf," he said. "It's my hobby.

"But it is secondary to my business (He is a partner in a Burlington tool and die making firm.) It seems I'm at all the big tournaments conflicted with important business," he said explaining why he has not competed more often in such pres-

Safety of Policeman on Beat Underlying Theme of Conference

MONTREAL (CP) — The issue of safety for the cop on the beat, although not officially on the agenda, was brought to the forefront at the opening session of the International Conference of Police Associations which opened here Friday.

More than 200 delegates representing police associations across North America heard John Harrington, president of the Fraternal Order of Policemen in the U.S. say that lenient rulings by the U.S. Supreme Court were responsible for the spiralling crime rate in that country.

He said alleged criminals were often on the street on personal bonds within a few hours after their arrest.

"Many senseless crimes are committed by people who have been locked up 20 or 30 times," he added.

"We must find out who the hell is letting them loose after we lock them up."

Ed Kiernan, president of the New York City Policemen's Benevolent Association, said, "My people are being shotgunned. They're being sniped. People drop cinder blocks on their cars from the roofs of buildings."

Delegates at the 18th annual meeting of the group were critical that there was no mandatory legislation in the U.S. calling for two-man patrols in cars. They noted that many understaffed police forces sent men out alone in patrol cars.

Constable Syd Brown of the Metropolitan Toronto Police Association and president of the ICPA said earlier in the day that the ICPA was seeking to acquire bargaining rights for all North American police departments.

He also said the six-day convention, ending Wednesday, would discuss training methods, equipment and better ways to handle relations with the public, especially with alienated youth and other minority groups.

"We realize that policemen are sometimes responsible for the unfortunate results of confrontations between demonstrators and ourselves," he said.

Const. Brown said officers want to work with young people and learn their problems but lack of staff and long working hours make it impossible.

Const. Brown said governments should be required to bargain with police representatives on all matters concerning salary, working conditions and fringe benefits.

If settlement can't be reached, both groups should be made to accept compulsory arbitration, he said, because the policeman's first responsibility is to the public.

Turnstile Justice

Society Too Permissive: Patrolman

MONTREAL (CP)—"In New York City when the welfare cheques come in it's like a carnival and two days later it's murder," says Ed Kiernan, a New York police patrolman for the last 27 years.

"You can almost mark it on the calendar. A week or month —then the money comes in and not a whisper till the money runs out."

"It reflects a permissive society," he said in an interview, "but one thing is dead sure, it affects the lives of others. Then it's bad."

Kieran says legislation passed by United States Supreme Court makes it almost impossible to make a "good bust (arrest)."

"We call it turnstile justice and it's a vicious circle. A guy can commit a crime and be on the street before the arresting officer finishes his report."

"Then he just has to go out and commit another crime and that's the cycle."

Kierman is in Montreal as president of the New York City Patrolmen's Benevolent Association to attend the 18th annual International Conference of Police Associations ending Wednesday.

He's a heavy set Irishman with a broad affable face and eight children who "turn on the TV set before they even say good morning."

"I've been on the force 27 years. I could retire. I could have retired seven years ago. I could be sitting at home doing nothing on half pay—better than half pay."

But instead, he keeps working because "I'm tired."

An oldtime cop who regards "law and order" as a chance for people to live without being pushed around, he is critical of legislation which makes spurof-the-moment confessions useless if a suspect has not previously been informed of his rights including that to legal counsel.

He says he is not opposed to legislation to protect the poor and disadvantaged but often such laws are misused by people "who go out onto the street again and harm people."

"What do you say to someone who enacts legislation that makes it almost impossible to make a valid arrest.

"Then what do you say to someone who asks 'What are you doing about crime on the streets and the kid lying dead at a thirteen storey stair well with a needle hanging from his arm?'

"You read a lot about the kids taking junk on the street: about the numbers racket; about dope being peddled on the corner," Kiernan says, "and you wonder why something isn't done."

"You go up to Bedford Stuyvesant on a hot summer night when hundreds of people are sitting out on the street and you'll see why."

Kiernan doesn't believe that racial incidents and the hardships of the ghetto are responsible for a spiralling crime rate nor does he believe they justify crime.

"You don't have to live like a dog just because you live in the ghetto. Forty or 50 years ago we had Irish and Italian ghettos. It was a dirty fight.

"But, we didn't jump out of windows, go out and rob or stick needles in our arms.

"My father was a cop and four days before payday there was no money in the house. We collected bottles and cashed them in for bread and milk. We went down to the railroad tracks and gathered lumps of coal."

The Black and Puerto Rican ghettos that now exist in New York City are not really different from other ghettos, he says.

"It's still a dirty fight, but you can make it. Almost any man in New York today can go out and earn himself enough money to live comfortably.

"The trouble comes when you get hard working, respectable people moving away from the ghettos. Then the ghetto becomes a jungle." Racial unrest is not a valid reason for crime either, he says.

"In just about every racial incident I've seen, some group of people stood to profit. Unrest gives these people a platform on which to come forward.

He says that during such incidents people feel they have a licence to do almost anything but this can go to ridiculous extremes.

"I can understand—I don't stand by it, but I can understand —why some people would want to shoot a policeman, but I cannot understand why anyone would want to shoot a fireman during a riot when he comes to put out a fire in their own home."

"This is the guy who is saving someone's property, and these guys throw rocks and tease shots at him. I can't understand that."

Seaway Returns To Levys

TORONTO (CP) — The struggle for control of Seaway Multi-Corp Ltd. ended Friday night with announcement that the Levy family of Toronto has gained control of the conglomerate.

Mark A. Levy said in a statement the Levy family has nominated 12 directors of Seaway and of Levy Industries Ltd., and that annual meetings of both companies will be held Aug. 14.

At the joint meeting of the directors Friday night, Benjamin Levy was elected president of both companies.

The board of directors of Seaway appointed Mark Levy as chairman of the Seaway board; Morris P. Levy, executive vice-president; Edward Levy, vice-president and assistant to the president; Joseph G. Roberts, vice-president of finance and administration; W. F. Rosenfeld, secretary.

Transfer of control of Seaway to the Levy family from the former president, Norton Cooper, was negotiated at a meeting earlier Friday.

The agreement ended a protracted battle for control of the company, which Mr. Cooper acquired in 1968 when it was known as Seaway Hotels Ltd. and operated a number of hotels and motels in eastern Canada.

Jean Dixon's Horoscope

For July 19

Your birthday today: Your needs in the year ahead lead you to adopt unorthodox methods; highly specialized skills. The basic trend is to intensify your efforts. Abandon incidental extensions of your main enterprises. Your patience comes into good stead in the uphill pace of the next couple of years. Superficial attractions fade quickly. Today's natives are good at finding hidden things and have the "green thumb" of a good gardener.

ARIES (March 21—April 19): Take your share in your community's Sunday customs, then pursue intellectual matters. Any social contacts develop minor differences.

TAURUS (April 20—May 20): Plan for a quiet Sunday. Family matters need little attention, but may be disturbed by other citizens on your time. Avoid excesses in food and drink, rest early.

GEMINI (May 21—June 20): Theories about people are proved incorrect. You can't be the ideal day to make important decisions because people involved are inattentive or undecided.

CANCER (June 21—July 22): If you say courteous and just listen, you will have a more accurate view of people around you. The temptation is to be candid on matters seldom mentioned.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): It now turns out your own plans are unfeasible. Go along with others, see what their habits and ideas are, then your comment is not so critical.

VIRGO (Aug. 23—Sept. 22): Bring along company but keep moving, at least until the chance to relax alone offers itself. Nothing is to be gained by offering comments or contradictions.

All things in moderation is easy enough today, and rather wonderful in results. Make a good try at it. Older people get in the way by demanding special attention.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Concentrate on affirming and building your home life today. Outside interests, business should wait another day.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Lay aside all business actions and make it a day of spiritual growth and reflection on the state of your emotional life.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22—Jan. 19): This is a slow Sunday, socially and psychologically—proceed gently. Higher expenses may be worth it by making things more convenient. Entertainment lightens the evening.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Efforts to gain cooperation fare better if you give reasons rather than simply telling people what to do. Old friends, relatives cause some concern.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — March 20): This Sunday is better spent praying and listening. Even small details offer precaution for disaster. Relax early, let others do as they will.

For July 20

Your birthday today: Expansion becomes both your motto and problem this year. Things become somewhat harder to keep track of, and you either cut back or invest much more work than planned. The bold approach pays off, in either case. Finding a reasonable growth pattern produces good results, materially. Today's natives are usually courteous, thrifty people who seek to remain out of the limelight but are bound to be noticed because of their merits.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Only good humor and persistent effort get the week off to a productive start. Toward evening, it is very encouraging. Hold on to your cash for tomorrow.

TAURUS (April 20—May 20): Take a conservative tack, do just what produces the simplest favorable result....Overdoing is so easy. Sound studies and diligent effort are needed to get details right.

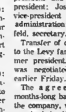
GEMINI (May 21—June 20): Haste can cause you to set up some difficult games. Creative novelty shows in almost anything you tackle, so apply it to your more important activities.

CANCER (June 21—July 22): Your money seems determined to get involved in dubious ventures today. Call a halt on any speculative actions for now. A change of pace is almost essential this evening.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): There are so many things going on it's hard to keep track. Check your facts and figures — it doesn't matter that some things must wait their turn.

VIRGO (Aug. 23—Sept. 22): Again, you are the final judge of your own life and what is to happen to you. Spiritual development advances as you cope with today's confusion.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Business changes are prominent today in the news — your own affairs are subject to similar influences. Creative effort is strongly favored for long-range results.



SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Much more than routine is expected from you today. Rise to the occasion, and remember who asked for the extra contribution. Your own plans get your generous patience.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Carelessness comes easily today. Resolve to abandon what is unconstructive in yourself; intensify your healthy side. Sudden urges in investments or shopping promise disappointing results.

Stock Market Advance Longest Since January

By ART JOHNSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Canadian stock markets saw their longest consecutive period of advance this week since January.

At Toronto, the industrial index, a prime indicator of market movement, advanced for five consecutive sessions from Monday to Friday.

The index posted a total gain on the week of 3.63 points to 153.79.

This was the largest five day gain since mid-June.

Some analysts viewed the advance as an indication that the long bearish trend has ended.

Much of the strength on Wall Street was due to improved second-quarter corporate earnings. Observers said this was a sign that the North American economy had adjusted to inflation curbs.

The earnings reports also provided a psychological boost to the discredited bears who had avoided markets in large numbers.

The Toronto market traded, 885,000 shares Monday. It was the 11th straight trading session since April 18, 1960 when 881,000 shares changed hands.

Tuesday saw only a slight improvement, with 893,000 shares traded.

Activity picked up as the week progressed. On Friday 1,711,000 shares were bought or sold.

This was the heaviest trading session since June 30.

Undated Dividends

Cochrane-Dunlop Hardware Ltd., class A 20 cents, Aug. 15, record July 31.

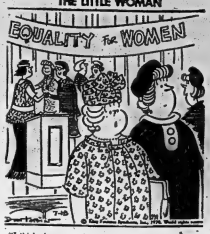
Observers said the lung period of advance had erased much of the disunited interest among investors.

But volume must make a further large improvement before securities houses become content.

Financial observers estimate that between 2,000,000 and 3,000,000 shares must be traded each day at the Toronto exchange before brokerage firms meet operating expenses.

On index at Toronto, golds gained .28 to 151.55, base metals 1.61 to 91.17 and western oils 9.46 to 135.21.



Volume was 6,145,000 shares, up from 5,530,000 last week. Gains outnumbered losses 407 to 289 with 208 issues unchanged.

At the Montreal and Canadian exchanges, the composite index was up 4.78 to 150.76.

Combined volume was 4,636,000 shares, up from 2,030,000 last week.

THE LITTLE WOMAN

Borden, Farm Union Reach Agreement

INGERSOLL, Ont. (CP) — About 400 members of the National Farmers Union ratified an agreement Friday night between the union and the Borden Co. Ltd., restricting the importation of milk powder.

Under terms of the final agreement, reached a week ago, Bordens has agreed to stop importing whole milk powder and related milk products until April 30, 1971.

Plumbers and Builders Study Pay, Profit Curb

OTTAWA (CP) — A significant break has occurred in the impasse between organized labor and the government's prices and incomes commission on wage restraints.

The 30,000-member United Association of Journeymen and Apprentices in the Plumbing Industry has met contractors and a top officer of the commission to discuss ways in which restraints can be applied to both plumbers' wages and builders' profits.

More meetings are to be held. They could lead in a national conference involving other segments of the construction industry—both employers and tradesmen.

The object would be to stem inflation in the construction industry, which employs close to 300,000 and has been a pace-setter in both costs and wages in recent years.

Wage settlements of 20 per cent and more have been made with some of the building trades in the Toronto area and other parts of Canada.

John Young, head of the prices and incomes commission, excused them because they were based on bargaining that began before the government announced six weeks ago the commission endorsed a guideline of a maximum six per cent for increases in wages and prices.

At that time, contracts already been made among the plumbers, contractors, and commission chiefs.

The plumbers union made the conciliatory move towards the prices and incomes commission last February in Montreal at a meeting with contractor representatives.

The Canadian Labor Congress said from the outset of the commission's work that it would not agree to restrain wage-increase demands unless all forms of income—including rents, profits, interest rates, and the like—are restricted.

Organized labor was not, as a result, invited to last February's price restraint conference attended by 300 business and professional leaders.

That meeting decided that price increases during 1970 should be held clearly below cost increases, putting the squeeze on company profits. The Tories subsequently endorsed a meeting of Prime Ministers and the provincial premiers, and has become the commission's main criterion for judging all subsequent price increases.

In some cases, manufacturers have rolled back announced price increases to come within the price guide.

Professional associations of doctors, dentists and others attended the February meeting and agreed to restrain rate increases. The commission says they have observed the restraints.

But until the move by the plumbers union came to light, organized labor was regarded as the big hold-out against the wage restraint program.

SIU Fights Indictments

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Seafarers' International Union vowed today to wage an all-out fight, "financially and morally," against federal indictments charging the union and its officers with illegal political donations.

"We know that if the Seafarers have no voice in the halls of Congress that we will very soon lose all the things that we have fought so hard to obtain over the years," said the union's secretary-treasurer, Al Kerr, one of the indicted officials.

A federal grand jury in Brooklyn, N.Y., last month handed down the indictments charging illegal political donations of $20,000 to various groups supporting Democratic presidential candidate Hubert H. Humphrey in 1968 and $20,000 to various Republican campaign committees.

It also charged the union and its officers with conspiring to spend $700,000 for political activities in presidential, senatorial and congressional campaigns between 1964 and 1968.

Deadline Passes To End B.C. Strike

Baby Bonus Mail Moves'

OTTAWA (CP) — Post office officials reported no strike action and no shutdowns Monday.

The postal unions have said they would suspend the normal rotation of strike action to ensure smooth delivery of the more than 3,000,000 cheques sent out by the health and welfare department.

The post office spokesman added, however, that family allowance cheques were delivered Friday in British Columbia. It was reported later from the West Coast that there would be no strike today by dayshift workers.

Postal operations were disrupted at a central station in Vancouver Saturday when the morning and afternoon shifts were sent home by officials because of "skylarking." The evening shift went normally, however, and there was no trouble Sunday.

Negotiations in the dispute are scheduled to resume today but there is no indication either side will change its position.

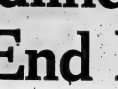
Black Gang Leader Is Hunted

CHICAGO (AP) — Police said today they are searching for the leader of a black street gang wanted for questioning in connection with the sniper killings of two white policemen working on a community relations program in a predominantly Negro North Side housing project.

Sought on a murder warrant was John Veal, 17, the leader of the Cobra Stones street gang. Police also said they were looking for an unidentified teen-age girl who they believe tossed into an incinerator two rifles police think were the murder weapons.

Being held without bail and charged with murder are Sidney Bennett Jr., 18, George Knight, 23, and a 14-year-old juvenile. They were arrested less than 24 hours after the killings Friday.

Bennett and Knight were to have hearings today and the juvenile was to have a separate hearing to determine whether he should be tried as an adult.



Sgt. James Severin, 38, and Patrolman Anthony Rizzato, 27, were shot as they walked across a Small Business Administration office building parking lot.

Police also went to the big Cervent Garden vegetable market and there found a general increase in many items, especially apples and citrus fruits from abroad.

The decision on whether to send the troops in to unload food may hinge largely upon a report from Supply minister Robert Carr. He has been the main channel in touch with negotiations involving the 47,000 longshoremen and is trying to work out just how long the strike is likely to last.

It hinges on a compromise over the basic wages of the dockers. They want their £11 (about $27.50) minimum raised to £20 (about $50) weekly.

Management has offered the dockers a weekly wage of £20, including overtime.

"If there's a postal slowdown, how come the bills keep arriving?"

Workers' Response To Order Not Clear

VICTORIA (CP) — The 8 a.m. PDT deadline in the tense confrontation between the British Columbia government and construction workers passed today without any clear indication whether building trades unions were sticking by their threat to defy the law.

Union and company officials were not available for comment. It was expected that construction sites shut down for almost four months by a lockout and strike, would take some time to resume operation in the event workers did report back.

Carpenters, bricklayers, operating engineers, heat and frost insulators and plumbers, representing nearly 19,000 of the 25,000 construction workers involved in the dispute, said last week they would not return to work without a contract despite a direct order from the government to do so or face penalties under compulsory sections of the B.C. Mediation Act.

The government invoked Section 18, which provides for compulsory arbitration, Saturday, less than 25 hours after the 140,000-member B.C. Federation of Labor threw its weight behind the construction workers.

The action was taken to get 25,000 men in 15 unions back on the job on $250,000,000 worth of construction stalled since April, when the 593-member Construction Labor Relations Association, which bargains for the contractors, locked out their workers. The lockout was lifted a week ago on instructions from the government.

Workers defying the government order face possible heavy fines for non-compliance with the back-to-work order.

With construction sites scattered across the province, some in remote areas, it could take several days for the government to collect information to support legal action against any workers that ignored the order.

"The problem won't be solved as long as some of the trades do not go back," federation secretary Ray Haynes said Sunday. He hinted broadly at a general strike in a statement Friday saying union members should refuse to pay fines and go to jail if necessary.

He said Sunday that to invoke compulsory arbitration was a regrettable and an "unwise decision" by the government and hoped that Labor Minister Leslie Peterson "will use what time is available to bring about a settlement before things really get out of hand."

Mr. Peterson, who said Saturday the government had invoked the act only "with reluctance" refused to say what fur-

Liner Is Lost

All 721 on Cruise Ship Are Saved from Flames

SANTA CRUZ DE TENERIFE (AP) — All 721 passengers and crew of the Norwegian cruise ship Fulvia were rescued Sunday after a fire at sea 100 miles north of the Canary Islands. The burned out Fenici sank in 2,000 fathoms today.

The owners of the vessel said she had drifted to within 35 miles of here and went down at a latitude of 28.57 north and a longitude of 16.30 west.

The 448 passengers and most of the 273 crew members arrived in Santa Cruz Sunday night aboard the French luxury liner Ancerville, which answered the Fulvia's SOS.

Most of the passengers were Italians, while the crew was Norwegian.

The Fulvia's captain, C. B. Fasting, and four of his officers remained at the scene aboard the Spanish tug Tamaran in a futile attempt to save the 16,923-ton Norwegian-American Line vessel.

Late Sunday night the Fulvia was reported ablaze from stem to stern and listing heavily to port.

At least three passengers were injured.

The Fulvia, in a distress signal early Sunday, reported a fire in its engine room after an explosion. Half an hour later the order to abandon ship was given. The sea was calm, and passengers said there was no panic as they were loaded into the lifeboats.

The Ancerville was bound for Casablanca, Morocco, when it was diverted to the rescue. It arrived about seven hours after the Fulvia's SOS and found the lifeboats about half a mile from the Fulvia.

Capt. Fasting and 26 of his crew remained aboard their ship to try to control the blaze, but they abandoned ship when the fire intensified, and the Ancerville picked them up.

When the Tamaran arrived, Fasting an his four officers transferred to the tug while the Ancerville sailed to Santa Cruz. Some of the rescued passengers came ashore in bath robes and blankets, but one woman was in a mink coat. An Italian woman was carried off on a stretcher.

The Fulvia left Genoa Tuesday on a 10-day cruise of the Canaries, stopped at Cannes, on the French Riviera and Funchal, in the Portuguese Madeiras, and was due in Santa Cruz Sunday.

She was to stop at Casablanca before returning to Genoa next Friday.

Built in Amsterdam in 1949 as the Oslofjord, she was modernized in 1967 and her name was changed last year.

Israeli Jets Bomb Jordan

TEL AVIV (AP) — Israeli jets bombed army and guerrilla positions inside Jordan today for the third consecutive day.

The military command here said the attacks were in reprisal for Arab rocket and mortar bombardments of Israeli communities in the Beisan Valley near the Jordanian border.

A command spokesman said all Israeli planes returned safely.

He said the Jordanian army was helping Arab guerrillas in nightly bombardments and the air strikes were against army positions overlooking the valley.

On Sunday, Israel threw air strikes at Arab positions along the Suez canal and at guerrilla posts in Lebanon as well as in

As he stepped down from the 17-minute walk some 700 feet above the gorge bottom, Wallenda said: "I was talking to God."

A crowd estimated at 35,000 watched as the smiling 65-year-old circus star made his way across the cable. Gov. Lester Maddox of Georgia was among those watching.

"If I didn't have God in my heart, I wouldn't have made it," said Wallenda who claimed a world stunt record for the walk. But the Guinness Book of World Records says a wire walk by 2,540 feet was once performed in Monte Carlo.

Gunmen Hold Up Miniature Train

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — Two masked men, one armed with a pistol, held up a miniature train at a city park Saturday, dismaying some passenger who at first thought it was a put-on.

Police said at least 30 of the estimated 80 passengers were robed. A total of $500 was taken.

Engineer Walter Lucas, 24, said the men struck at the busiest time of the day. He added:

"One of them said, 'Stop, mister,' and he had a gun pointed at my chest. And when I've got a gun pointed at me, I do what I'm told."

Apartment Fires Are Investigated

TORONTO (CP) — Investigators are looking into the causes of two apartment fires last weekend which caused about $30,000 damage and injured four persons.

Three residents and a fireman were injured Saturday night in a fire at a midtown apartment, the second major blaze at the building in the last four months.

In the first fire March 21, one man was killed and two others injured by jumping from upper storey windows.

Investigators will look into the possibility the fires could have been started by an arsonist.

Dock Strike Batters Family Budgets

LONDON (AP) — In only five days, Britain's dock strike has already struck the housewife a low blow in the family budget, Agriculture Minister James Prior learned today during a tour of London's big markets.

The minister found abrupt price increases imposed by wholesalers and heard bitter complaints from retailers who said they had little choice but to pass them on to customers.

Prior indicated this would be a major part of his report to Prime Minister Edward Heath's cabinet which is trying to decide whether to use troops to unload perishable foods.

At Smithfield's huge meat market, Prior was told by Len Smith, organizer of the Transport and General Workers Union, that his members would resist use of scab labor, or even troops, on the docks. The minister shot back bluntly:

"What I want to be sure of is that the public are fed at a fair price."

"Wholesalers are taking advantage of the situation. They are making as much profit as they can. Prices have gone up between 15 and 20 per cent since the strike started."

If Prior had not come to the market today, Franks said, the wholesalers would have tacked another price raise onto meat.

"We have to face the house-wife on this," Franks complained.

Hero Award Nomination

Rush Perry Waite of Brighton, has been nominated for the Dunlop National Truck Hero of the Year Award by D. P. Collins, Department of Highways, Port Hope.

The Truck Hero can be any professional truck driver who has performed an act of bravery of heroism beyond the call of duty.

The selected Hero will receive the 1970 Dunlop National Hero trophy, an engraved Rolex watch, a cash award of $500 and a special VIP weekend for two in Toronto — all expenses paid as guests of the Dunlop Company.

Mr. Waite was nominated for his part in saving a fellow worker from electrocution. Mr. Waite saw Edward F. Lacroix of Belleville fall off his truck, the crane of which had struck a 4,800 volt hydro line above. He was lying face down in a puddle and grasp the hoist's cable.

Mr. Waite suffered several shocks as he managed, after several tries, to pull the man from the current — charged cable. Mr. Lacroix is now recovering from burns to his arms and chest.

The annual tribute to the winner will be made at the Automotive Transport Association Convention to be held at the Royal York Hotel, Toronto, on November 23, 1970.

A reward of $100 will go to the person who nominates the 1970 Hero. Entries should be made in letter form and sent to the Canada Safety Council, 20 Driveway, Ottawa 4, Ontario. News clippings, witness statements, or other documentary proof of the heroic action should accompany any entry.

Buyers, Sellers Pleased by Sale

Another downtown Belleville Sidewalk Sale has come and gone and the merchants are smiling once more.

Mrs. Area Simons, vice-president of the Belleville Downtown Association, said this morning that the merchants and the customers seemed pleased with the way things ran this year.

"It went over very well," she said. "All the merchants were pleased."

Even Belleville's wet weather did little damage to the success of the sidewalk sale "best-down".

Rain fell on Thursday intermittently but the crowds returned, taking advantage of cut-rate prices and the opportunity to beat the merchants down.

Friday and Saturday saw many sales and special events like the Belleville Federation of Musicians Dixieland Band and a magician's performance.

"Sale wise the merchants were very happy," Mrs. Farsons said.

NO LYRICS ON WEED

SINGAPORE (AP) — The ministry of culture announced it would begin screening all imported books of pop songs to weed out those containing lyrics in favor of drug addiction. A ministry spokesman said a crackdown on pop records already has begun as a means of stamping out what the government calls the "hippie culture."

Directors Build Stage in Spare Time

During the weekend, directors of the Belleville Agricultural Society took the wraps off a portable stage project they had been working on in spare time for the last three months. The mobile platform was made especially for outdoor performances running at Quinte Exhibition August 18 through to August 22 this year. It is wired for special lighting effects and can be set up and expanded to double the size in a matter of minutes after being moved on location. 'Action Plan' Progress Report Released by Family YMCA

Directors of the Belleville Family YMCA have fallen behind with their Action Plan to improve the local facility.

The 23-point plan was part of the Y's bid to Belleville City Council on May 19 for its annual tax exemption. Council's decision to approve the exemption was based partially on a Y pledge to complete the action plan.

Seven actions were to be completed by June 1, ten by July 1 and six by August 1. Items slated for the June 1 completion date were mainly fulfilled but those for July 1 are largely incomplete.

First of these was "a renegotiation of the financial limit imposed by UCS"; the directors of UCS decided that no United Appeal agency should be granted more than 20 per cent of the United Appeal campaign fund's total receipts.

Y directors wished to have the ceiling lifted on this restriction. Frank Heisz of the Y board reported this morning that no renegotiation meeting has taken place, although one was planned, so "nothing has happened".

Second point in the Action Plan for completion by July 1 was an "exploration of means of raising money by special events".

Directors have taken action on this: the Y is now open on Sundays and a swimathon is planned for November.

Third item was "a determination of the extent to which Y programs can complement those of major educational institutions, recreation department, minor sports associations and others in the Quinte area".

Mr. Heisz reported that both the recreation department and the schools will probably "use less of the Y pool this year than last".

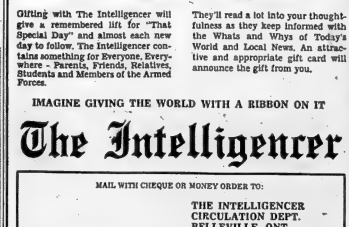
On the next action plan item "the gauging of the social needs and desires of teens, young men and women, Mr. Heisz was able to report that "the Y's youth committee is working on these all the time" and that a "drop-in" room will open at the Y on September 1.

"An examination of the YMCA building and equipment by experts" was the next item: this was begun but is not yet completed.

Two board members are investigating "alternatives for development or disposition of the Y building and/or real estate" another action plan item.

Directors are trying to follow up unpaid pledges to the Y building fund as promised in the action plan; however, nothing has been done toward development of "capital debt and capital expenditure. projections".

The Y Endowment Fund slated for completion by July 1 is now in the committee stage. Mr. Heisz reported that "the committee is just now trying to establish a policy."



Revision of "the personnel policy" and a determination of "staff potential load" is largely complete. Russ Davey of the YMCA National Council helped with these: one of his findings was that the Belleville Family YMCA could handle 50 per cent more members.

Rain — It All Depends On How You Look at It

And then there's the type of person that blames all seemingly unseasonable rainfall on the farmers in the area.

This reporter met one such fellow Sunday who explained that when it rained too much he blamed the area's agriculturalists whom he said were always wanting rain.

In his mind he saw what he called a farmer's raining bee wherein a group of farmers and their families gally attired in Indian dress, danced around a scarecrow chanting "more rain for the crops, more rain for the crops."

"If they had it their way," he said, "they'd have it raining in the house just to water the plants."

And if he seemed a bit bitter about the amount of rainfall that this July has presented from Quinte skies, he may be had some basis for his complaining.

As of eight this morning 2.04 inches of rain has fallen in the area on as many as 10 different occasions.

But if you think it's wetter this year than in past Julys, the raindrops have been falling on your head a little too long at least as far as Trenton's duty forecaster see it.

The normal rainfall, he says, for July is 2.5 inches and the Quinte area hasn't equalled that so far.

Last year, and it's written down, rainfall amounted to more than four inches, well above the normal.

That was last year? Most people don't remember it, especially when the cars, splash them this year as they speed by.

But there are many different complaints from Quinte area residents.

One woman blamed nuclear fallout and the American space program for the more tropical weather this year.

One man who had seen his camping expedition washed out from under him said that too many people had been washing their cars this summer thereby causing the torrents to fall.

In other words if it rains in July it won't in October or September. He'll be turning off his sun lamp and heading outdoors for the beach just before the snow flies.

Tennis balls are difficult to play with when they're soggy. Barbecues often go out when it's raining. Boats and canoes get swamped.

But hand in hand with the complainers are the eternally optimistic rationalizers.

One girl explained that she liked the rain because she was a swimmer and it was no effort for her to get wet.

"If it rains in the summer a lot there won't be much snow," another said.

"It keeps the tires cool," a motorist testified.

"There's always the brighter side," a sarcastic shopper told The Intelligencer. "I'm not so thirsty when it's raining. Television ratings go up. Umbrella and tarpaulin sales go up too."

And so there's a moral to be learned from July's rainy weather. What is someone's rain storm is another person's sun — if your car won't start, your mechanic's smile is full of the rays of the sun.

Handover Ceremony

Captain W. W. Laakso (seated) has officially handed over command of his Unit, 708 Communications Squadron, to the new Commanding Officer of the Unit, Captain J. A. P. Thomson. During the handover event, the new Commanding Officer of 708 Communications Squadron, Captain Thomson, met many of those personnel who will work under his direction in the future. Captain Laakso, former CO of 708 Communications Squadron, is retiring from the Canadian Forces, and plans to reside with his family in Belleville.

Post Office Fate Decision Is Near

TRENTON (Staff) — The fate of the old post office property on Trenton's main thoroughfare may be decided at a special council session later this week.

On Thursday afternoon, representatives of David K. Linden, Inc., will present the result of its feasibility study on the development of the post office property.

Ted Parker, chairman of the council committee on the post office property told The Intelligencer today that no one in Trenton has seen the results of the study.

"The only linking is that they (the firm) are fairly excited about it," Councillor Parker said.

July 21 is the date set for the completion of the lease by the Montreal firm which has first refusal on rights to develop the property.

If David K. Linden develops the property, the town will be reimbursed for the cost of the study which is not to exceed $2,500.

Mayor Duncan McDonald is opposed to the idea but there have been suggestions that the town could move its municipal offices from the present location to the second floor of the old post office property.

Dundas Street Reconstruction Now Entering Final Phase

Installation of storm sewers will be the first phase of the reconstruction of Dundas Street West, between the new Mara River bridge and the top of the "Devil's Elbow" hill at the Bay Bridge Road overpass intersection.

General contractor for the road rebuilding project being carried out by the city with highways department subsidy, is Lightfoot Construction Ltd. with today as the official starting date.

Company equipment was already at work last week, however, beginning excavation work for storm sewers to be installed as part of the general contract.

The approaches to the new River bridge will be installed by Lightfoot as part of the general contract for the reconstruction of Dundas Street.

The reconstruction project calls for realignment of the present roadway up the "Devil's Elbow" hill which will necessitate the removal of four houses on the south side of Dundas street immediately east of the CPR-Bay Bridge Road overpass.

Two of the houses have already been razed while the other two are being moved to new locations.

The reconstruction of Dundas Street is the third and final phase of a three-stage program which last year saw construction of the new river bridge and two years ago the building of the CPR - Bay Bridge Road overpass.

Completion of the three-phase project will allow bypassing of the city's main downtown area by through traffic using the east - west Highway 2 route.

While not expected to be entirely completed this fall, city officials expect traffic to be using the new route some time before the end of the year.

Collision Claims Second Victim

TWEED (Special) — Last week's grinding, head-on two-vehicle crash on Highway 62 south of Madoc which killed a two-weekend-old baby and sent nine others to hospital has claimed its second victim.

Saturday evening, Mrs. Betty Dwire, 41, RR1, Bancroft, died in Kingston General Hospital as a result of injuries suffered in the accident, Mrs. Dwire's granddaughter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Dwire of Bancroft was fatally injured in the mishap.

Visitor Injured

TWEED (Specila) — Mrs. Marion Schroder, 30, of New Jersey, visiting in the Marmora area, suffered chest injuries Saturday afternoon when the car in which she was riding was in collision with another vehicle on Matthew Street in Marmora.

Mrs. Schroder was a passenger in a car driven by Mrs. Muriel Regan, 64 of Deloro, which collided with a second vehicle driven by Elgin Ellis, 30, of Marmora. Mrs. Schroder was treated for a broken rib at a doctor's office. Damage to the two vehicles amounted to about $600.

The Rainwatcher

An umbrella can be a welcome piece of job equipment — particulary when the job is rain-watching and it's one of the wetter summers in years. Dave Middleton, city utilities employee, this morning checks rain gauge outside Belleville filtration plant which keeps local weather records. By that time 2.04 inches of rain had fallen for peak summer month of July — and it was still raining.

Convalescent Home Opening in Trenton

TRENTON — A 50 - bed convalescent home now under construction in this town is expected to admit its first patient within four months.

The 12,000 square foot structure on the east end of Bay Street overlooking the Bay of Quinte will cost between $250,000 and $300,000 and will serve the entire Quinte area.

The nursing home will offer a wide range of diets, physiotherapy and occupational therapy facilities, said a spokesman for Trent Valley Lodge Ltd. which is undertaking the project.

When filled the home will be staffed by between 30 and 35 people, mostly women.

Administrator of the home will be Ernest Gauthier who at present operates Century Manor in Brighton.

T. L. Smith, the Kingston contractor awarded the job, has already laid the foundation for the one - storey structure which will have a brick veneer and metal exterior.

Design of the building is such that extensions can be added when required.

Holidayers Rainsoaked

TWEED (Special) — Rain, rain, go away . . .

That is the refrain being sung by holidayers in the Tweed district.

Forestry department officials at Tweed say that the normal rainfall for July is 2.62 inches but so far this month 3.41 inches of rain have fallen.

But the wet weekend didn't completely discourage area campers.

Bon Echo Park on Lake Mazinaw north of Kaladar saw 2,500 visitors on Saturday and Sunday for a total attendance of 5,000.

Sea Cadets On Course

TRENTON (Staff) — Sea Cadets from here and Belleville took to the air Saturday night, flying to the naval station at Cornwallis, N.S., for a two - week seamanship - oriented course.

The representatives of the Quinte area were joined by groups from Napanee, Kingston and Gananoque at CFB Trenton for the flight to the east coast in a Hercules transport. There were 51 sea cadet personnel aboard the aircraft.

While away, the cadets are engaged in learning traditional navy know-how and in the evening they study a subject of their choice to do with sailing for two hours. They return July 31.

At the present time there are 35 cadets from RCSC Quinte at Belleville at both Quadra, B.C., and Cornwallis, N.S., attending summer classes for bandsmen.

No Carping on This Catch

So maybe a carp isn't the loveliest fish in the Bay of Quinte. But when it's the biggest you've ever hooked that's all that counts. At least that's the way David Dupont, 14 (left) and Martin Harris, 11, feel about the nine-pounder it took both of them to land with an ordinary hook and worm near the Foster Avenue shoreline.

More on Pollution

Pollution, as almost everyone must be aware, is a problem of the first magnitude; the mystery is that it has taken governments and public around the world so long to catch up with its existence, let alone its terrible implications.

Scarcely a day passes that some new and dreadful evidence of environmental blight is not uncovered. In this region for example there is arsenic reported seeping into the Moira River, from tailings on land near Marmora owned by an Ottawa smelting and refining company. The firm is objecting to a proposed Ontario Water Resources Commission move requiring it to pay the cost of curbing the pollution, on the grounds that it stems in part from mining operations — by companies long since defunct.

The firm has a point there, but maybe some cost sharing agreement can be worked out with the government. Certainly the job must be done.

The dilemma of William Hawthorne of Madoc is another facet of the problem. The resort operator says that lake pollution is forcing him to close his Crystal Beach facilities in September. He blames the water resources people and the government for inaction in a state of affairs he says has been building up over the past six years.

The ramifications of pollution then are widespread. The current issue of Weekend Magazine discusses the plight of St. Lawrence fishermen stripped of their livelihood by mercury contamination of the river and the problem is also touched upon in an article in the current issue of The National Geographic Magazine by editor-in-chief Melville Bell Grosvenor. With a crew of old personal friends Mr. Grosvenor cruised 2,500 miles of U.S. and Canadian waters in the ketch White Mist. It was a trip concerned principally with historical aspects of the Hudson and St. Lawrence rivers, but a picture entitled "With Afton" illustrated this other, latter-day threat to the environment.

This is further eloquent testimony of the extent of pollution in our waterways, not to mention that of the land and in the air. Despite the efforts of governments and at least some aroused citizens, it is plain that the witness local clean-up campaigns in the Trent and Moira rivers, and attempted curbs on motor traffic in cities like Toronto and New York) the economic cost of pollution problem is frightening. But fight it we must continue to do, at the individual and administrative level.

A Look at History

"The sensible, sophisticated men and women who met in the salons of 18th century Paris were the precursors of revolution in politics, and in pursuit of their ideas, Sir Kenneth, Clark visits the great palaces like Blenheim, and Versailles, Edinburgh and the hills of Virginia where Thomas Jefferson made his home in the 1760s."

Thus ran the preamble from the television guide concerning a recent program in the continuing series "Civilization" series with Sir Kenneth Clark. A man of the world himself, Sir Kenneth is one of those scholars who can illuminate the most seemingly banal subject.

History, geography and culture all come alive in Sir Kenneth's all-encompassing approach to the panorama of our heritage. In well-bred tones which are the essence of qualities mated by the many sources of our society, Sir Kenneth is eloquent of earlier, more aristocratic times.

If we know more about the universe today, in terms of academic knowledge, we seem to have taken leave of our senses in other ways. If people are more "involved", politically, they are at the same time less compassionate at the ordinary human level. Sir Kenneth brings to life some of the qualities of man that society seems to have lost.

It would be interesting to hear his opinion of our own day, with its many stresses and strains, its baffling divisions, its concern with such matters as drugs, generation gap and so on. Perhaps the series will conclude on such a note. Meantime it is a welcome relief from the transitory and often hysterical-sounding affairs of daily life.

Real Troopers

We wonder if the British army is considering some new campaign medals. Certainly a soldier must be more versatile than ever these days. We can imagine a soldier telling his family and friends: "this one is for Ulster . . . and that one is for the dock strike . . . !"

Seaway Tragedy

Navigation Aids and Modernization are Twin Concerns

Ottawa Journal

The sinking of the "Eastcliffe Hall" near Cornwall with the loss of nine lives calls for the inquiry which Transport Minister Jamieson has now ordered. It may be only an unhappy coincidence that six of the St. Lawrence Seaway accidents in the last eight years have involved ships of Hall Shipping Ltd. Yet the inquiry should take a good look at both the navigational equipment of the company's fleet and the navigational aids along the waterway.

Seaway accidents have declined since the early years of 1958 and 1959 when so many mishaps blighted the opening years of the "greatest waterway in the world." The Seaway Authority had to impose regulations requiring oceangoing ships — the salties — to provide adequate equipment for canal traffic.

In the past 10 years the style of Great Lakes shipping has undergone a transformation. Gone are the fleets of 100 to 300-foot canallers which once plied the route between Thunder Bay and Montreal. Now, with fewer ships, the giants of the industry — Upper Lakes, Canada Steamships Lines, Hall, Paterson, Scott Misener — continue to set new tonnage records. It is as though they looked at the smallest lock in the system (about 800 feet) and built ships to fit.

The new 800 and 700-foot bulk carriers come from the shipyards supposedly with the latest in navigational aids. Have the built-in safety features of the new ships deterred the Seaway Authority from modernizing the Seaway to handle the older ships adequately? That is one of the questions the inquiry should answer.

The Seaway is undergoing serious economic difficulties. Its tolls are not bringing in enough revenue to cover business. Perhaps the basic problem continues to be the different degree of significance it has for the two nations it serves.

From the start it was not hard to convince Canadians (except Maritimers) of the Seaway's importance. It touches our largest population centres and it handles some of our most important exports — wheat, potash, newsprint and ore.

The U.S. supporters of the Seaway have a tough problem: always bad. It is hard to persuade a businessman in California, Virginia or New Orleans that federal funds should be spent to serve only half a dozen states along the northern border.

Canadian - American agreement to continue improving and developing the Seaway is necessary if the waterway is to handle ever growing transportation needs of primary industries of both countries.

Perhaps the new emphasis on pollution control can be the impetus to action. The "Eastcliffe Hall" had a cargo of pig-iron and there is no danger of pollution. Such are today's values that had the ship been filled with oil the dismay at its sinking might have been greater than that over the loss of human life! But if the spectre of oily beaches from Sault Ste. Marie to Seven Islands leads to a safer and better Seaway, there will be no quibbling about motives.

A bomb attempt on Hitler's life failed 26 years ago today—in 1944—as the remnants of the German "opposition" sought to bring about a coup d'etat. The fact that he had escaped death was unknown to the conspirators, who went about implementing their plan. They were quickly rounded up and executed. Hitler was frightened by the attempt, and instituted his last and most savage purge in which thousands of persons were shot. . .

1981—New York reported about 200 deaths as a result of an intense heat wave in the eastern United States.

Man—It's Discrimination!

Letter to The Globe and Mail

Mini — midi — or maxi? This is the question of the hour currently perplexing the fashion conscious woman.

As an ardent admirer of the fair sex, and Women's Lib notwithstanding, I believe the majority of young — under, 35 — ladies dress to please the opposite sex; or at least that portion of it that most particularly concerns them. I would therefore like to suggest that all concerned men make their feelings known in no uncertain terms concerning midi and maxi fashions, and not them up for what I consider an excessively ugly attempt by the designers to boost their flagging sales.

I call upon all red-blooded males to join me in rescuing the supreme sacrifice: ignore and repudiate all women, however desirable otherwise, who are misguided enough to be seen wearing any dress or skirt which covers the knee. Down attire only excepted.

Simon M. Turner.

Newspaper for the Indians

Kingston Whig-Standard

True to their newly-acquired stance of alert self-concern, the Indians of this country are now in possession of a newspaper. The First Citizen, which recently moved its editorial offices to Toronto, is edited and published by Fred Favel, himself a Cree Indian. The first Toronto edition contained a full-issue feature called Red Paper — CitizenPlus, a copy of which was presented to Prime Minister Trudeau.

That edition was prepared by the Indian chiefs of Alberta and contained counter-proposals to the Government's White Paper on the Indian Affairs Act.

We sincerely hope that Mr. Favel is able to enlarge his paper to the point where it has national circulation. This is his goal. So far he has been able to meet his expenses. It will be hard going for him.

There is one thing Mr. Favel doesn't want and wouldn't accept — any kind of subsidization or other help from any level of Government in this country. That would be fatal because it would simply be another example of how the white man succeeds in making Indians dependent. Once you give them help — especially financial help — you call the tune. Speaking of this, the editor and publisher said that he never asked the Government grants or charity in any form and will continue to make his own way.

We wish him good luck and commend his staunch attitude. Also, we are sure that there are many Canadians who don't happen to be Indians themselves, who will join us in these good wishes for the future of the Indian newspaper for Canada.

OPP's Part in Seaway Rescue

Cornwall Standard-Freeholder

The Ontario Provincial Police constitute one of those police forces which goes around making friends even while handing out tickets. That much of this is due to a carefully nurtured public image goes without saying; the OPP are very much aware of the value of public relations.

But one thing public relations can never do is substitute for efficiency and resourcefulness . . . especially when the chips are down.

Well, the chips were down early last week on the St. Lawrence River near Upper Canada Village, where 12 men fought to save the small grave which had taken nine of their friends and fellows in the sinking of the Eastcliffe Hall. A quick-witted motel owner, Mrs. Walter Wells, had heard their cries for help after the sound of the ship striking a reef awoke her. She telephoned the OPP detachment in Morrisburg, to inform them something was wrong on the river. And, as she said later, it seemed almost no time at all before an OPP cruiser was there.

Within an hour they had pulled to safety every one of the 12 survivors. Within two hours, a smoothly - coordinated program to recover the bodies of the victims, identify them and notify next - of - kin was under way.

Throughout, these were the same OPP we have grown to expect to encounter, police, friendly and helpful. They are out being officious and willing to make an all-out effort when an all-out effort was required. You had only to look at the exhausted faces of the OPP divers as their day ended to see that.

Many people helped out, of course. But it was the OPP to the rescue when they were most needed, and they deserve a "Well Done" for their effort.

Museum to be Expanded

The Bancroft Times

The Bancroft Historical Museum has opened for the season with Mrs. Olga Burgi as custodian. This century old building has attracted over 4,000 people each year and has been an interesting and educational place to see.

The museum is lucky to have as a donation, three beautiful wood carvings by Mr. Percy Taylor. These carvings depict aspects of logging operations of 100 years ago and how it was life - like form, the tools and equipment used long ago. Mr. Taylor made the carved figures of the lumbermen into likeness of real persons, each doing what he used to in real life lumber work. Mr. Taylor has also written an interesting document tracing the history of lumbering in this area. This exhibit is at present in the large rooms downstairs in the Museum, pending being moved to a better and more suitable location in the building. The carvings are well worth a visit alone.

Plans are being laid for an expansion of the Museum, an old fashioned Pole Barn will be erected to show antique farm machinery and equipment. Pictures will make use of the York river with an old fashioned water wheel and a caplan unit which was obtained from the Rathbun Lumber Company farm and is now in safe keeping at Mr. Taylor's until room can be found for its display.

Crash-Cushion Device Probed

Regina Leader-Post

The automobile industry and the United States department of transportation are having a limited success at the time it will take to develop a highway safety device known as "air bags" in cars.

The department has set 1973 as the year by which all new cars must be fitted with the device. The safety measure consists of a plastic bag which is inflated instantly in the event of a crash, cushioning the driver and front-seat passengers. Afterwards, the device can be instantly deflated.

Difficulties with the practical application of the device are still being experienced, manufacturers report — including the ear - shattering shotgun - like report when the bag is inflated. There is also the danger of the device being inflated when it should not be.

One manufacturer has suggested a radar - like device which would activate the safety sequence immediately prior to a crash. This, it said, would limit the extent of the explosive nature of the inflation process.

Many top executives of the automobile industry, however, have opposed the department's 1973 deadline as unrealistic. Two of the largest manufacturers said it would take 12 years to perfect the device.

John Volpe, the United States secretary of transportation, answering criticism from manufacturers, said the air bags work. He has observed a first-hand how effective they are.

It is interesting to note that the manufacturers want 12 years to develop the safety measure. Many may consider this a somewhat slow pace, compared with the more nimble President John F. Kennedy gave for the development of a rocket to the moon.

Minis Versus Saris

The Womenfolk Of Canada and India

John Robinson in The Hamilton Spectator

Canada is a great girl-watching country with great scenery, thanks to minis, being placed on the legs. India is great girl-watching country too, but you seldom get a leg except on the end of a tourist. And what a shocker those female tourists must be in India, even in the rural areas.

Talking of women, and it is a magnificent subject, Indian women are delightfully feminine — no shorts, no slacks, no high-heels. But ah the serfs. Black oil, tar or cotton or what-ever, they are a sight to see, whether the pert young lass per and middle class babes or by women with pots or wicker baskets on their domes.

If you want to learn how to walk gracefully, walk around India for more than a week. You'll smash a few pots but eventually you will learn how to glide rather than walk. And believe me, women were made to undulate over the landscape.

Another Side of Life In Ulster—Vacation For A 17-year-old Invalid

Jim Watson's gift to the boy, a trip to Ireland and, perhaps, a chance to meet a young lady penpal, goes beyond generosity and unselfishness.

Counter to Trend

Unemployment rose last month to 529,000 from 513,000 at mid-May, running counter to the usual trend of lower unemployment in June, the manpower department and the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today. Because of the larger labor force, the number of unemployed as a percentage of the total work force remained unchanged in May and June at 6.1 per cent. A big influx of students into the labor force looking for summer work was mainly responsible for the increase, though unemployment remained high among other workers as well.

No Clear Indication Seen of Intent Of B. C. Workers as Deadline Reached ther action the government would take if unions defied the back-to-work order.

"I am not making any threats, but the parties involved are aware of the law and of the consequences of defiance of the law. I can't speak for the unions, but I express the hope of the government that the citizens of the province will recognize that there are situations where the public interest must come first.

"We have had threats of general strikes in the past, particularly when this legislation was passed in 1968, but the public must realize that the government can't succumb to such threats."

He said the dispute has resulted in a payroll loss of $60,000,000, delayed essential school and hospital construction and "became a major contributor to the serious unemployment situation."

"Every attempt has been made to settle the disputes through free collective bargaining, but unfortunately without success," said Mr. Peterson.

He intervened a month ago after talks with other mediators had broken down and started both sides in round-the-clock negotiations. When that failed, Mr. Peterson told contractors to let their lockout and unions to go back to work within a 10-day deadline.

They would be able to negotiate freely without government intervention for 60 days as well as work resumed, he said. The 393-member construction Labor Relations Association ended the lockout a week ago, but the unions refused to return.

The deadline expired Friday at midnight and, Saturday, the government invoked sections 18 and 21 of the Mediation Act and ordered them to return.

Section 18 enables the government to stop an existing strike or lockout and order work to resume "to protect the public interest and welfare." Section 21 gives employers and employees 24 hours to comply.

Penalties for non-compliance are fines up to $1,000 for individuals, up to $10,000 for companies, unions or organizations and daily fines up to $150 if the defiance continues.

Anyone who hinders or obstructs the three-man mediation commission, which was set up to settle labor disputes when the act was passed, may be fined up to $500 or three months' imprisonment or both.

The order passed by the cabinet Saturday instructs the commission to investigate the dispute between ICA construction and cement companies and 28 unions and union locals. It is to recommend settlement terms, which will be binding on both sides.

Mr. Peterson said the back-to-work order does not stop the parties from reaching their own agreement, nor from agreeing mutually to adjust any decision by the B.C. Mediation Commission once it hands down settlement proposals. But without mutual agreement for changes, the proposals would be binding.

Six unions had signed contracts with the CLRA before Saturday's government order, while two more, teamsters and carpenters, said they would return to work without a contract.

These two and the electricians, boilermakers, machinists, glassworkers, ironworkers, painters and cement masons were expected to report for work.

A last minute agreement was announced Saturday by the CLRA and the cement masons' union which provides an increase of $1.14 over two years on a present scale of $4.66, or about 12 per cent a year. In other construction unions, hourly rates range from $4.07 to about $6.80.

Friday, Mr. Haynes said that the compulsory mediation laws are "so bad, so unbearable, and so impossible" that if they are in force, labor is going to have to violate them "and we are ready to pay the penalty."

"We feel so strongly about the legislation and about compulsion that if we have to go to jail that will have to be."

F. G. Peskett, president of the B.C. Employers Council, described the federation announcement as a "statement bordering on anarchy." The council, a recently-organized group, represents most employers in the province.

Mr. Haynes, whose federation represents 140,000 workers out of a B.C. labor force of close to 800,000, told a reporter that people in the B.C. labor movement have been "pushing for a general strike for a long time.

"We're trying to avoid it and we hope it will be avoided. But if—and that's a big word—if Mr. Bennett doesn't look at this thing and appreciate the situation and if people are jailed, it can lead to the kind of thing you're talking about [general strike]."

Also today, Mr. Justice Nathan Nemetz of the B.C. Court of Appeal is to begin his inquiry into the dispute between 114 coast forest companies and 28,000 members of the International Woodworkers of America.

"I've just been catapulted into this matter and I first want to determine what the problems are," he said. The IWA wants an hourly raise of $1 on a base rate of $3.12.

The industry, represented by Forest Industrial Relations Ltd., is asking that wage demands be suspended for one year, with any increase made retroactive six months.

Meanwhile, the 5,000 members of the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada have set a strike deadline of 8 a.m. Friday, following breakdown of negotiations Saturday.

Union president Fred Mullin said the union broke off talks with the Pulp and Paper Industrial Relations Bureau after 17 "fruitless days of negotiation." The union's members work at pulp mills at three Vancouver Island centres, one town in the East Kootenay, at Prince Rupert, Prince George and Woodfibre, near Vancouver.

Mr. Mullin said the bureau's latest offer of 16 per cent over three years was "ludicrous, considering the inflationary trend." Two international pulp unions with a combined membership of 8,000 also have served strike notice on B.C. mills without setting a strike date.

There was one bright spot. About 1,300 hotel workers in the lower mainland and Vancouver voted about two-thirds in favor of a new two-year contract, ending a five-week deadlock.

They received 58 cents an hour over two years, with Fraser Valley bartenders getting a nickel extra to bring them more into line with their Vancouver counterparts.

Last week, Dominion President J. C. Landberg joined the Consul-General of Holland in Montreal to meet twenty two young Canadians and wish them bon voyage as they boarded the plane that will take them to Holland for a ten-day visit. The Dutch official gave a short talk reminding them that it was the twenty-fifth anniversary of VE-Day and the Hollanders would be only too happy to be able to be hosts to the sons and daughters of the gallant Canadians who played such an important role in the liberation of Holland.

He went on to say that his most fervent prayer was that they would never have to face the dangers and miseries of such another terrible conflict. He expressed the belief that they would thoroughly enjoy their short stay in Holland and said he would be on hand to welcome them and the twenty two Dutch youngsters who would accompany them on the return trip for a visit to Canada under the ANAVET sponsored plans for helping the youths of the world to meet and get to know one another for better understanding. He also thanked the Dominion President and asked him to convey his most sincere appreciation to all members of the association for organizing such a worthwhile project and hoped it would be the success that is anticipated.

MR. AND MRS. FRED B. ALBERT

Albert – Bowers

On Saturday, July 11, 1970, Father Stitt officiated at the wedding ceremony in the Church of St. Michael the Archangel, when Jo-Anne Mary Bowers, daughter of Mrs. Frances Bowers of Toronto and Mr. Edward Bowers of Belleville was united in marriage to Fred Balkely Albert, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Albert of Tweed. Wedding music was provided by Miss Dorothy Grant who also accompanied the soloist Robert Barkie.

The bride given in marriage by her uncle Samuel Domenico wore a full length gown of nylon organza over taffeta, featuring a Swiss embroidered bodice and full length sleeves with tight fitting cuffs adorned with matching embroidery. The same embroidery was carried around the back of the gown and around a double width at the hemline. The waist at back was highlighted with a detachable train also carrying out the embroidered effect. Her floral headdress of nylon organza with peau de soie lovers and encrusted with seed pearls was caught to a three-tier nylon tulle veil.

The bridesmaids, both cousins of the bride, Miss Josephine Domenico of Grafton and Miss Denise Meeks of Stirling, junior bridesmaid Miss Elizabeth Way of Tweed were dressed identically to the maid of honor but in the new butter-cup shade. All wore headdresses of straw bockrum seed pearl centres and rhinestone on self ribbon with short veils, and carried nosegays of mums to match their dresses. The flower girl was dressed identically to the maid of honor and carried a basket of mauve colored mums to match her dress.

Gary Akey of Tweed was groomsman and the ushers were Joseph Brousse of Belleville and Paddy McCue of Toronto.

At the dinner followed by a reception at the Knights of Columbus Hall, the bride's mother welcomed the guests wearing an A-line empire styled dress in pearl grey Indian silk embossed with grey and blush pink French lace, while accessories and a corsage of pink sweetheart roses. Assisting was the bridegroom's mother who wore a mauve dress with matching lace coat, bone white accessories and a corsage of white carnations.

On return the couple will reside in Tweed.

YOU CAME A LONG WAY BABY — Pamela Westwood has made it in a man's world. Working first in the personnel department of a large company, and then as girl-Friday for a person nel consultant firm, she has become a partner in a management consultant company with a little luck and a lot of brains. But everything has its price and she admits that the effort involved has turned her life topsy-turvy. (CP Photo)

Management Consultant Job Exciting Switch

TORONTO (CP) — It's a long way from girl Friday to management consultant, but that's the route Pamela Westwood's career has taken.

She says the effort involved has turned her life topsy-turvy, but she thinks the results are worth it.

"There's a challenge and excitement at work, and of course, the money.

"It turns me around from the typically happy female. For me the job is the goal.

"I'm still a bit dazed by the whole thing—it happened so fast. It has invited me into situations where I could become a shareholder.

"It's a future-type thing that doesn't have to stop anywhere. It's atypical. It isn't dramatic, but still, it's a 'Look what happened'."

Mrs. Westwood worked first in the personnel department of a large company. With brief stops between she went from there to her girl-Friday job in a personnel consultant company. That was the job that led to her opportunity.

"I was learning how to score tests on personnel appraisal tests. I was the inside person, so I learned some company structure. I did some of the executive research work.

"What is training? One part of it is formal education; the other is environmental, on the job."

When her employer and another consultant formed a new firm, Hickling-Johnston Ltd., Mrs. Westwood began working with it.

She says the firm uses a team approach in its work, and about three years ago she was asked if she would like to try her hand as part of the team. Her special area is described in a company brochure as organizational development, training programs, compensation and job evaluation.

"We have on board such people as an economist, an industrial psychologist, a labor relations expert. Then we have a mix of us that work in two basic areas. One is compensation, fringe benefits, money. The larger area is organizational development.

"We had never thought about whether we could get acceptance having a woman out in the client world. It was th old status-of-women thing. I said if I've got support here and protection if things go sour in terms of my own ego, I'd like to try it."

She began by sitting in on management training seminars with client firms, and things went well.

"I was getting acceptance as a competent female, rather than a five-foot-eight blonde."

After some serious thought about what area she would like to specialize in, Mrs. Westwood began taking courses to get the academic qualifications she wants. She hopes eventually to be able to write Canadian Institute of Management Consultants exams.

Mrs. Westwood, who is divorced, says her drive for success has made her life unlike the lives of many other women.

"Because I'm a woman I feel I have something to prove. Maybe that's a good tension.

"If I were starting now it might be impossible because I have no university degree. I'm taking it at night because I feel three paces behind somebody coming off a platform with an MBA (master of business administration).

"With night school, traveling, reading time, you totally lose the nine-to-five concept. It puts a real onus on you that business does come first rather than social life vis-a-vis dating or golf."

Women Should Stay Feminine

PARIS (AP) — Gabrielle Coco Chanel leaned forward, eyes flashing: "Fashion should go down into the street but I don't want it coming up from there."

The designer, who will show her fall and winter lines next week, was talking about the way women look — and men too.

"I do not scandalize the world. I am the enemy of eccentricity, and I am most depressed at the way people look.

"Don't the women realize their first duty is to remain feminine and please men? And not try to look 20 when they're 60? Or like a long-haired kid? Why do they do it?

"The men are just as bad. Believe me, at my age I'M NOT looking for a lover. But if a long-haired hippie would approach me to make love I would send him packing.

"While they were redecorating my apartment, I had to sit in the lobby of the Ritz which put people stroll by. I have seen every skirt length, from mini to midcalf — I am against midcalf because it cuts the leg in two.

"Pants. I have given the matter deep thought. Long ago, I was the first to wear pants and set the style . . .

"I did not like the idea of wet swimsuits. So I picked up four pairs of sailor pants . . . and wore them with my plain or striped top. The minute they saw me, they wanted them. But they had a big run-around to find any. I had bought the whole stock.

"Yesterday I thought about pants. I only approve of them for wear at home, or relaxing in the garden on a deck chair as I do at my little house in Switzerland. Or for a picnic on the grass. Or to keep warm outdoors; pants are just fine — the cold air creeps up your ankles."

Pants or no pants, Chanel wants women to remain feminine.

Points for Parents

Mother: "Johnny, come on in and get washed up for dinner."

Johnny: "My friends jazz me because you treat me just like a baby — telling me when to wash my hands."

A 10-year-old doesn't want to be treated like a little boy, but he still needs reminders now and then. The wise parent finds diplomatic ways to guide him.

Mother: "I'll come out on the porch and whistle when it's time to quit playing. That will remind you about cleaning up for dinner, and I won't have to tell you."

A Change Sometimes Better Than A Rest

By DORIS CLARK

"I'm so tired. I just can't go to that PTA meeting tonight," moans the busy mother of three active children.

She is tired, too, but it is not bone - weariness so much as a fatigue caused by stress, tension or even boredom. If she could just pull herself together long enough to get dressed and step out into the fresh air, she'd find that the PTA meeting would do her far more good than the small amount of rest she'd get at home.

The late Dr. Marion Hilliard, who was chief of obstetrics and gynecology at Women's College Hospital in Toronto, wrote:

"What a child needs most is a lively, lovable mother. If his mother has enough energy to be enthusiastic, enough inner vigor to give off some semblance of a feeling of well-being, a youngster can get along without a lot of other things."

Every mother owes it to her children, as well as to herself, to get out of the house once or twice a week to take part in some community activity, or indulge in a hobby or sport which she enjoys.

Not only is it a remedy for fatigue. It will make her into a contented, relaxed mother, as well as a well - balanced human being.

Dear Doris: I am working on a school assignment and need an article concerning food and nutrition in the future. Could you tell me where to write? — Food and the Future.

Dear Future: I hope there is a public library within reach. There are books about food, famine, hunger, survival. Magazine articles too. I'm sending you the names of three good books.

There are food manufacturers (names enclosed) who are constantly adding to their well-equipped experimental kitchens to develop tasty products out of available and nourishing, but as yet rather unexplored, food resources.

One such resource is soy beans. They also will answer enquiries.

Dear Doris: I am 21. I introduced my boy friend to my mother and she seems to approve but my problem is my stepfather. He has never met this boy but says he knows his parents and, to quote him, "They are nothing but trash."

If I continue going with him, I'm afraid it will cause a break between my father and me, but at the same time I don't believe the relationship between my boy friend and me is permanent. I think we are both just having a good time and enjoying each other's company for the present, not the future.

How much loyalty does a girl owe her parents? I know you won't tell me what I should do, but I would like someone to point out any alternatives I have from their point of view. — Going in Circles.

Dear Circles: Most people consider they owe loyalty to parents all their lives long — but complete obedience? At 21 parents owe their girl some confidence — confidence in her ability to choose friends.

Would you want your stepfather to keep to himself what he knows about your friend's family? Take this into account in making your judgment.

Daughter Begs Mother To Sign Letter

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am in a state of shock as I write this letter. I don't know what to think or where to turn. I am sending you a copy of the form I received from my daughter along with her fervent plea that I sign it. She has made it clear that if I refuse to sign this form she will disregard my wishes and do as she pleases when she is 21.

The form, as you can see, is printed on stationery from the offices of two physicians whose specialty is psychiatry. I took this form to my family doctor who checked with the American Medical Association. The doctors are indeed practicing medicine. The form reads as follows:

"This is to certify that I fully understand that my daughter, Miss ....., age 19, wishes to have medical procedure performed as that her sex may be changed to a male. I hereby agree to whatever hormonal, radio-therapy and surgical procedures are deemed necessary for this transformation. I am (am not) willing to accept financial responsibility for these procedures. Notary: ..... State ..... County .....
Date ..... Signature .....

Ann, I have known for three years that my daughter is a Lesbian and I have learned to live with the heartache, but the thought of her wanting to have this operation is more than I can stand. I telephoned the doctors and told them what I thought of them and their form. Of course I will not put my signature to it.

I am 45, divorced, and sell real estate. I haven't been a perfect mother but this blow has knocked the pins from under me. I have a married daughter, age 24, another daughter, 16, who says her sister is "sick" and a boy, 14, who says his sister is crazy.

If you have any words of wisdom that might wake up this girl please help me, for God's sake. — MRS. NO NAME MOTHER.

DEAR MOTHER: This girl needs more than waking up. Individuals who so desperately desire to be of another sex that they are willing to have their bodies mutilated are severely disturbed.

The best authorities of the transsexual operation are at the University of Minnesota and Johns Hopkins. These authorities are not enthusiastic about the results. When Dick Cavett attempted to drag me into a discussion of transsexual operations on his TV show several months ago, I refused to discuss the subject in the presence of a transvestite who was considering the procedure. I could say nothing supportive and didn't want to embarrass the guy who wobbled out in high heels, wearing a shoulder-length wig and spoke so glowingly of his scheduled wedding to "a wonderful fellow."

You can do nothing, Mother, except hope your daughter will co-operate in therapy that takes hold before she reaches her twenty-first birthday and can have the surgery without your signature.

Classical Musician's Life A Drag

TORONTO (CP) — Adele Armin has been playing classical violin since she was 4, and loves it, but she thinks the lot of the classical musician "is a drag."

The young classical musician's life is hard, with few rewards, and essentially lonely. Only a few achieve financial recognition and of these even fewer can lead a life of comparative ease.

"Hell," Miss Armin says, "the classical musician is not confronte with the grit of our existence as, say, the rock musician is. The classical musician has to invite upon himself personal disaster, because normally he's only faced with the four walls of his practice studio and a very attentive mother who brings him his meals."

Miss Armin began studying the violin with her father, later studied with Oscar Shumsky in Detroit, Josef Gingold at Indiana University and Lorand Fenyves in Toronto.

She has performed on the CBC radio and TV and made two tours across Canada with the Armin String Quartet.

"My way of exploration is in the study of occult teaching," she says. "Through this, I'm trying to fit classical music into today's world. Once you had only to learn notes, but that's not enough any more.

"When a piece of music is memorized, learned and studied, I try to bring into it the things I'm thinking about.

"But there are still too few classical musicians who dare attempt things in the realm of pot or sex. Most of them are afraid. And the ones who go into drugs don't go far enough. I don't see how that experience can relate to their music.

"I'm not selling any goals for myself because I don't know if the standard of goals is desirable. Being involved with classical music brings an over-involvement with institutions and institutional people which is often a complete drag."

She says that classical musicians "slays have to do what they are asked, and really, honestly, it's a drag."

"Not that the music itself is a drag, but the situation certainly is.

"We always must try to break out of this mould we're forced into. And we only can do that personally, by doing what we want to do."

Boundless Grace

HONG KONG (AP) — Travellers arriving here from Communist China report rural couples there are instructed to have "revolutionary marriages" — dressing in shabby clothes, proclaiming that "only the boundless grace of Chairman Mao Tse-tung has made the marriage possible" and feeding their guests grass, tree roots and bark.

Jelly Roll Served with Summer's Fruits

By MARY MOORE

On Saturday we made our annual trek to the Stratford Festival to see Hedda Gabler with Irene Worth in the title role. I enjoyed every nerve-tingling moment of it. On Monday morning on the radio a professor from York University criticized it beyond reason and I wondered if he and I had seen the same play.

No epic spoiled our picnic lunch in the park beforehand though and it is the Lemon Jelly Roll I made and served with the first strawberries of our season that is our feature today.

LEMON JELLY ROLL

4 large eggs — yolks and whites separated
¾ cup granulated sugar
1 tsp. vanilla
¾ cup sifted cake or all-purpose flour
1½ tsp. baking powder
¼ tsp. salt

In your large mixing bowl beat the egg yolks with the sugar until very thick and pale — about 10 minutes. Add vanilla and beat again. Remove beaters. Sift together the sifted flour, baking powder and salt and stir in until smoothly blended. Beat egg whites until stiff and fold in until blended. Butter generously a 15¼ x 10¼" teflon jelly roll pan. (If desired you may line it with buttered wax paper but I found it was not necessary.) If your pan is not teflon, line it on bottom with buttered wax paper. Pour in batter and smooth top. Bake at exactly 375 deg. Fahr. for 13 to 14 minutes. Meanwhile have ready a clean tea towel generously sprinkled with sifted icing sugar. As soon as cake is taken from oven loosen edges by gently running blunt - edged utensil around sides. Turn out on icing - sugar sprinkled towel. Roll up, enclosing towel in roll, and let cool. Unroll and fill with

Simplified Lemon Filling

½ cup plus 1 tbsp. sugar
2 tbsps. corn starch
⅛ tsp. salt
¾ cup boiling water
3 tbsps. bottled (or fresh) lemon juice
2 tbsps. margarine or butter

Mix together dry, in small pot, the sugar, corn starch and salt. Then stir in boiling water and lemon juice and cook stirring until thick. Remove from heat and add margarine or butter and let stand until it melts then stir in and cool. Spread on unrolled cake, thinly toward open end. Roll up cake, omitting towel this time of course. Roll rolled cake in towel to set. Serve on oblong cake plate.

Soviet Plane Missing On Peru Mercy Flight

HALIFAX (CP) — Search officials were hoping for a break in the weather today to aid planes scouring a vast section of the Atlantic between here and Iceland for a Soviet cargo aircraft missing on a flight to Peru.

The huge four-engine AN-22 aircraft has been missing since Saturday when it disappeared from radar screens at Keflavik, Iceland, 21 minutes after taking off for Halifax, a refuelling stop.

First word of the disappearance came late Saturday when another Soviet aircraft touched down here with its crew asking about the AN-22. They said it left Keflavik before them.

At least five long-range radar-equipped planes, one Canadian, one Danish and three U.S., searched Sunday.

Officials reported that icebergs added to the difficulties of radar searchint. The icebergs showed up on the radar screens of aircraft flying above the fog and the planes lost time checking them out.

A Canadian Forces Argus out of Canadian Forces base in Greenwood, N.S., and a U.S. C 130 out of Pease Air Force Base in New Hampshire concentrated their search along a path extending from Halifax northeast to a point south of Greenland.

A U.S. C-130 and C-121, based with the U.S. Air Force rescue unit at Keflavik, searched south and west of Iceland and a Danish Air Force C-54 searched off the Greenland coast.

Four Families 'Sit In'

NEW YORK (AP) — Four families—35 adults and children — held their ground today in a four-storey brownstone in Manhattan's Chelsea district, the newest members of an expanding squatters movement in the city.

About 40 neighborhood residents supported the occupation with an all-night vigil aimed at averting any forced eviction.

"We feel this is a just cause," said Carlos Figeroa, 26, who lives across the street.

The squatters — two black and two Puerto Rican families including 19 children — followed the lead of other groups on the east and west sides when they moved into the vacant West 15th Street building Saturday morning.

The landlord in this case had cleared out his previous tenants and planned to begin renovation today to convert the building into luxury apartments renting for $200 to $400 monthly.

Man Burns Himself To Death

NEW YORK (AP) — A man who burned himself to death in Times Square as scores of stunned passersby watched Saturday afternoon had been tentatively identified as Han Chi Young, 21, a former student at New York University.

Choiun Young, the youth's father, made the identification Sunday on the basis of a watch and keys found after the immolation, police said. Young said his son was a student until February.

The body was burned beyond recognition.

A witness said the youth had said, "I've had it. I've had it," before pulling two cans of flammable liquid from a bag, pouring them over his clothes and striking a match.

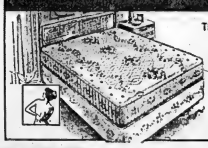
Champlain's Orillia Landing Is Re-enacted

ORILLIA (CP) — Actors re-enacted the landing of Samuel de Champlain on the shore of Lake Couchiching Saturday in festivities marking the French explorer's visit to the area in 1616.



Gerry Mountford, an Orillia salesman, played the part of Champlain and was paddled to shore in an Indian war canoe. He was greeted by Indians in a Huron village reconstructed for the occasion on the shore.

Canadians Finding Unusual Methods Of Winning Commonwealth Gold Medals

EDINBURGH (CP) — Forget the training manuals. Here are four proven ways to win a gold medal at the Commonwealth Games:

—Spend two years fighting off bursitis.

—If you prefer competing in the evening, go for the big one in the afternoon.

—Keep your mind off your troubles by nursing a punctured eardrum.

—Get bitten by a dog.

Canada picked up its unprecedented four Games titles in a single day in swimming and diving Saturday, won by athletes who did it the hard way.

Angela Coughlan, the bursitis sufferer from Burlington, Ont., survived a false start and splashed to a close victory over two Australians in the women's 100-metre freestyle.

In the men's race, George Smith of Edmonton conquered his dislike of swimming on the day shift, won the men's 400 individual medley comfortably and grumbled because he had not gone faster — 4:48.87.

Beverly Boys of Pickering, Ont., with her left hearing ear firmly taped, easily topped the field in women's springboard diving as Jan Carruthers of Edmonton finished second and an Australian a barely beat out Nancy Robertson of Pickering for the bronze medal.

And Bill Mahony of New Westminster, B.C., still feeling twinges in an ankle nipped by an unfriendly Edinburgh dog, came from behind at the halfway mark to win the men's 200 breaststroke.

Australia, matching Canada's four victories in the pool, came up with the first world record of the Games as Karen Moras swam the 800 freestyle in 9:02.45, 0.55 seconds faster than Canada's mark she set earlier this year.

Olympic sprint champion Mike Wenden edged Ralph Hutton of Ocean Falls, B.C., in the men's 200 freestyle, for Wenden's second gold medal and Hutton's second silver of the Games. Both men swam Friday night when Australia edged Canada in the 400 freestyle relay.

Australians also struck gold Saturday in the women's 100 breaststroke and 200 individual medley to lead Canada 5-4 in the stiffest challenge their swimmers and divers have faced since the Second World War.

Over-all, Australia had nine gold medals to England's seven and Canada's four in the 24 events completed in two days of competition. In unofficial point standings, based on a 9-5-4-3-2-1 count for the first six placings in a final, it was Australia 178, England 131 and Canada 107.

The Canadian track-and-field team competed in eight events and came up with a silver medal from John Hawkins of Courtenay, B.C., in the high jump and a bronze from Carol Martin of Toronto in the women's discus, repeating her performance in the 1966 Games.

A couple competing for different countries both recorded the victory rostrum as Howard Payne won the hammer throw for England and his wife Rosemary took the women's discus for Scotland.

Another Scot, Lachie Stewart, frustrated Australian veteran Ron Clarke in the 10,000 metres, probably his last chance to add a Commonwealth or Olympic Games gold medal to the 18 world records he has set in distance events. Clarke was with the leaders most of the way but was unable to stay with the winner in the stretch.

Jerome Drayton of Toronto, who had hoped to run the field into the ground, forced the pace for the first eight of the 24 laps but eventually dropped back to finish fifth.

Clarke said he may run in the 5,000 metres "just for the heck of it" next Saturday in a last shot at a Games title, but he is at his best at longer distances.

Laurie Precham of Australia, the defending champion, cleared 7 ¼ in the high jump to edge Hawkins, who achieved his personal best of 6-11½. Rick Cutsell of Vancouver was fifth at 6-8, losing out in a bid for a bronze medal because he missed more jumps than two rivals who got up to the same height.

David Hemery of England, 1968 Commonwealth record-holder, won an expected victory in the 110-metre hurdles and the 100-metre sprints went to Don Quarrie of Jamaica and Rae Lene Boyle of Australia.

George Neeland of Thornhill, Ont., Brian Donnelly of Oakville, Ont., and Rich MacDonald of Toronto finished 4-5-6 in the hurdles and Stephanie Berto of West Vancouver, B.C., was seventh in the women's 100.

Noel Freeman won the men's 20-mile walk over Australian Bob Gardiner. Felix Cappella of Midland, Ont., Alex Oakley of Oshawa, Ont., and Heinz Merschenz of Toronto were eighth, ninth and 12th in the 21-man field.

Three Canadians had a rough passage in the heats of the 1,500 as Neeland, Donnelly and Oakley finished by the closely-packed runners.

Ergas Leps of Toronto and Bill Smart of Vancouver qualified for Wednesday's final but Norm Trerise of Vancouver missed out after getting involved in a shoving match with a Zambian runner who twice blocked his efforts to move up on the field.

Shut out in the pool and with only two gold medals in track and field, England recouped with victories by featherweight George Perrie and lightweight George Newton in weightlifting; and a sixth-consecutive title in men's team foil.

George Sousa's Hong Kong rink won the island's first gold of Toronto finished 4-5-6 in the lawn bowling competition, losing only one game and tying another in the 14-country round-robin bowls event. The Vancouver rink skipped by Tom Jarvis was sixth with a 7-6 record.

Jamie Paulson of Calgary reached the men's singles semi-finals in badminton and partnered Yves Pare of Montreal to the same stage of the men's doubles.

Bantamweight Joe Cooke of Vancouver was the only one of six Canadian boxers in action so far to win his first-round bout. Two had not yet entered the ring.

Boys Beats Games' Girls

EDINBURGH (CP) — Beverly Boys of Pickering, Ont., literally relaxed and had fun, won the gold medal for Canada in Saturday's windup of the three-metre springboard diving event at the Commonwealth Games.

"I didn't feel as confident of the three metre as I did next week's tower competition before this started," Miss Boys said despite her 422.87-point total—her highest ever in international competition.

Liz Carruthers of Edmonton picked up the silver for the Canadian team, but the threat of a clear sweep by Canada was doused when Bruce Rotlick, Vancouver, lost quarter-final match (eliminated).

Men's Doubles: Jamie Paulson, Calgary, and Yves Pare, Montreal, won three matches (qualified for semi-finals); Dave Charron, Toronto, and Rolf Patterson, Vancouver, received bye, won second-round match, lost in quarter-final (eliminated).

Pickering. Miss Carruthers scored 391.20.

She completed her performance with a forward 2½ somersault and a forward 1½ somersault with two twists.

"I didn't feel any relaxation of lonesomeness even though I had a good lead coming into the final," said the 18-year-old Boys who is a member of the Oshawa Athletic Club. "I felt I could have blown it."

She held a 23-point lead over Alison Drake of England after the preliminary seven-dive phase. Miss Drake wound up sixth.

Bev is the first Canadian to win the women's springboard since Judith Grimes in the 1954 Games at London, England.

For Miss Carruthers, it was the first big international competition, and she said she never experienced so much tension before.

"I wasn't just worried about myself," Miss Boys said. "I knew all of the time I was thinking about Nancy."

Jerry Webb of Oshawa, personal coach to Bev and Nancy, said Miss Robertson made only two poor dives during the three-day competition, and they cost her the medal.

Fresh Yankee Wins at Roosevelt

WESTBURY, N.Y. (AP) — Fresh Yankee, owned by Duncan MacDonald of Sydney, N.S. and driven by Canadian Joe O'Brien, won the $125,000 Roosevelt International Trot Saturday night at Roosevelt Raceway by a neck over France's Tidalgin Pelo.

O'Brien of Alberton, P.E.I. stalked Tidalgin Pelo and Une de Mai until the head of the stretch.

Then he pulled out into the middle of the track and pulled ahead to register his surprising triumph.

Tidalgin Pelo hung on to take second by a half length over Stylish Major of New Zealand, who closed fast along the rail to beat out Une de Mai by a head for the show spot.

Fresh Yankee, a bay mare picked up by MacDonald for $2,000 as an eight-month-old colt, trotted the mile last in 2:35 1-5 and paid $9.00, $5 and $3.00. Tidalgin Pelo, driven by Jean Mary, returned $8.00 and $6.60 while Stylish Major, a 25-1 shot reined by Willem Hudson, paid $6.40 to show.

Loses Last Bout

TORONTO (CP) — Cliff Chilcott of Toronto, winner of a gold medal in featherweight wrestling for Canada in the first British Empire Games at Hamilton in 1930, died in hospital Saturday.

Chilcott, an all-round athlete, rowed and played football for the Argonaut club during the 1920s. As a member of the West End YMCA, he coached Danny MacDonald of that club who won a silver medal for Canada at the 1932 Olympics in Los Angeles.

Davis Cuppers Against Wall

SAO PAULO, Brazil (CP) — Trailing 2-1 after weekend play, Canada needed a sweep in today's two singles matches with Brazil to win the Davis Cup Americanzone finals.

Canada dropped one match behind Brazil Sunday as Jose Edson Mandarino and Thomas Koch defeated Mike Belkin of Montreal and John Sharpe of Toronto in the doubles match 6-3, 3-6, 9-6, 6-4, 6-3.

In the first singles matches Saturday, Belkin beat Mandarino 6-2, 6-4, 6-6 after Koch defeated Sharpe 9-7, 7-5, 5-7, 6-4.

Meanwhile, West Germany clinched the European Zone B final over Spain in Dusseldorf when Christian Kuhnke defeated Russia's Vladimir Korotkov 6-1, 6-2, 6-2 to clinch the victory.

The second singles was called because of darkness and rain in the Soviet Union, making the final score 3-2 for the Germans. Russian Alexander Metreveli won the first set 8-6 from Wilhelm Burgert. The second set was tied 5-5 when play was halted.

Rindt Edges Brabham In British Grand Prix

BRANDS HATCH, England (AP) — Jochen Rindt won a blazing duel with Jack Brabham when Brabham's car ran out of gas on the final lap Saturday, then came out on top in a dispute to be officially declared winner of the British Grand Prix.

Rindt powered his Lotus past Brabham in the movie-script finish, then watched his world driving championship lead totter for 3½ hours while an international jury conducted an inquiry after Brabham protested on an equipment technicality.

The jury found in Rindt's favor and the victory in this classic Formula 1 cars boosted Rindt's points to 45 in the race for the driving title. Brabham follows with 25 and defending champion Jackie Stewart of Scotland has 19.

Rindt zoomed past the sputtering racer of Brabham, its engine bone dry, to duplicate their close finish in the Monaco Grand Prix in May, but the 28-year-old Austrian was disqualified by race officials.

Rindt immediately filed a protest against the ruling and an inquiry was begun.

If the jury had ruled against Rindt, Brabham would have won the race, but the Australian, riving a car of his own construction, would have been over first in the driver standings.

The disqualification came when officials claimed the struts which support the aerofoils on Rindt's car had been bent before the race and then straightened afterward. Regulations say the struts must be straight.

Officials said that when the struts were straightened the aerofoils were higher than the 80-centimetre limit. The jury, however, ruled that the aerofoils were within the permitted limit.

Rindt covered the 80 first, or 212 miles, in one hour, 57 minutes and two seconds for an average speed of 108.69 miles an hour. Brabham, who barely finished, was clocked in 1:57:54.9 for a 108.18 m.p.h. average.

Denis Hulme of New Zealand was third in a McLaren, Clay Regazzoni of Switzerland fourth in a Ferrari, and Chris Amon of New Zealand fifth in a March.

Foy Slams Five Hits As Mets Keep Pace

Joe Foy slammed five hits in one game, including twohomers to give the New York Mets a 7-6 victory over San Francisco Giants Sunday after the Giants won the opener of a doubleheader 5-2.

Foy's five runs batted in during the game kept the second place Mets only two games behind Pittsburgh Pirates in the National League East after the Pirates downed the Cincinnati Reds 7-3.

In other games, the Chicago Cubs hammered Houston Astros 7-1; St. Louis Cardinals stopped Atlanta Braves 3-1, Philadelphia Phillies surprised Los Angeles Dodgers by sweeping a twinbill 9-4 and 4-2 and San Diego Padres beat Montreal Expos 6-4. Item last night.

Foy's throwing error in the first inning led to three unearned runs in a four-run inning. He made errors in the sixth and seventh too but the Mets escaped unscathed.

"I just messed them up," he said simply, but a teammate told him "it's lucky you were 5-for-5 or the boos would be roasting you."

Ron Swoboda of the Giants, honored in the second and singled in the fourth before Foy hit his fourth homer over the left field screen. He tied the score in the fifth with a run-scoring single.

Then in the seventh, Foy singled in the leading run and another scored on the play when Willie Mays let the ball get by him.

But three walks and John Stephenson's two out single tied the game at 6-6 in the seventh in the ninth, setting the stage for Foy's best, a 10th inning shot just fair over the right field screen.

The Giants won the first game with three runs in the seventh on Tommie Agee's second an hits by Dick Dietz and Jim Hart.

The Pirates used Bob Tolan's throwing error to beat Cincinnati. Matty Alou raced home from first base on Rich Hebner's single and the wild throw in the sixth inning to break a 2-3 tie. Three more runs in the eighth clinched it.

The Cubs scored six runs in the third inning as Milt Pappas stopped the Astros on five hits to run his record with the Cubs to 3-1.

Dal Maxville, a .192 hitter, singled in the tie-breaking run with two out in the eighth inning for St. Louis and, after winner Mike Torrez delivered his fourth hit of the day, Lou Brock doubled in another run. Torrez, winning his first game in three weeks, scattered eight hits.

The Phillies, running their winning streak to five games, stunned the Dodgers in the opener with eight runs in the last two innings.

The first three came in the eighth on Dave Johnson's homer. In the ninth, pinch-hitter Jim Hutto's first major league grand-slam homer provided four more.

Then in the second game, after Johnson's 11th homer had given the Phillies an early 1-0 lead, they broke a 2-2 deadlock again in the ninth on Mike Ryan's two-run shot, his first of the season.

San Diego scored four runs in the seventh inning, two on an error and a wild pitch, to beat Montreal in their first game, but the Expos came back with two runs in the ninth at Dick Nightcap on pitcher Dave Roberts' error and Jim Fairey's single to gain a split.

Angel Pair Prove Pitching Bargain

Pitchers Rudy May and Tom Murphy of the California Angels, both in the middle of twoweek midway training sieges, were flown into New York from California Saturday night at the cost of about $800 for two roundtrip tickets.

Sunday, they made the strategy payoff by leading a 5-2, 3-1 sweep of the New York Yankees that pulled the Angels to within 3½ games of the first place Minnesota Twins in the American League West division.

The Twins fell 3-1 before the Cleveland Indians and the fireballing pair of pitcher Sam McDowell, who retired 24 straight batters in one stretch.

Detroit Tigers swept Kansas City Royals 2-0 and 6-4 and moved to within three games of first-place Baltimore Orioles in the East. The Orioles split with the Chicago White Sox, winning 8-2 and losing 7-3. Boston Red Sox belted Oakland Athletics 9-4 and Washington Senators edged Milwaukee Brewers 4-3.

May and Murphy failed to finish but both gained victories.

May allowed just three hits and both New York runs and boosted his record to 5-6 in working seven innings in the opening game, while Murphy picked up his 11th victory against six losses in going five innings and yielding three hits and a run in the nightcap.

Ken McMullen belted an RBI single and a two-run homer for the Angels in the second game.

McDowell was touched for a wind-blown double by Cesar Tovar and Tony Oliva's RBI single in the first, then retired 24 straight Minnesota batters before Rich Reese beat out an infield hit with two out in the ninth. After Reese stole second, the Cleveland lefty ended the game by making Harmon Killebrew his 14th strikeout.

McDowell's 14th victory against four losses left him with Minnesota's Jim Perry as the AL's winningest pitcher this season. The strikeouts boosted his league-leading total to 97, and he also extended his league-leading total of innings pitched to 187.

McDowell got the only offensive help he needed when Craig Nettles belted a two-run homer in the third inning.

Norm Cash drove in both runs and Tom Timmerman got Joe Nuxhall out of a ninth-inning jam in Detroit's opening victory over Kansas City.

Trailing 4-0, the Tigers rallied to win the nightcap with six runs in the eighth, with two scoring on shortstop Jackie Hernandes' error and two on Don Wert's double.

Ellie Hendricks, Merv Rettenmund and Brooks Robinson homered as Baltimore's 14-hit attack with homers in the first-game route of Chicago.

Tommy John, the Baltimore relay, the White Sox started the second game with three runs, two on Bill Melton's homer and added a three-run clincher in the seventh after another rain delay for 34 minutes.

Boston smashed Oakland with nine hits in the first two innings. Rico Petrocelli led the way with a two-run homer and a three-run double.

A one-out, bases loaded ground single by Lee Maye against a special Milwaukee defense of five infielders in the ninth inning gave Washington its victory.

Raymond Happy With Move to Montreal

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Even though he is a Canadian, veteran relief specialist Claude Raymond was bemused last August when Montreal Expos picked him up on waivers from Atlanta Braves. Now he realizes how wrong he was to feel that way.

"Going to Montreal was the best thing that ever happened to me," Raymond, a native of St. Jean, Que., said here Sunday after choking off a San Diego rally in the ninth inning to give the Expos a 6-5 victory and a split of a doubleheader against the Padres. It was his 18th save of the year.

San Diego won the first game by the same 6-5 score.

"I hated to leave Atlanta," he said, "because I thought the Braves had a chance to win the pennant and I've always wanted to pitch in a World Series.

"But I wasn't pitching much for the Braves," said the 33-year-old right-hander, "and I wasn't in shape when I reported to Montreal.

"I didn't pitch very well at first and I knew what the other French-Canadians were thinking. They were saying, 'Is this the guy that Claude Raymond we have read about?'

Raymond is in shape this year and he says he knows that manager Gene Mauch has confidence in him. Raymond has a 3-3 record to go with his 18 saves, which means he has had a hand in 21 of Montreal's first 39 victories this year.

The veteran almost let a 6-4 lead slip from his grasp in the ninth inning of the second game Sunday when a single by Ollie Brown and a double by Nate Colbert put the tying runs on base with none out.

However, he retired Ivan Murrell and Ed Spelsio on popups, gave up an unearned run on an infield error, then got Al Ferrara to end the game with a grounder to second.

Bendale Rates Own Trophy Monopolizing Squirt Tourney

By RANDY DERRY
Staff Sportswriter

The Belleville Minor Softball Association has two trophies for presentation at the Annual Squirt tournament; one for the 'B' division champions and one for North Bendale.

North Bendale swept to their third consecutive 'A' division championship Saturday winning three games in a row including a 3-0 victory over last year's all-Ontario champs Cobourg in the 'A' finals and 6-0 win over this year's 'B' champs Willowdale.

Willowdale captured the 'B' championship with a 5-4 victory over the host Deacon Brother squirts.

The stage was set for the championship game between Cobourg and North Bendale as Cobourg breezed through their first games 10-4 and 11-3 over Belleville and Springbrook respectively. North Bendale reached the finals with a 4-1 victory over Pt. Perry.

Bendale hurler Barry Holt gave up just six hits while turning five and not walking a man in picking up his third win of the day.

Holts three victories plus pitching two shut-outs earned him the most valuable player award of the tournament. This is even more significant when one realizes that he is the regular short stop for Bendale but was forced into service on the mound when the first string pitcher came down with tonsilitis.

Davidson took the loss for Cobourg giving up five hits and fanning five.

The quality of this tournament was really good. We did not run into an easy team in the whole tournament," comments winning coach Jim Gough.

Willowdale used six Belleville errors and a lack of hitting to win the 'B' champion ship.

Willowdale's 5-2 lead after five innings was tested severely during the final two innings as Belleville staged a comeback. But the bases were left loaded both innings and the short.

Steve White fired the victory fanning nine batters and walking six. His two - hitter kept Belleville off the score sheet until their late inning rally.

Wilson Bulpit led the Mariners to their one-sided win over UIC pitching laggard with the loss for Belleville giving up three walks and the equal number of strikeouts. He also two walks and got 10 batters on strikes.

Carl Gauthier and Buck Rodgers suffered through a 23-hit attack by Moore's. They walked six and fanned three.

Catcher Clint Halladay also belted two circuit blows and added three singles. Larry Ell and Wayne Bowers were the other batsmen to produce for round - trippers.

Collins had three singles for the losing UIC team.

Where Did It Go?

North Bendale catcher Kougias fouls back this offering as his Cobourg counterpart Maloney stretches for the ball. North Bendale swept through Belleville's Squirt Tournament undefeated winning the "A" Championship for the third consecutive year with a 3-0 win over Cobourg.

Combines Pennant Hopes Narrowed by Intell Win

The Intelligencer narrowed any hopes that the CN Combines have of taking the Industrial League pennant as they wiped out an early 10-5 lead by Deloro Stellite to post a 13-10 win. The combines must now win all three of their remaining games, while counting in Mead Johnson to stop the Intell in their final match of the season.

In the other game played Monch's tightened the scramble for the final play-off position by pasting UIC 25-4. The Mariners now trail UIC and the Fire Department by one point in the battle for the final two playoff positions.

A seven-run explosion in the bottom of the sixth inning carried the Intell to their comeback win. A bases-loaded triple by Merv Thompson and Dave Feeney's two-run single were the key blows.

The losers jumped on starter Ron Culloden for all 10 runs on nine hits, two walks and two Intell errors. John Edwards fired three innings of one-hit relief to get the win.

The pair walked four batters and struck out an equal number.

Rick "Coco" Hay was a standout for the winners, preventing Deloro from adding to their early lead with a sensational one-handed catch in the second inning and scoring two of the Intell runs.

Dave Skelly led Deloro, banging out four singles in support of pitchers Gary Matier and Paul Trumpour. The losing hurlers gave up 11 hits and four bases on balls, while fanning seven men. Dennis Lane added a homer and single to the hitting attack.

Wilson Bulpit led the Mariners to their one-sided win over UIC pitching laggard with the loss for Belleville giving up three walks and the equal number of strikeouts. He also two walks and got 10 batters on strikes.

Carl Gauthier and Buck Rodgers suffered through a 23-hit attack by Moore's. They walked six and fanned three.

Catcher Clint Halladay also belted two circuit blows and added three singles. Larry Ell and Wayne Bowers were the other batsmen to produce for round - trippers.

Latta in Thick of Race

Latta moved into the thick of the fight for first place in the South Hastings League by blanking Read 3-0 Saturday. The two teams are now tied for second spot back of Plaza's Concrete.

Doug Gean started for the winners and was relieved by McTaggert in the third inning. They allowed only four hits, walking two and allowing third strikes past 10 batters.

Harold Pascoe lost a three-hitter, in which he walked two batters and fanned eight.

Scott McLaren got the game's only extra base hit, connecting for a double for the winners. Bob Smith and Doug Gean collected the other safeties.

Peewees Break Tradition

Belleville's CBRT peewee all-stars broke with tradition over the weekend and finding the home field a disadvantage in their 5-2 loss to Peterborough Saturday, but found road trips to their liking as they whipped Oshawa 14-6 the following day.

In a group II game Saturday Fosters Thurlow Peewees blanked Oronos 9-0 at Harmony.

Belleville's win over Oshawa came behind the 3-hit pitching of Billy Whalen who fanned five and walked twice that number. Whalen was a big gun at the plate too punching a triple, double, and single. Brian Fraser had a triple, double, and two singles and Paul Weese two singles to pace the CBRT hitters.

Oshawa's trio of hurlers Rob Maddock, Tim Thomas and Dale Stone failed to fan a Belleville batter while walking four. Gary Lewis was the best for Oshawa connecting for a double and single.

Clyde Roadley and Billy Whalen took the loss against Peterborough fanning seven and walking three, but only four hits by their teammates made the difference between victory and defeat. Ricky Cull, in Mike Burke, who was a callup from the bytes all year, Mike McClelland and Kevan Day all had singles for Belleville.

Peter Dettman went the distance for Peterborough fanning 13 and issuing 14 free passes. Dettman, John Courtney and Don Lacombe all had two singles for the victorious Lits in the field.

Ted Foster fired one hit ball for Foster's Thurlow team in their 9-0 win. He also blasted third strikes past 10 batters. Farley Vader with a double and a single led Thurlow at the plate.

T. Moffat was tagged with the loss for Oronos. Marc Murcer had a double in a losing effort.

The Belleville Lion Midgets used cloudy weather and rain stoppages to their advantage Sunday as they whipped their Port Hope counterparts 9-2.

Carm McCaffrey picked up the win for Belleville fanning 10 batters and walking only four, while firing two hit ball. Mike Goegan had a three run homer and a single to pace the Lion hitters. Paul Wolfe with a double and single and Barry Calkin with two singles were the other Belleville safety hitters.

There took the loss for Port Hope with relief help from Downey.

Fergus Lacrosse Tour in Town

The Belleville Memorial Arena and the Minor Lacrosse Association will be the hosts of over 30 boys tonight as the touring Fergus peewees and bantams stop in Belleville for exhibition games.

The Fergus teams are on a promotion trip across eastern Ontario and will be staying in Belleville overnight and playing two games. The boys are to be billeted in the homes of players in the Belleville house league.

The Belleville-Fergus games will precede a Quinte Lacrosse match between Trenton and Belleville. Total cost for all three games is 50 cents for adults and 25 cents for children.

Tough Racquet

Kingston's tennis supremacy was severely challenged as Belleville took a 14-8 lead in the first round of the eighth annual Doug Grant Trophy competition.

The home and home series between the tyke all-star Kingston opened yesterday at Belleville and will be continued at Kingston within the near future.

Belleville picked up their points on single match wins by Don Daulniers, Dr. Walcott, Rob Woodley, Jim Leggett, Doug Grant, Bernie Pope and Harold Hildebrand, plus Ron's double victories by Bill Belamy and Tom Finlay. Hodgins and Wayne Storms, Grant and Daulniers, Wigfield and Dr. Miranda and the Hicks-Pope team. Finlay and Schofield were victorious in the Ladies doubles event while in the mixed doubles Schofield and Walcott led a rain interrupted match 5-3 in the third set.

Bowerman Top Canadian

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Billy Casper believes in the theory of positive thinking. It helped him win the $150,000 Philadelphia Golf Classic by three strokes Sunday with a tournament record 72-hole total of 274.

The 39-year-old Casper started the final round leading by two strokes over the 6,856-yard Whitemarsh Valley Country Club course. After nine holes of the final round he trailed Dick Crawford by one.

"I made up my mind I had to make some birdies if I was going to win," Casper related after collecting the $30,000 first prize.

Casper made his birdies, four to be exact, for a four under par 32 on the back nine and a 68 for the day over the par 72 course. It was good enough to turn back by Crawford, and later Terry Wilcox.

Belleville's Gary Bowerman shot a final-round 70 for a 287 total, good enough to make him top Canadian in tournament worth $855. George Knudson, also of Toronto, was another stroke back and earned $780.

All Bahling of Toronto and Ken Fulton of Ste. Julie, Que., failed to make the cut after the first two rounds.

Casper put together rounds of 69-67-71-68 for a 14-under-par 274, two strokes better than the eight-year-old tournament's previous best.

Crawford helped Casper's cause when he went three over par on the 10th hole. He wound up in a triple tie at 279 with Bunky Henry and Frank Board.

The trio was-two-strokes behind Wilcox who took the $17,000 second-place money.

The victory boosted Casper's 1970 earnings to $103,448, third behind Lee Trevino and Dick Lotz on the money winning list. Casper also moved into second place ahead of Jack Nicklaus on the all-time money list, at $1,083,373 to $1,066,666. With previous victories this year in the Masters and Los Angeles Open, Casper became the first three tournament victor of 1970.

True Laird Paces Harness Field

While three was the first number for the Quinte Riding and Driving Club's Saturday night card, True Laird proved that number one was still number one.

The number three starting position in the harness racing nine-race event was good for four of the winners, but George Stratton's brown six-year-old gelding turned in the fastest time of the night with a 2:11.4 mile in the second race.

It was the fastest time ever for True Laird, who combined with Colvins Doyle to pay a daily double of $72.90.

A crowd of 1125 broke the existing pari-mutuel record by wagering a total of $25,333.00 on the nine races.

Prince Charles A Smashing Success on Washington Visit

WASHINGTON (CP) — For Prince Charles, his first visit to the United States was a smashing personal triumph, a virtuoso performance. He charmed everyone from the president to the press.

Sister Princess Anne, 19, didn't fare so well.

Charles' appropriate expression of fatherly amusement or enjoyment never failed him. True or false, he gave the onward appearance of loving every minute of it. By contrast, the press found Anne not to be the "swinger" they had expected.

Her at times sombre, bored, aloof, unsmiling manner was duly noted.

British newspaper men were quoted as saying she seemed to be "in a mood," and much was made of the incident in which she seemed to shake herself free as elderly Speaker John McCormack of the House of Representatives took her arm to guide her along.

Asked her opinion of the moonlight view of Washington, she snapped: "We never give interviews."

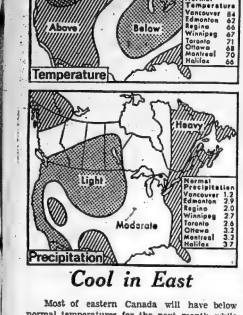
Still, many of the more thoughtful comments on Anne were more sympathetic than critical.

Most outspoken criticism centred on the Nixon families' planning for the three-day "private" visit that turned out to have all the split-second timing and trappings of the most rigorous state visit.

Whether by design or over-enthusiasm the Nixon girls were the prime social benefactors of the event, particularly Tricia Nixon, 24, who was photographed in dozens of outfits against backdrops of Washington backgrounds—always at Charles' side.

Sister Julie and her husband David Eisenhower, hosts with Tricia to the Royal pair, stayed comparatively in the background.

Princess Anne was pretty much the fifth wheel in the party. She didn't even have an escort for the centrepiece of the visit, the glittering White House dinner-dance for more than 500 guests Friday night.



While House spokesmen had said in advance—to squelch stories that a hunt was on for a suitable escort—that "this is not an escort situation." But on the night of the big-party Charles, escorting Tricia, made the grand entrance down the sweeping staircase to be greeted at the foot by the Eisenhowers—and Anne, alone.

However, she warmed up noticably during the rock-music dance and seemed to enjoy Saturday best of all, when she went off on an unscheduled auto tour of still riot-scarred areas of the city and of bodyguys in, the fashionable old Georgetown section.

Apparently Anne had looked forward to a carefree, informal three days here, after the rigorous visit in Canada, and would have liked to visit a horse farm, do some shopping, relax and take in a night spot or two. It was not to be.

Some accounts said Anne confided to a member of the British party that her apparent displeasure centred on the aggressive herd of American photographers and reporters following.

"Everytime I turn around, 20,000,000 reporters are on my heels and I can't get used to it," she was quoted.

Cool in East

Most of eastern Canada will have below normal temperatures for the next month while the west will be unusually warm. Temperatures in the Atlantic provinces will remain seasonable but precipitation is expected to be above average both there and in Quebec. The Prairies can look forward to dry mid-summer conditions while the rest of the country will have normal rainfall.

Washington Press Is Roasted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Prince Charles took it all in stride but Princess Anne, unaccustomed to all the bluster, was somewhat miffed with the everpresent reporters who hounded their steps as they wound up their first visit to Washington.

But, said a spokesman for the British embassy: "That's not something to make a fuss of. . . They thoroughly enjoyed themselves pretty much of the time."

Washington tourists, baseball fans and passers-by gave their applauding approval at a glimpse of British royalty. And President Nixon spent 80 minutes in private talks with the 21-year-old Charles at the end of the four late Saturday.

Princess Anne, 19, who had appeared mostly unsmiling in public, told the Nixons: "It has been fun."

She and her brother said smilingly farewell at the south portico of the White House and invited their hosts to Britain.

Tricia Nixon said she found Prince Charles charming and an excellent dancer.

But the British press wasn't impressed. One correspondent referred to gossip columnists as the witches of Washington. Another said the princess was bored.

And the general impression in London was that Anne was hounded because she didn't live up to Americans' impression of how a princess should act.

"Our message to the American scribes: Lay off Anne," says the Sunday newspaper, The People.

The Sunday Mirror says Anne has led a sheltered life and, on the visit to Washington, was "having to cope with all the stress and strain of keeping to demanding timetables of a royal visit."

The People's correspondent says Buckingham Palace blundered in arranging the visit. "Both Charles and Anne should have had careful schooling in American manners, or the lack of them, before being plunged into the Washington Cauldron," he writes.

"No member of the royal family has ever had to put up with rudeness such as they (gossip columnists) have shown towards Princess Anne."

Prince Charles managed to get along well while occasionally making a jolting remark at the press. A British embassy spokesman said Anne was bothered by the strangeness of it all.

"She puts on a straight face and keeps it there because at least she knows what she's got on," he explained.

But the Daily Telegraph says Americans just aren't used to public figures who behave naturally. Besides, the newspaper says: "Americans, after all, are foreigners."

"The royal pair had just come down from Canada. Did they sense a greater degree of two-way communication with the Eskimos there than with some of the folk on the White House lawn?

"It would not be entirely surprising," the Telegraph says. "Anglo-American relations have always been difficult. . . ."

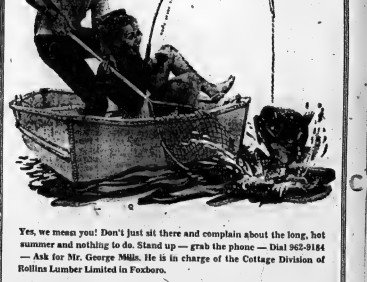
Big Changes Predicted In Report to Nixon

WASHINGTON (AP) — A special White House committee has told President Nixon the answers to the problems of the United States may involve a reduction in emphasis on college education, taxes on polluters and development of new cities to lure residents from crowded metropolitan areas.

Although noting predictions that the U.S. population may be stabilizing, the report said 70 per cent of the country's people probably will be concentrated on one-tenth of the land by the end of the century.



And half the population, containing the most-advanced and most-prosperous elements of the society, will live in three giant Metropolitan belts — Boston-Washington, Chicago-Pittsburgh and San Francisco-San Diego, the committe on national goals said in a 228-page staff report.

Few firm conclusions were offered in the report, entitled Toward Balanced Growth: Quantity with Quality. The committee said its suggestions were intended to stir public debate and generate concern in Congress.

One answer, the committee said, is the imposition of taxes on polluters.

And higher prices for the products that dirty the air and water would reduce households to alter their buying habits," the report stated.

Anniversary Marked by Rash of Attacks

SAIGON (AP) — The North Vietnamese and Viet Cong marked the 16th anniversary of the Geneva agreements on Indochina today with a rash of attacks in Cambodia and along Vietnam's demilitarized zone, and the first rocket attack on Saigon in more than two months.

One American was killed and nine were wounded in fighting below the DMZ. The United States recalated with the first B-52 raids in two weeks along the zone dividing Vietnam.

Fighting flared in eight areas of Cambodia, in a wide arc around Phnom Penh, the capital.

The South Vietnamese government said its infantrymen, bombers and artillery killed 69 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong in clashes near the provincial capital of Svay Rieng and the towns of Kompond Trabek and Tuk Meas, 40 miles south between Saigon and Phnom Penh. Six South Vietnamese were reported killed and 23 wounded.

A Cambodian spokesman in Phnom Penh said Viet Cong troops overran a small post at Strang, 21 miles southwest of Phnom Penh, but most of the garrison had slipped out of the village before the attack "so now we have the Viet Cong encircled."

The North Vietnamese and Viet Cong also struck anew at Cambodian forces of the Kirt Rom plateau, 45 miles west of Phnom Penh, which Communist troops had held for six days and from which they withdrew last Thursday after inflicting heavy casualties on the Cambodians.

The spokesman said fighting resumed Sunday around the burned-out summer home of Prince Norodom Sihanouk, the deposed Cambodian chief of state, and one Cambodian and two Viet Cong were killed.

The Cambodian spokesman also reported Communist troops fought their way into the outskirts of Kompong Chhang, a provincial capital 56 miles north of Phnom Penh, an seized a school. There was Sporadic fighting around Saang, a town 19 miles south of Phnom Penh, and Viet Cong forces made several attacks about 10 miles north of Kompong Cham, on the Mekong River 78 miles northeast of Phnom Penh.

Helicopter Accidentally Drops Ammo, Gasoline

The U.S. command reported that a cargo-carrying U.S. marine helicopter accidentally dropped a slingload of mortar ammunition and gasoline drums on a South Vietnamese hamlet 16 miles south of Da Nang Sunday, destroying 22 houses and damaging 25. Despite the extensive damage, only three South Vietnamese civilians were injured, the command said. The accident is under investigation.

The U.S. reported that five American helicopters were shot down in South Vietnam during the weekend, killing four Americans and wounding 11.

Men Conscripted To Battle Blazes

VICTORIA (CP) — More than 100 men were conscripted for firefighting duty in Princeton during the weekend after a chain of lightning strikes ignited 35 forest fires in tinder dry bushland.

RCMP drafted men from beer parlors, city streets and stopped local truckers in the area 150 miles east of Vancouver to press them and some of their vehicles into service.

Officials said it was the first time this year the draft power contained in the provincial Forest Act was used.

Under the act the British Columbia forest service may conscript men to help control any emergency duty and refusal to comply can bring fines up to $300.

More than 100 new fires sprang up in the province during the weekend, most of them in the Kamloops forest district, to bring the total of fires burning to more than 700.

Kamloops district forester A. H. Dixon said fires could become the worst year ever in his district. More than 1,000 fires have been reported there since the fire season opened May 1 and only half the normal precipitation has fallen.

Sixty-two new fires were reported in the district during the weekend, two of which were burning out of control in the Pasayten Creek and Lamont Creek areas.

In the Okanagan Valley, which is included in the Kamloops district, a pall of smoke hung over the whole area. A fire near Peachland burned through an estimated 14,000 acres of timber while the Rayleigh fire near Lake Country in the Kelowna area was mostly contained.

Southwest of Princeton in southern B.C., a new fire broke which had been raging for days in Washington state jumped across the border Saturday.

The Bear Mountain fire near Harrison Hot Springs, 80 miles east of Vancouver, flared up again Saturday, forcing evacuation of 20 summer homes.

The firefighting force in the province totalled 2,900 men, supported by 15 fire-bombing planes, helicopters, spotter aircraft, along with 200 bulldozers.

Farm Safety Week To Be July 25-31

The Canada Safety Council has declared the week, July 25-31, to be farm safety week.

In an interview Friday Brian Turner, OPP accident prevention co-ordinator presented some interesting farm safety statistics.

"A royal commission on agriculture study showed that 78 per cent of farm machinery fatalities involved tractors" he reported.

Human failures on the part of the operator account for 80 per cent of farm machinery accidents in Canada, according to the Canada Safety Council, and the victims are often children.

"Twenty two per cent of all farm machinery deaths involve children under 10 years of age," said Constable Turner.

The Canada Safety Council in a press release "urges farmers to help reduce these tragedies by refusing to take children along for rides on tractors."

The safety council points out "the death rate of farm residents is 20 per cent higher than for the nation as a whole" and "in 1969, 29 per cent of total accidents took place in rural areas inhabited by some 10 per cent of the population . . . A third of the people involved in these accidents are rural residents, giving them a much higher per-capita death and accident rate than urban residents."

RIOT GEAR BANNED

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C. (CP) — The 63-man police force in New Westminster will have to get along without riot gear, Mayor Muni Byers says the police commission of this Fraser River city has unanimously rejected a police request for the equipment because it might incite violence. The action runs counter to that in neighboring Vancouver and West Vancouver, where police are being equipped with riot sticks, helmets and face guards.

Heath Believes in Cool Style of Leadership

LONDON (CP) — After one month in office Conservative Prime Minister Heath has shown himself a believer in a cool style of leadership based on a minimum of rhetoric, much delegation of power and avoidance of what he calls governmental gimmicks.

But observers are predicting a stormy test immediately ahead for this low-key approach to major problems, if, as expected, Foreign Secretary Sir Alec Douglas-Home today announces a resumption of British arms sales to South Africa.

Adding to Heath's headaches on the domestic front is the continuing strike by 47,000 dockers, which constitutes a crucial trial of the new governments ability to act vigorously but without undue haste in defence of the country's general welfare.

In his first weeks of power, the prime minister has chosen for himself the role of chairman rather than overbearing boss of his cabinet.

He also is allowing important ministers such as Douglas-Home and Robert Carr, Employment Secretary, to get on with their jobs in seemingly semi-autonomous fashion.

Heath's answers to questions in the Commons have been as terse as his reported method of conducting cabinet sessions.

And he has avoided the technique of dramatic last-minute intervention and round-the-clock bargaining at 10 Downing Street which was former prime minister Wilson's way of handling some labor crises equal in scale to the present strike by Longshoremen.

Such personal initiatives by the prime minister during Wilson's 5½ years in office are one aspect of the leadership method Heath dismisses as gimmickry and "instant government."

But Wilson, in his first big speech as opposition chief since the June 18 election defeat of his Labor administration, told coal miners at Durham Saturday that the Conservatives themselves have offered nothing except "a few instant pronouncements" in response to current problems.

"Worst of all for the future of our Commonwealth and Britain's moral standing in the world is the Conservative's hasty, cynical decision to condone South Africa's apartheid system by defying the United Nations decision on the supply of arms," Wilson said.

The UN-inspired embargo on weapons sales to South Africa had the support of the Labor government, although a number of Wilson's ministers are reported to have sought a degree of relaxation at one point.

There now is a suggestion by at least one London commentator that Heath's delegation of cabinet duties may have left Douglas-Home, a former Conservative prime minister, excessively free to push through a change of policy on the arms question.

Labor has promised an all-out attack on the switch and already controversy is flaring in the press.

"The overwhelming majority" of Commonwealth leaders bitterly resent the plan for resumption of arms sales, says an editorial in The Observer.

"So is the United States and so are most members of NATO."

The Sunday Telegraph quotes some Commonwealth diplomats as forecasting that the Commonwealth Prime Ministers' Conference scheduled for Singapore next year will be cancelled or postponed.

The paper also says that Canadian Arnold Smith, secretary-general of the Commonwealth, has "expressed his concern at the deterioration in ... relations" among members of the organization.

Tour Is Staged Of Erie Beaches By Association

PORT ERIE, Ont. (CP) — About 20 members of the Association for the Preservation of the Erie East Lakefront toured local beaches Sunday to focus attention on the lack of public access to private beaches.

The tour began at the old fort here and went on to the abandoned Buttonwood Marina and Crescent, Pleasant and Sherkstown beaches.

Robert Wright, a member of the association, said a secondary purpose of the tour was to focus public attention on pollution.

Mr. Wright said the 66-foot-wide Crescent Beach, a public beach, is used by hundreds of persons on hot days, but fences at either end of the beach prevent public access to areas claimed by cottage owners as private property.

He noted that the beaches were declared in the public domain to the high water mark in 1940 under an amendment to the Beds of Navigable Waters Act, but that the amendment was over-ruled in 1951.

He criticized the lack of government action to give the public access to beaches now claimed as private property. He also criticized what he called the government's failure to take steps to combat pollution at the beaches.

The association has proposed that the lakefront be developed along the lines of the Niagara Parkway and perhaps eventually becoming a national park.

U.S. Senator Promises to Expose System Which Exploits Migrant Farm Workers

WASHINGTON (AP) — A United States senator investigating alleged sub-human conditions among migrant farm workers promised today an expose of who is responsible—"institutions or persons; government or agribusiness; federal, state or local."

"Nothing will change until this rotten system is exposed and held accountable," Senator Walter F. Mondale (Dem., Minn.), said in a statement for today's opening of a two-day inquiry by his subcommittee on migrants.

The first scheduled witness was Dr. Raymond Wheeler of Charlotte, N.C., one of a team of sponsored doctors who visited Texas and Florida migrant camps earlier this year and reported that workers were deliberately kept in "sub-human status."

Mondale noted the hearings follow last Thursday's television documentary Migrant—An NBC White Paper, which he said "documented evidence of the squalor, degradation and racism which our nation bestows upon the migrants."

He also noted a similar documentary, the late Edward R. Murrow's Harvest of Shame, had aired much the same migrant conditions 10 years earlier.

"Perhaps our greatest shame is how little we have done in this decade," Mondale said. "We must see to it that there will be no such documentary in 1980."

"We know the problems," he said. "We must now turn to the question of why we have accomplished so little.

"What are the powers, the pressures, the politics and the special interests that have perpetuated this degradation Who has opposed the investigations of these conditions, and who has endeavored to suppress the truth"

Mondale said he had invited officials of NBC and the Coca-Cola company to testify about reports Coca-Cola pressured the network to tone down its documentary on migrants. Coca-Cola, which owns the Minute Maid and Snow Crop brands of orange juice, is a major Florida citrus producer.

Five Persons Killed

BRANTFORD (CP) — Five persons, including a provincial police constable, were killed and two others injured Sunday when a car smashed into a group of people on a road 15 miles southeast of here.

Police identified the dead as Constable Stephen H. Schultz, 39, of Brantford; Sharon Henry, 20, Russell General, 29, and Willard General, 34, all of Hagersville, Ont.; and Vera Antone, 33.

Ronald Hardman, 34, of Brantford, a probationary OPP constable, is in fair condition in Brantford hospital. Robert Montour of Hagersville was released after treatment in hospital.

Police said an OPP cruiser had stopped to check a parked car. While the two constables were speaking to the occupants of the car, a third car smashed into the group.

Ralph Powless, 28, of Hagersville was charged with failing to remain at the scene of an accident and dangerous driving.

Mondale said he also had invited representatives of growers associations to testify about reported pressure. The Florida Fruit and Vegetable Association wrote NBC President Julian Goodman and Federal Communications Chairman Dean Burch on June 22 warning it would oppose re-licensing of any station taking part in the "slanted" broadcast.

The subcommittee has reported pressures of its own. Last Friday Boren Chevisov, the subcommittee counsel, said some persons had declined to testify because of "personal threats, harassment, intimidation." He said he could not name the persons without endangering them.

Short Year After Giant Leap
U.S. Space Program Struggling

WASHINGTON (AP) — It has been one year since men first landed on the moon and Neil Armstrong's giant leap for mankind seems almost stuck in mid-dair.

One year ago today, as people around the world sat awestrong and Edwin (Buzz) Aldrin walking the moon, the United States space program was at its pinnacle. Now it is struggling.

"This is the greatest week in the history of the world since the creation," said President Nixon. "The world has never been closer together before."

The bond was as short-lived as that stay on the moon. The pride dissolved in a welter of other concerns that the feat of men on the dead satellite 250,000 miles away.

No one is more disappointed than Armstrong.

"I had hoped it would take our minds away from some of the more mundane and irrelevant problems that have faced us and let us look a little farther into the future with the aim of solving problems before they become problems," he says. "I haven't seen as much evidence of that as I'd hoped.

"We appear to be still tied up with today's problems—the problems already occurring. We attack them from the backside rather than meet them head-on. If all of us could look into the future we could look at problems from the front side."

After Armstrong, Aldrin and command module pilot Michael Collins returned from their epic journey, interest in further manned exploration of the moon waned quickly. Apollo 12, the second moon landing, was accepted in a relatively routine fashion, particularly after its television camera quit almost at the outset.

Apollo 13 also got a lot of press when an explosion created the greatest crisis of any space flight to date.

Apollo 14, commanded by Alan B. Shepard—the first U.S. man in space—already has had two postponements of two months each, caused in part by modifications that also became the space agency wants to stretch dollars by stretching out flights. One of seven scheduled moon landings already has been cancelled and three, or even four, more may go the same money-saving route.

Gearing up for the Apollo 11 first moon landing, NASA is one year got $3,900,000,000. But this year the administration and Congress, sensing the national mood and beset with other stringent demands on the federal dollar, responded by reducing the space budget. The House of Representatives approved $3,197,000,000 for fiscal 1971, the Senate passed $3,319,000,000. The difference will be worked out in conference, but it's a cinch to be the lowest amount since the earliest days in space.

All this hasn't dimmed the optimism of Armstrong, now an executive in the space agency.

"I suspect space progress as we know it is now inevitable," he says. "It is a thing that now exists and will continue to exist for the rest of mankind.

"We don't have the option any longer of saying yes or no—only of saying when."

It was at 4:18 p.m. Eastern Daylight Time last July 20, when Armstrong radioed "Houston, Tranquility base here. The Eagle has landed."

The words were heard by radio and television listeners around the world.

According to the flight plan, Armstrong and Aldrin were to rest before venturing out on the moon's surface. But they were anxious to get on with the next phase of the adventure.

Shortly after 6 a.m. EDT, Armstrong asked if they could start the moonwalk in about three hours. The ground gave permission.

It took an agonizing amount of time to put on suits and backpacks, to de-pressurize the cabin. At 9:30 p.m., Armstrong stood on the top step of the lander's ladder and pulled a cord that released a scientific instrument package and television camera on the side of the ship.

"Man, we're getting a picture on the TV," Houston said. And a minute later: "Okay, Neil we can see you coming down the ladder now."

"I'm at the foot of the ladder," Armstrong then said. "The L. M[unar] module's foot pads are only depressed in the surface about one or two inches."

At a recent news conference, Armstrong confessed he had been worried about sinking into the moon's soil even though previous unmanned satellites had encountered firm footing. "I had a 95-per-cent confidence level" that there would be solid ground, Armstrong said. "I suppose it was the kind of concern you'd have if you played Russian roulette with one bullet in a 20-chamber pistol."

But last year, he announced calmly: "I'm going to step off the LM now."

And in a soft voice—so soft that it was hardly audible—he made the now famous comment: "That's one small step for man, a giant leap for mankind."

Not longer after they had erected a U.S. flag, Armstrong and Aldrin received a call from President Nixon.

"Because of what you have done," the president said, "the heavens have become a part of man's world."

Police Strike Possible

Immediate Action Urged Against Killers of Police

MONTREAL (CP) — The International Conference of Police Association has passed a resolution which the group's president says could produce a police strike across North America.

Syd Brown of Toronto, president of the 125,000-member association, said today a strike is one possible action police could take if authorities do not respond to a resolution calling for immediate actions against police killers.

The resolution was passed unanimously during the weekend at the police convention here and Const. Brown said if no action results from it the police have two alternatives: "the distinct possibility of retaliation on the street or recommending withholding services."

Calling for "immediate action by governments, the judiciary and the public at large," the resolution was passed following the death from sniper fire of two Chicago police officers Friday night.

"I'm basically opposed to strike action for wages and fringe benefits," Const. Brown said, "but when the slaying of policemen becomes more and more regular a strike becomes a necessary action."

Const. Brown, president of the Metropolitan Toronto Police Association, has in the past expressed disagreement with police strikes such as the walkout which hit Montreal last Oct. 7 when the city's firemen and police walked off the job over a wage issue.

However, he said if police do not receive protection from governments and the courts a strike or street combat could result.

"This could lead to open warfare with on-the-street justice or a withdrawal of law enforcement services."

Copies of the resolution were sent to President Nixon, Prime Minister Trudeau, the governors of all the states in the U.S. and the premiers of every Canadian province.

Const. Brown said ICPA has also passed a resolution "commending the U.S. government and the Federal Bureau of Investigation on the investigation at Kent State."

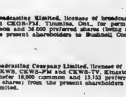
Four students were killed during a disturbance at Kent State University in Ohio last May.

CP Produces Plan To Cut Train Losses

MONTREAL (CP) — A plan to cut substantially losses resulting from operation of CP Rail's transcontinental passenger train, The Canadian, has been submitted by the railway to the Canadian transport commission.

CP Rail was given until July 29 to produce such a plan, following an order released by the commission June 18.

The CP Rail proposal consists of three parts:



—Operation of The Canadian three times a week in place of the existing daily service during the low-travel period from mid-September to mid-June.

—The setting of an upper limit on the number of cars assigned to The Canadian, from nine to 12 cars during the off season and 14 cars during the high-traffic summer months.

—An increase in coach fares of 10 per cent and a raising of all-inclusive fares, covering rail transportation, sleeping car space and meals, by 25 per cent.

In a written decision accompanying its June 18 order, the commission announced its intention to enable those who wish to present their views on the railway plan to do so as soon as possible after it had been filed.

Colombia Alerted Against Revolt

BOGOTA (AP) — Armed with state-of-siege powers, the Colombian army and police were on guard today against any attempt by supporters of former dictator Gustavo Rojas Pinilla to foment revolution Aug. 7 of President-elect Missel Pastrana Borrero.

President Carlos Lleras Imposed the modified form of martial law Sunday night after new threats of revolution from the former dictator's daughter and campaign manager.

"Rivers of blood might run in the country" if Pastrana takes office, said Maria Eugenia Rojas de Moreno.

President Lleras said he proclaimed the state of siege, which suspends constitutional rights, to prevent "grave commotion" between the opening of the new congress today and the presidential inauguration. The party has a majority in the new legislature, adding to the tension.

Pastrana Borrero, the government candidate, was declared winner of the April 23 election by less than 50,000 votes after a prolonged, close count. Rojas Pinalla charged that he was cheated out of the victory, and immediately after the results were announced his supporters in two military garrisons made unsuccessful attempt to start a revolution.

Meanwhile, Fernando Londono y Londono, the former foreign minister who unsuccessfully challenged Pastrana Borreso for the Conservative party presidential nomination, was released by kidnappers Saturday for $100,000 ransom, half the original demand.

Londono, 69, who has large coffee plantations, said he was tortured by his captors. He gave no details and did not identify his abductors. But in previous communications to his family, they said, they were members of the pro-Castro National Liberation Army.

Londono was released blindfolded on a road near the town of Honda, about 75 miles northwest of Bogota.

The 69-year-old diplomat and Conservative party politician was freed Saturday night and in a radio broadcast later described his captivity as "Dantesque."

He did not describe the tortures he said he underwent, but told the radio audience: "I hope this terrible experience I went through would serve the upcoming government to consider how to solve the many problems affecting our people."

Londono did not identify his captors but in previous communications with his family they said they are members of the National Liberation Army, a pro-Cuba organization.

The kidnappers originally demanded $200,000 in ransom from the family. There was no explanation of why Londono was freed on a ransom of half that amount.

Plane Belly Flops

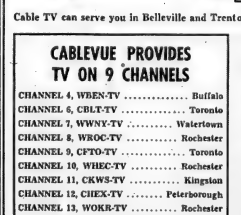
The twin-engine Boeing 727 lost power as it rose to about 50 feet above the runway Sunday, then bellyflopped into a marshy area. There were 56 passengers and a crew of six aboard, of whom 11 were injured and three admitted to hospital.



The most serious was an ankle fracture suffered by Ellen Farr, 59, of Ridgewood, Ont., when she caught her foot sliding down an emergency exit chute.

James Stewart Prize Catch for TV Series

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The prize catch for a television series is James Stewart, and the man who did the catching is onetime gag writer Hal Kanter.

Recently NBC announced that Stewart would star in a half-hour comedy series for the 1971-72 season. The news came as a surprise to the television trade, because no one believed that a film star like Stewart would consent to a series.

"After all, Jimmy's still making a couple of movies a year, at good money plus a percentage of the take," said one observer. He's had all the fame, and he's loaded. At age 62 why would he want to take on the grind of a TV series?"

Hal Kanter wondered, too. He is a showbiz fellow who has turned out gags for Danny Kaye and Amos 'n' Andy," movie scripts for Bob Hope and Elvis Presley, and television shows for George Gobel and Diahann Carroll. Kanter is the fellow who created Julia and continues to produce it.

"We had Jimmy on a Julia last season, in connection with his work as chairman on the Red Cross drive," said the producer. "Everyone on the show was impressed by his easy professionalism.

"He had a call for 9 o'clock, which is the time most actors would arrive at the studio. At nine Jimmy was not only at the studio; he was in wardrobe, had his makeup on and all of his lines memorized. When the director told the assistant to call him, Jimmy was out of his chair before the assistant could get to him."

"The actor was impressed by the speed and efficiency of the Julia operation, and Kanter asked if he has considered doing a series.

"I'm not too interested," Stewart replied. "First of all, I'd have to decide if I wanted to do a series at all. Then I'd have to consider what kind of a show I'd do. But I haven't reached the first question yet."

Kanter dropped the matter. A few months later he was called by a television executive at Warner Bros. Would he be interested in creating a television series for Jimmy Stewart? Kanter said yes.

Next came a meeting with the executive, Jimmy's agent and the star himself. Kanter outlined his idea.

"Jimmy smiled," the producer recalled, "Jimmy Stewart smiling is the equivalent of most actors knee-slapping and bending over. I figured we were in."

Kanter is not too expansive about his idea-this competitors might best him to the take with it. But he did reveal the basic premise: the generation gap. That's not exactly a hot new subject, but Kanter figures he has a new approach.

Stewart will portray a married college professor in a Southern California town. He has a 28-year-old son and a six-year-old grandson, Stewart and wife will also have a six-year-old son. See the possibilities?

The title for the series: Family Plan. That's a surprise. Networks usually like to use high-powered names for marquee value, and you'd expect it to be "The Jimmy Stewart Show.

"This may surprise you, but The Fred MacMurray Show is actually called My Three Sons," Kanter said.

"And it has been doing all right," Kanter said.

Combines Careers

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — You might say that the ABC Movie of the Week How Awful About Allan was 71½ years in the making—but it really only took 12 days to film.

This spooky tale stars Anthony Perkins, Julie Harris and Joan Hackett and was written by Henry Farrell, whose past works include Whatever Happened to Baby Jane?

The reason it took so long is that the producer, George Edwards, sold the first called Farrell 71½ years ago and suggested they do the film. They didn't get around to it until recently.

Perkins says he much prefers the 12 days. He took time out from directing the Off-Broadway production in New York of Steambath, in which he also stars.

"I find the TV movie very different, but it's the way I think all movies should be made," said Perkins. "It's fast, it has spontaneity.

"It brings out the best in an actor. It's sort of like doing a live TV show, in a way."

Perkins, the chaplain in Catch-22, said: "The bigger the budget, the more stale the actor. The more time you spend on set-ups, the more time the actors sit around. Nothing is harder for an actor than waiting.

A set-up is just what it sounds like: the setting up of the camera and lights for a take.

Tony considered whether he wanted to become a director full time. Previously, he directed the road company of Star Spangled Girl.

"I think the fact that I've been an actor helps me to direct and I think that since I've directed it's helped me to be a better actor."

LONG HISTORY

QUEBEC (CP) — The eight-foot-thick stone walls and underground caverns of the Talon Vaults at the foot of Palace Hill could tell many stories. New France administrator, Jean Talon ordered the vaults to be constructed in the mid - 1670s to hold and age beer. After brandy smuggling increased, the vaults were converted into a military prison in 1692. They had a third career as a warehouse for ice, beer and furs in the 1840s and have ended up as an historical site supported by a Canadian brewery.

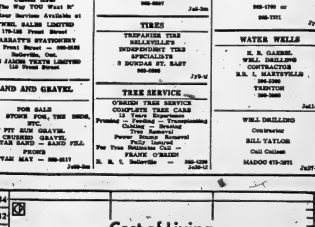
Mrs. John Holmes Honored on Birthday

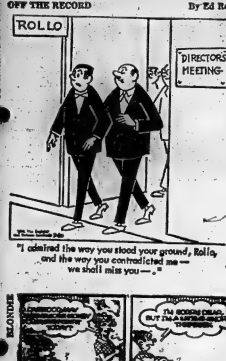
TWEED — Mrs. John Holmes, of R.R. 1 Tweed, was pleasantly surprised on her birthday, when a number of her sons, daughters and grandchildren as well as her great-grandchildren, gathered at her home to honor her on her 81st birthday. Also present was her sister, Mrs. Arthur Parks, Mr. Parks and Mrs. Evelyn Stapleton of Watertown, New York. She also received many cards and gifts, and all enjoyed the social get-together.

Mrs. Emma Henry of Cobourg spent the past weekend in Queensboro, visiting relatives Mrs. Henry recently returned from Japan, where she has been holidaying.



Miss Gail Eldington, of Elgvina has been in Toronto taking the third year of her four-year summer course in physical education. Miss Eldington will be returning to her teaching position in Marmora in the fall.

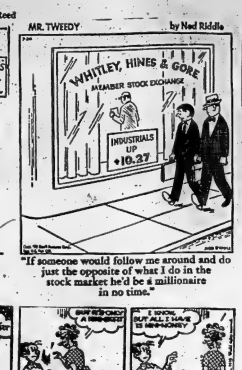
A large crowd of relatives and friends attended the wedding reception of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Burke, in Olden Community Centre on Mountain Grove, on Saturday, July 7. Mr. and Mrs. Burke were married earlier the same evening in Sharbot Lake Anglican Church The couple were the recipients of many beautiful gifts.



Many friends, and relatives from near and far called on Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Smith, of RR 1 Mountain Grove, at the "At Home" held for them by the family on the occasion of their 60th wedding anniversary on Mr. and Mrs. McDonald Clark of RR 1, Cloyne and Mr. Robert Lindsay, of Arden, left on Wednesday for a three-week vacation in Manitoba.

Bon Echo Park, Cloyne, was the scene of a reunion for the family of Colin MacPherson of Northbrook. Those attending were: Rev. and Mrs. Donald MacPherson, Gananoque; Rev. and Mrs. Lindsay MacPherson, Napanee; Mr. and Mrs. Clair Bean, Northbrook; Mr. and Mrs. Marvin MacPherson, Carleton Place; Mr. and Mrs. Floyd MacPherson, Makwachan, and Rev. and Mrs. Ronald Peacock, Havelock. There were 20 grandchildren and their families including three great-grandchildren present at the occasion. Four grandchildren and their families were unable to attend.

There were four generations present from ages 83 to four months.



The consumer price index rose three-tenths of a point in June, moving to 129.9 from 129.6 in May. The Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported the gain was mainly due to higher food prices. (CP Photo)

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

A patient is in discomfort. His doctor says, "It's only your nerves." The patient leaves the doctor's office feeling frustrated and helpless. (Only? Few illnesses bother more than "nerves.")

• • •

A concerned wife is saying to her husband, "Better go in to see the doctor, Jim. I've heard that gas pressure under the chest which feels like indigestion may be due to a coronary attack." And he answers, "I'm only 39. I'm too young to have a coronary." (Some coronary attacks are overlooked in youngsters still in their 20s.)

• • •

A patient says, "Doctor, I'm at least 15 pounds overweight. Can you give me a diet that will take it off fast?" (What's the hurry?)

• • •

A doctor says, "We can't do anything for psoriasis. There's no sense in coming back." (Perhaps we have no specific cure, but the patient should be able to come back any time he feels like it. He needs a doctor to lean on when his spirits get low. Besides, many patients can be helped, if not cured.)

• • •

A mother or father (or both) are beating a child. (Neighbors know it, but don't want to "interfere" and keep the information from the proper authorities.

• • •

A man is keeping his golf date although he has fever and feels sick, because he doesn't want to break up the foursome. (And spreads his cold to his friends.)

• • •

One doctor takes time to fully explain the patient's condition. Another doesn't say much but takes time to listen patiently. (One patient says, "My doctor talks too much." Another says, "Mine doesn't say enough. All he does is listen.")

• • •

A patient keeps getting headaches probably due to tension - filled days at the office and at home. He keeps refusing to see his doctor because he secretly believes he has a brain tumor and is afraid to face the verdict. (The odds are many hundreds to one that it's not a tumor.)

• • •

A patient, with no history of physical evidence of heart disease still doesn't believe her doctor. "It must be my heart," she says. "Otherwise, why do I get these heart skips?" (A common cause of skips is heart irritability not due to heart disease. We call them extrasystoles or premature contractions.)

• • •

A woman who takes 8 to 10 aspirin tablets a day for her arthritis doesn't realize that these may be the cause of her heartburn. She takes them on an empty stomach. (Some people are completely allergic to aspirin. Most people can take it. And much better tolerated after eating or taken with a little milk.)

• • •

A patient coughing herself blue in the face because of emphysema can't wait until the spell is over so she can take another drag on her cigarette. (Like pouring another few drops of gasoline on the fire you're trying to put out.)

Safety Belts Prevent Ejection in Collisions

By RAY STAPLEY

A reader writes:

"After completing the Ontario Motor League driver training course I had no trouble passing the test for through the course the instructors emphasized the importance of wearing the safety harness. Even on very slow - speed runs they stressed the need of these restraints.

"After watching a film in which dummies were used to demonstrate the protection offered by safety belts I am quite convinced of their value and will not start away without first buckling up.

"However, regardless of what I say there is no way of convincing my mother that she should use them. A friend of hers was injured as a result of wearing belts in a side - swipe type of accident and therefore she insists that safety belts are dangerous.

"She will not accept the fact that her friend's accident was an exception to the rule. Would you write something in your column which hopefully may convince my mother that she is wrong." — Mr. J. K., Hamilton, Ont.

I know a lady who shares your mother's beliefs to the point where she will not allow her children to wear a safety harness. While driving on the highway recently her car dropped onto the shoulder and rolled over. One of her four youngsters was ejected, and struck by another vehicle. The injuries to the child were such that it was necessary to amputate a leg an it is doubtful whether the child will ever be able to speak again.

While those who remained inside the car were injured, they have fully recovered. One of the most important functions of safety harness is to hold the occupants in the car during collision.

Some time ago I investigated an accident where a vehicle carrying four people was struck by a heavy truck. The three occupants who were wearing belts survived, but the passenger who had not buckled up was ejected and died instantly.

The grim list of fatalities recorded in my accident files attests to the value of safety harness. Granted, on rare occasions the use of safety belts may have resulted in fatalities, but up to this point I have none on record.

At the Ford Motor Company's proving ground I have watched vehicles being crashed into a concrete abutment. During this research the effectiveness of various restraints is evaluated by placing electronically equipped dummies inside the cars.

Following each crash the wrecks are towed into the laboratories and the effects of collision on both the dummies and the vehicles are carefully recorded. After witnessing the gruesome results of these tests, few people would argue about the value of safety restraints.

The Ford engineers told me that all the safety equipment is designed and built into the cars with the assumption that safety harness will be worn by each occupant at all times. The effectiveness of all the other safety devices I practically lost if we are not buckled in.

The windshield is one of the prime causes of death and disfigurement especially for the passenger in the front right seat, and it is not possible to pad glass.

Keep this in mind if you make a practice of sitting on your safety belts.

Urban League Leader Asks Two-race Parley

NEW YORK (AP) — Whitney M. Young Jr., executive director of the National Urban League, has called for a unified black convention to meet with white leaders and negotiate for social change.

"The two Americas—black and white—need each other," he said.

Young, saying he does not believe the Nixon administration is consciously anti-black, issued his call Sunday as the League opened its 60th annual convention.

During a news conference he was asked to comment on recent criticism of the administration by Bishop Stephen G. Spottswood, chairman of the board of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Bishop Spotswood said three weeks ago: "This is the first time since 1920 that the national administration made it a matter of calculated policy to work against the needs and aspirations of the largest minority of its citizens.

"I wouldn't use language that strong," Young said. "This administration has been pro-majority vote, pro-political and has taken actions it felt would assure political victory.

"And those actions have made it appear in many cases, because they run counter to the interest of black people, that they are anti-Negro. But I don't think there's a conscious or deliberate policy of hating black people."

Sydney J. Harris Says

Equal Treatment Not Fair

One of the most misunderstood words in the world is "equality." When one thing we can't seem to understand is that treating unequals equally is not equal treatment.

How does one "equalize" a horse - race Obviously, by handicapping some of the horses so that all of them have a roughly equal opportunity to win. Otherwise it would be a race.

The recent "women's liberation movement" is clamoring for equal rights, but its proponents ought to be careful about suggesting that "equal" is the same as "identical."

There can be no doubt that women are badly discriminated against in many areas of contemporary life, and this discrimination should be lifted as a matter of simple justice. But it should not mean that women must be treated exactly the way men are.

There are certain jobs women cannot perform, certain hours they should not work (for their own safety and domestic tranquility), certain areas that they are not fitted for, by strength, temperament and biological inheritance. Women are equal to men, but not identical with them.

Do women really want the equal "right" to be drafted for national service? And, if so, do they want the right to bear arms in the front lines? Do they desire to become as hard and callous as men become in such situations?

A distinction must be made between equality under law, and equal treatment in the physical and social aspects of life. A woman should be paid as much if she does the same job, should be given an equal opportunity to get the same job, and should have the same chance for advancement in a job, as a man. This is simply admitting her to full citizenship.

But she is, usually, also a homemaker and a mother, while a man's role is not so crucial here. More than half our female working force consists of married women, who are doing double duty. Does some special consideration mean that mothers are hired, and women must be allowed a few privileges not afforded to male workers?

Once we allow them "privileges," there is no longer a crude equality, but there is something better — proportionate justice, which rectifies inequalities just as we put different weights on different horses. This is the only fair way to run a race, on or off the track.

Your birthday today: A year of normal personal and spiritual development begins. Dedicated property should be examined for possible discard or conversion to more useful forms. You drift away from relationships now. But many people are not changing in compatible directions. This is no lasting problem, as powerful vacuums with better options. Today's natives act most often on impulse or inspiration, attracting general interest.

ARIES (March 21—April 19): You are rushed enough to make errors that are hard to straighten out. Your own temptation is toward overenthusiasm. Put in a sound day's work, and relax early.

TAURUS (April 20—May 20): Your intuition must make some choices; which direction to go, what to do first. Act rather than talk. The evening brings good cheer.

GEMINI (May 21—June 20): Conflict between home and work continues now. A money decision having to be made without notice. A moment of reflection makes all the difference.

CANCER (June 21—July 22): Mixed reactions to you are common today. Pay little heed to what people say, and more to what they do. Your imagination scarches the bizarre and the extreme, where there are a few creative ideas.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Your expansiveness or personal things leaves you vulnerable to another appeal hard to resist. Decide according to what is important to you — and stick with your decision.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): It is likely you are out of step with your friends and neighbors. Instead of being demanding, look to see what can be done about the differences.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): You can ask minor favors with good chance of success. See that your creative efforts achieve notice. There should be something to celebrate in the evening.

Armstrong Expects To Visit Moon Again

WASHINGTON (AP) — Neil A. Armstrong, first person to set foot on the moon, says he's quite sure he'll go back for another look some day—and he thinks lunar tourists will be going, too.

Asked whether he ever expects to fly in space again, now that he has moved from the Manned Spacecraft Centre in Texas to space agency headquarters here, Armstrong replied, seriously:

"I would be surprised if I don't have the option of buying a ticket."

Armstrong and fellow executives at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration are convinced that re-usable spacecraft in the years ahead will carry a stream of traffic to and from the moon.

Armstrong gave his individual views of the future at a news conference.

Did he have any sense of disappointment on leaving the astronaut program which culminated for him a year ago in the Apollo 11 lunar-landing mission with Michael Collins and Edwin E. Aldrin.

"I think there is a very strong possibility of getting back to the moon," he reiterated.

Does he still think man eventually will travel to the end of the solar system

"Oh yes, I think it is unquestionably true," he said.

"I don't know whether we will see it in our lifetime.

"I think that probably within our lifetime we will be attacking the end of—that is to say in the next 40 years, 40 years from now—we probably will be pretty well around our solar system, I think."

Armstrong will be 40 Aug. 5.

Arms Sale Breeds Commonwealth Rift

Sale Planned To South Africa

LONDON (CP) — The British government faced today indications of a major controversy and threatened public demonstrations over its decision to consider the sale of arms to South Africa for maritime defence.

The government announced Monday it intends to export naval arms to South Africa to protect vital sea lanes at the Cape of Good Hope.

But an announcement of the decision in the House of Commons, Foreign Minister Sir Alec Douglas-Home said no final decision would be taken without further consultations with commonwealth countries and South Africa.

The Opposition Labor party, which banned all arms sales to the republic in 1964 while in power, introduced an official motion calling on the government to abandon the new proposal.

The motion called the government move contrary to a United Nations resolution and said it would threaten the survival of the Commonwealth as a multi-racial association.

Lord Caradon, Britain's former United Nations chief representative, said on television later, "It is a shameful act" that now is contemplated.

"A few frigates in Simonstown would not make up for the loss of good opinion of the great majority of mankind," he said.

Lord Caradon was referring to the Simonstown naval base. Britain and South Africa negotiated an agreement on the base in 1955, providing for co-operation for defence of the Cape of Good Hope sea routes used by giant tankers carrying Persian Gulf oil to Britain and Europe.

The government's overriding duty is to care for its strategic needs and particularly for the free passage of ships on the vital route round southern Africa, Sir Alec told the Commons.

"As a consequence, we should be ready to consider within that context applications for the export to South Africa of certain limited categories of arms, so long as they are for maritime defence directly related to the security of sea routes," Sir Alec said.

The government had made abundantly clear it disagrees with South Africa's racial policies and "in no circumstances would there be sales to South Africa of arms for the enforcement of the policy of apartheid or internal repression."

While Sir Alec didn't spell out exactly what arms might be shipped, it has been generally reported they would include Nimrod anti-submarine jets, warships and other maritime equipment.

Britain's anti-apartheid movement called on its supporters to demonstrate today outside 10 Downing Street, official residence of Prime Minister Edward Heath.

A spokesman for the movement said the government's new policy was in effect the appeasement of racism and would have "serious repercussions for Africa, for Britain and the world."

Britain's minority Liberal party is a statement by its president, Lord Beaumont, said it completely condemns the export of arms to South Africa for any purpose whatever.

But a London spokesman for the Pan-Africanist Congress said Sir Alec's inconclusive statement is a small but insignificant victory for the forces opposed to arms sales and described it as a backing down from the position expected.

African, Asian Lands Enraged

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

African Commonwealth countries criticized Britain today for its decision to consider selling arms to South Africa for maritime defence. An Indian member of Parliament suggested that India should quit the Commonwealth or lead a movement to have Britain expelled.

Foreign Secretary Sir Alec Douglas-Home announced in the British House of Commons Monday that the government is considering selling arms to South Africa for defence of the Cape of Good Hope sea route. He said no final decision would be taken before consultations with Commonwealth countries.

President Kenneth Kaunda of Zambia telephoned Prime Minister Edward Heath to warn of grave consequences which could follow if Britain decides to sell arms to white-supremacist South Africa. And in a news commentary of the state-controlled radio, Napby Myalugwe, presidential press secretary, bitterly attacked Britain on the issue and said Zambia should review her financial links with Britain.

The Zambian cabinet met in urgent session today to consider the issue.

Three hundred student demonstrators stormed onto the grounds of the British high commission in Lusaka, the Zambian capital, today and smashed several windows and hauled away the Union Jack.

In Kampala, President Milton Obote of Uganda accused the British government of offering a hand of friendship and moral support to the White government of South Africa to pursue its policy of apartheid—separation of the races.

The Uganda cabinet also was meeting on the arms-sale issue.

In New Delhi, leaders in the Indian Parliament demanded that India quit—or drastically alter—the Commonwealth in retaliation for the British proposal.

Chandra Shekar, an MP belonging to Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's governing Congress party, suggested that India convene a meeting of Commonwealth countries to oust the United Kingdom.

In Cape Town, Prime Minister John Vorster of South Africa said Monday that his country does not need offensive weapons because it does not want to attack anyone.

If South Africa had such intentions it would manufacture

Nixon Says U.S. Insists Vietnamese Pick Regime

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon says the future government of South Vietnam must be elected through negotiators in Paris.

The United States government will not stand for an imposed coalition government, the president said. "It must be a government selected by the people of South Vietnam."

In a wide-ranging news conference Monday, the president also said he would veto a bill setting mandatory quotas on any imports except textiles. Such quotas, he said, are not in the national interest and might set off an international trade war.

"We are an exporting nation rather than an importing nation," Nixon said. "It would mean in the end, while it would save us some jobs, it would cost us more jobs in exports that would be denied us; and, second, even more important, it is highly inflationary."

The House of Representatives ways and means committee has proposed quotas on shoe and textile imports.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: After dumping from 1 to 2 inches of rain during the past 24 hours over most of southern and central Ontario a storm centre is now moving eastward across the Ontario-Quebec border near Ottawa. Extensive cloud and a few lingering showers still persist east of a line from North Bay to central Lake Ontario but clearing skies are reported west of this line. A strong dry high pressure area just west of the Great Lakes will build over Ontario today and Wednesday bringing sunny skies to all regions. Temperatures will gradually climb back to more seasonable values by Wednesday after the record breaking low maximums that occurred Monday in many southern communities. The return to warmer weather is expected to last through the remainder of the week.

Second Student Is Slain

LAWRENCE, Kas. (AP) — An 18-year-old youth has been shot to death in the latest of a series of clashes between city police and about 150 young residents of this university town.

Harry Nicholas Rice of Leawood, Kan., a University of Kansas freshman last term, was hit in the head during a disturbance Monday night a block from the main campus gate.

Clashes with police have been going on sporadically for the last year. The current series started last Friday, a day after a policeman shot and killed Rock Donald Dowdell, a 19-year-old Negro student at the university.

20 Hurt As Train Derailed

PRINCE RUPERT, B.C. (CP) — Twenty persons were injured, one critically, when four cars of a Canadian National Railways train carrying 60 passengers jumped the tracks Monday and plunged on to tidal flats beside the Skeena River, about 20 miles east of here.

Eight-year-old Marvin Craig Wilson of Ladner, B.C., was flown to Vancouver General Hospital Monday night by a Canadian Forces plane for treatment of head injuries and a punctured lung. He was reported in critical condition.

No official reason was given for the derailment of the nine-car train but the CNR personnel at the scene said they suspected a split rail.

The four cars, including two passenger coaches, dropped more than 20 feet down an embankment and landed on their sides beside the Skeena. Several hours later they were covered by high tide waters from the Pacific.

About 20 yards of track were torn up and a CNR official said the mainline is not expected to be cleared until Wednesday.

B.C. Mediation Work Starts Despite Defiance of Unions

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia mediation commission today begins preliminary hearings in its investigation of the construction industry dispute, despite the refusal of five unions to obey a government back-to-work order Monday.

The hearings will determine what issues are involved in the dispute, which began April 14 with the first of a series of lockouts by the Construction Labor Relations Association against 15 building trades unions.

The situation Monday, after 25,000 workers were ordered back on the job at $200,000,000 worth of construction projects, was confusing, with no clear picture of how many actually returned, or were called back by the CLRA's 383 contractors.

The cement industry called back 50 to 60 per cent of its workers and truck drivers, said Ed Lawson, president of the local teamsters joint council. But the order to go back stipulated that all employees should return, Mr. Lawson said. He checked first with Labor Minister Leslie Peterson that the order meant a 100 per cent return.

"We have been telling all those workers who have not been called back by the companies that they should return themselves in order to comply with the order," said Mr. Lawson.

"We say that if there is no work for them they must receive eight hours' pay under a guarantee in the old agreement. The companies say they are not going to pay these workers their call-out guaranteed pay."

Ray Haynes, secretary of the B.C. Federation of Labor which is supporting the stand of five unions who refuse to go back and accept binding arbitration, said the situation is a legalistic nightmare.

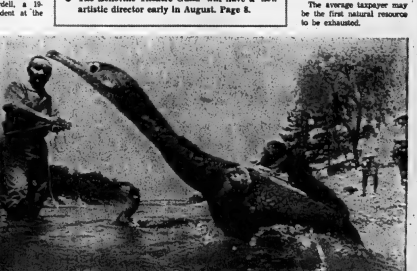
"Peterson's move doesn't sound as if it is conducive to getting settlements and that is what the name of the game is," said Mr. Haynes.

"There are all kinds of people who have left the province and others who have other jobs and I don't know how the procedure is going to work.

"As for defying this law, prohibition laws were flouted and ignored because they were ridiculous and unworkable. There have been all kinds of labor laws since this government took over but this legislation is the ultimate because it is the beginning of putting us out of business."

He said other legislation made it difficult for unions to operate but "this legislation is the beginning of the end of collective bargaining and the trade union movement."

Aside from teamsters and laborers, who don't have contracts but decided to return to work, unions with agreements are electricians, ironworkers, maciunists, boilermakers, glaziers, cement masons, sheet metal workers, painters and floor layers.



The five who decided to stay out are carpenters, bricklayers, plumbers and pipefitters, operating engineers and heat and frost insulators.

The five unions were apparently refusing to dispatch members to jobs, in a move to relieve individual workers of deciding whether to go back or not.

The provincial government hasn't said what action it would take if unions refused to go back to work.

There was a report Monday night that members would walk off the job at all B.C. construction sites if any trade union member was fined or jailed for not returning to work.

Under the B.C. Mediation Act passed two years ago, companies, unions or organizations can be fined up to $10,000 for disobeying an order, while individuals face a $1,000 fine, with $150 daily fines if the defiance continues.

Fishing Is for These Birds

Perfect Timing

To keep Belleville's parking meters working perfectly, Joe Miles, of the Belleville Parking Authority, puts in many hours each day repairing and cleaning faulty meters in the BPA offices below city hall.

Arthritis, Rheumatism Increase in Belleville

For the first six months of 1970, 104 Belleville residents were admitted to the Rheumatic Disease Units at Kingston and Toronto, as compared to 182 such patients in all of 1969.

This statistic was released Monday as part of the half-yearly report of the Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society Quinte Committee.

The report also states that 858 patient treatments were provided at the regular evening physiotherapy treatment clinic program operated by the society at Belleville General Hospital.

In the first half of 1970, many received treatment under a new home physiotherapy service introduced at the beginning of the year. This new service is provided by one of the society's physiotherapists who visits Belleville regularly from the regional office in Kingston.

The society's report contends that arthritis affects more people than any other disease, and that it is the major cause of lost time in industry.

Based on national averages, there would be more than 1,600 residents of Belleville affected by arthritis and lost time in terms of industrial payroll would amount to $15,000 per annum.

Playground Event Re-scheduled

The playground open house originally scheduled for last Thursday night and postponed to last night because of rain, has been rescheduled for tomorrow night (weather permitting).

The event, which runs from 6.30 to 7.45, will give parents an opportunity to see what their children do during the playground program. Anyone interested is welcome to attend.

City Parking Authority Looks After 850 Meters

By IAN ROBERTSON
Staff Reporter

The Belleville Parking Authority was founded in 1961, and took over from the Public Utilities Commission the duties and servicing of parking spaces throughout the city.

At that time, Joe Miles was hired to maintain the meters and has now reached the position of maintenance superintendent, still repairing units, but also acting as strawboss for the five regular BPA employees.

Three citizens who are not members of city council serve on the authority together with the city treasurer and city clerk who act, respectively as treasurer and clerk.

The board members are Douglas Dunnette, Mrs. Eugene Manderville, and Glen Thompson.

Mr. Miles explained that there are 850 metered spaces in the city. This includes both parking spaces on street lots and parking lots equipped with meters.

The city uses two types of meters at the present time, with plans to install more than 100 new meters by early September.

Similar to Westclox timing devices, the older dual meters manufactured by Rockwell Manufacturing Company, and the Duncan Miller lever meters will be joined by the new automatic Park-o-Meters.

To service these timing devices, Mr. Miles maintains a complete set of tools, parts and old meters for repair work. A special 3kg. electric clamshell chisels passes sound waves through a bath of cleaning solvent clinging like interior dirt and limers when they are dismantled for cleaning and replacement of parts.

When new meters are received, the parking authority keeps the old units for parts and replacement. Of the total meters, approximately 40 per cent rest on the shelves of the office below city hall.

The oldest meters are placed in the heavily vandalised areas.

Mr. Miles related incidents of vandalism which he explained would net the crooks less than a dollar per meter.

"That's quite expensive when you realize that it costs us $80 to install a replacement," he noted.

When the river was recently dredged, an old meter which had been pulverized or was thrown onto shore . . . utterly useless for pieces.

One of the most recent heavy attacks on these units occurred in December, 1968, when 36 meters were broken into in the parking spaces behind Front Street at the river.

Working throughout the day, Mr. Miles and the BPA employees had these meters working later that night.

In May of 1970, meters in the most heavily congested spaces in the downtown area were converted to take Palmer as well as nickels and quarters.

The authority is hoping to convert all the meters to take the full range used in most metering systems.

As well as racing back and forth from shopping to drop the nickel into the slot before the time expires, car owners can purchase a monthly parking permit for $10.

These permits must follow, the city bylaw which allows two-hour parking at meters designated for ½-hour and one hour limits. The permits are better utilized at metered lots which allow drivers to park for the entire day.

Last month the BPA presented motorists with 1,798 parking tickets and 40 courtesy parking cards. The courtesy cards are placed on cars of overtime, out-of-country and in some cases, out-of-town cars whenever the motorist is in the city and posting out certain regulations regarding parking. The cards allow a 15-minute leeway to permit the motorist time to retrieve the meter which has expired.

Mr. Miles explained that last month, the meter men cancelled 181 tickets, or four to five per cent.

"We will go to great lengths to give the motorist the benefit of the doubt," he said.

He described the steps which he goes through in testing equipment which motorists have claimed as being defective.

"In many cases we bring the meter into the shop and put it through a series of tests."

If the timing is out by even one minute, the recipient of the ticket gets his fine refunded.

The parking authority is run in the same manner as a private business, with taxes, and purchasing of land required. The city will receive a levy in the authority shows a deficit.

The levy received only twice in the past 10 years.

The revenue from meters and tickets averages $70,000 to approximately $85,000 last year. From this, all expenses are met.

OWRC Meeting Tuesday, July 28

An Ontario Water Resources Commission public hearing will be held at Centennial Secondary School, Palmer Road, Belleville, beginning Tuesday, July 28 at 1 p.m.

The meeting is between the townships of Sidney, Brighton, Murray, Thurlow, Ameliasburg and Hillier, the towns of Stirling, Frankford, Wellington, Brighton and Trenton and the city of Belleville.

This meeting is being called to decide whether or not to provide area - wide water and sewer services instead of individual systems.

Industries in the area have been notified about the meeting and will be open to the public for inquiries.

When nine municipalities need in 1971 to build a project of area - wide water treatment, the vote called met with a 5-4 defeat.

Contract Awarded for Bayside School

By KENNETH SMITH
Staff Reporter

The Hastings County board of education last night awarded the contract for a new composite secondary school at Bayside to a Markham, Ont. firm, Konvey Construction Ltd.

The contract amount is $3,340,387, $119,000 less than the base bid initially submitted to the board by the company on July 15.

The original Konvey tender was the lowest of four received by the board; however, it was still $119,000 more than the total allowable by the Ontario Municipal Board and the Department of Education.

At the board meeting on July 15, members decided that the new 1,200-student school was going to cost more than Ontario government departments had made provision for and the architect of the school, Irving Bolgon of the architectural firm Bolgon and Heuvere, Don Mills, was given until last night to survey the tenders and decide how money could be shaved off the projected cost of the Bayside school to bring it in line with anticipated Ontario government limits.

Mr. Bolgon told the board last night that "the building is fairly lean as it is" but that "by certain changes and deletions" the $119,000 could be cropped off the total.

"By taking out bleachers, certain mechanical features, sliding shelving in the caterers' areas and storerooms, by changing the aluminum bargeboard to a wood one" the architect contended that the price could be cut.

"We could take the ceiling out of the art room" Mr. Bolgon continued, pointing out that "there are a few other items that could be removed to bring the cost within the OMB limit".

Mr. Bolgon made clear, however, that these items may have to be put in later.

Linton Read, principal-elect of the new composite school, showed some concern about the projected deletions and revisions, saying that paving, sodding and seeding could be removed but...

Mr. Read contended that, although deleted items were not "necessary" for the functioning of the school, they would have helped provide the best possible educational environment.

Superintendent L. A. Kells said that he did not want to go to the Ontario Municipal Board above $2,153,540 for the amount to be debentured by the board.

The Ontario Municipal Board approved debenture as the maximum for Bayside school debentures on October 28, 1969 and would perhaps, be difficult to have this ceiling lifted.

The board anticipated a vocational education grant from Queen's Park toward the cost of the new school. This will be for $1,937,786.

The permitted debentures and the vocational grant will give the board a capital fund of $4,091,326 for the new school.

The general contract amount of $3,340,387 together with a fee of $227,640 for the architects, a bill of $429,010 for furniture and equipment and $30,000 for fees, financing charges and surveys bring the total cost of the school to a projected $4,091,326 — an amount that coincides with the capital estimate.

Mr. Kells suggested last night that the board make its application to the Department of Education for approval of the new fund on the basis of the capital available

"We could apply for the additional amount (i.e. the cost of debited revisions) later, so that we are not held up on the building itself," Mr. Kells said.

sub-contract was the lowest bid they had received — approximately $400,000.

Irving Bolgon, architect of the new school, pointed out to the board that "Wilson is not in contract with the board but with the general contractor".

Mr. Fleming was not prepared this morning to state whether he will follow up his inquiry.

Conflict of Interest Charged at Meeting

"It appears to me that there is a conflict of interest here," Paul Fleming said last night when he saw that the Konvey Construction tender for the new Bayside secondary school contained a sub-contract to Wilson Concrete Products Ltd. of Belleville for supply of precast concrete.

Mr. Fleming referred to the position of James Clarke, trustee and chairman of the Hastings County Board of Education. Mr. Clarke is general manager and vice-president of Wilson Concrete.

Mr. Fleming charged that "Mr. Clarke should not be on the board when tenders are being called". Mr. Clarke was not at last night's meeting. He is overseas at the moment.

Photo copies of section 50, the Schools Administration Act, were distributed to board members by Mr. Fleming as the basis of his conflict of interests inquiry.

He referred to the portion of section 50 that disqualifies an individual from being a school board trustee, if he "has an interest in any contract with the board or with any person acting for the board or in any contract for the supply of goods or materials to a contractor for the work for which the board pays".

Charles Wilson, president of the firm was immediately contacted by the board to determine Mr. Clarke's relationship to the company.

He board immediately shifted into closed session to discuss the matter; one informed source reported that the board was told "Mr. Clarke is not a shareholder, he is not sharing in the profits".

Dennis Hawley of Konvey Construction, who was present at the open session, told the board that the Wilson Concrete sub-contract was the lowest bid they had received — approximately $400,000.

Irving Bolgon, architect of the new school, pointed out to the board that "Wilson is not in contract with the board but with the general contractor".

Mr. Fleming was not prepared this morning to state whether he will follow up his inquiry.

Rain Tops Normal

With rainfall for the month already having more than surpassed the average for July, it was more of the same yesterday as the Quinte district was favored with close to another inch of rain.

Figures released officials at Belleville said .36 inches of rain fell Monday — most of it during a severe thunderstorm during mid - afternoon which sent pedestrians scurrying for cover.

The total rainfall for the Belleville area since the week-end deluge started Sunday afternoon was given as 1.47 inch, bringing the precipitation so far this month to 3.95 inches.

Normal rainfall for the month of July is about 2.5 inches.

And there are still 10 days left in the month, giving lots of opportunity for more rain to fall.

Over at the Canadian Armed Forces Base in Trenton, Ruby Tremblay reported less rainfall than at Belleville so far this month but said the 24 inches recorded last year among the highest since the keeping of weather records began back in 1941.

The record rainfall at Trenton for July was in 1951 when a deluge of 7.10 inches fell. At Trenton the average rainfall for the month was given as 2.3 inches — the same as for Belleville.

On the other end of the rain gauge scale, the driest July at Trenton was back in 1955 when the Quinte area was visited with something of a drought.

That year only .76 inches of rain fell.

Nautical Motif in South Bay Church

Decorated with the "stuff of the sea" — a backdrop of white netting for displays of lanterns, a ship's bell, a binnacle and a ship's wheel, the South Bay United Church takes on the appearance of a sea-worn ship. The church was decorated by Philip Dodds, a Cherry Valley resident who used his creative ability to revive a salute to seamen for Sunday's Mariners' Memorial Service.

Mariners' Service Well Attended

SOUTH BAY (Staff) — The sound of a ship's bell tolling the hour welcomed more than 300 persons to a Mariners' Service conducted Sunday in South Bay United Church. This special service revived a tradition of honoring Prince Edward County's seafaring men started in Cherry Valley in 1927, by Capt. Norman Palmatier.

Described as "a God-fearing sailor," Capt. Palmatier chanced to attend a church service. For sailors while his ship rested in port during one, of 81 many journeys on the Great Lakes. He returned from church very impressed with the idea of a service to bid sailors Godspeed. Later, he suggested a similar service could be held in his home village of Cherry Valley.

For 15 years, these annual services, usually conducted in April, were well attended by Prince Edward's old salts. When World War II broke out, the Toronto Telegram sponsored the British War Victims Fund and at Mariners' Services in the years that followed more than $20,000 was received for donation to this cause.

A leader in supporting and attending each of the 15 services held in Prince Edward was C. H. J. Snider, then associate editor of the Toronto Telegram. Considered one of Canada's foremost authorities, Mr. Snider, now 82 years old, yesterday sent greetings to the sailors and fishermen joining for the mariners' service.

Although the first mariners' service was held in Cherry Valley and was, for 15 years, an annual event, it has been revived in South Marysburg township. Relocation of this service centres around the South Marysburg Marine Society and its unusual open air meeting place, Marysburg residents, proud of their seafaring men, resolved in 1907 to celebrate Canada's centennial by re-erecting the old lighthouse once situated on False Duck Island.

Through the interest of the federal department of transport, the superstructure, lantern and light were presented to the Prince Edward Historical Society. Since the centennial opening, many relics have been contributed to the park museum, among them a wheelbarrow, an old anchor, a life boat from the Greek ship Protostatis, and a water gauge.

Featured speaker during the mariners' service was Rev. Wesley Neelands, who chose as his topic The Four Anchors. He based his address on the text "They cast four anchors out of the stern and wished for the day".

"The anchors," said Rev. Neelands, were intended to steady Paul's ship against a storm in the Mediterranean. "What four anchors can steady us against the storms of life?" he asked. "At this memorial service it is appropriate to think of the first anchor as the past. The things which enrich life come from the past and our progress depends on knowledge of what has gone before.

"Knowledge of solid, hard facts and their practical use is the second anchor while cooperation represents the third one. We must all pull together in the same direction. The fourth anchor is Jesus Christ. If Jesus is to be the secure anchor in our lives, when life can be, He must mean something very definite and solid to us," concluded Rev. Neelands.

Several of Prince Edward County's old salts took part in yesterday's service recalling their days "aboard ship". The Canadian Ensign was raised at the opening of the ceremony by William Hobson, Picton a former marine. Commodore James Plomer, Milford, chairman of the South Marysburg Marine Society read the scripture. Flowers in memory of county sailors who have entered the last port were placed on the altar by Capt. Andrew Haylock.

The service closed with the hymn Jesus Savior, Pilot Me ringing through the small brick church standing at the head of South Bay.

Active Sailors Join Service

SOUTH BAY (Staff)—Crew members from two ships visiting Prince Edward County waters last weekend attended the Mariners' Service in South Bay United Church.

The Nonsuch, a replica of the Hudson's Bay Company's first trading vessel, anchored Sunday at 6Pet Milford and Capt. Adrian Small with five of her crew members joined the service. Also anchored in South Bay was the brigantine St. Lawrence II from Kingston. About 20 members of her crew came ashore to take part in the revival of the county's traditional mariners' service.

The Nonsuch is expected to arrive in Picton this week for her scheduled visit celebrating the 300th anniversary of the Hudson's Bay Company.

Other special guests at Sunday's service included the Hon. George Hees, MP for Prince Edward-Hastings and Norris Whitney, MLA Prince Edward-Lennox. Seated with them were Mayor H. J. McFarland and county warden Gordon Lloyd.

During the service, Adrian Small, Captain of the Nonsuch was presented with a nautical sketch by South Marysburg reeve Allan Ralley on behalf of the township's marine society.

Permission Sought To Block Racers

A letter was received by Sidney Township Council last night from Lt.-Col. George W. Reid on behalf of the commanding officer of CFB Trenton requesting that the township install signal lights or stop signs along Curtis Road near the air base.

In the letter, Lt.-Col. Reid stated complaints about this road being used as a drag strip by local drivers had been received.

Council was quick to make a decision to apply to the provincial government requesting approval for the passing of a by law to allow construction of a 4-way stop on this road.

Other alternatives discussed were stop signs and crosswalk stripes along the road.

Object to Contract

A delegation of Sidney Township residents met with council last night to object to the township's employing a Belleville trucker instead of men within the township and pay taxes.

Reeve Jack Bush replied that the driver, John Whiteman, has been driving for the township for some time after tendering a lower tender than the local drivers.

Parents Object to Children's Transfer

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

BLOOMFIELD — A group of parents objecting to the proposed transfer of their children from Pinecrest school, Bloomfield, to North Marysburg Centennial school met last night with Prince Edward school trustees to explain their protest.

The change, suggested last week in a report to the board by Prince Edward director of education John McNeil, was considered because of possible savings in transportation costs. Mr. McNeil also noted that with future developments expected at the former Camp Picton, a number of new students might reside into the county. He added that he could not foresee the reopening of the 11-room elementary school at Picton Heights this year and suggested that these newcomers would study at Pinecrest school.

By transferring about 40 students living on Moira road from Pinecrest to North Marysburg school, the education director felt that transportation costs could be reduced and accommodations made for incoming students. Letters were sent to the parents of the pupils involved with the suggested transfer asking them to present their opinions to trustees.

A group of eight parents met with Prince Edward county board members last night and forwarded a petition signed by all but two families concerned protesting the student transfer.

After receiving the petition, chairman of the board, Edward Rutter, urged its supporters to explain their opposition to student transfer. In the discussion which followed, one parent remarked that Pinecrest school seemed "slightly superior to North Marysburg school in administration, staff and facilities." This comment gained general support. Others pointed out that their children did not want to be transferred and a number had been already relocated more than once.

Said one father, "Many of these children have been indoctrinated with a negative attitude by their parents. They have been told that the teachers, the curriculum and the school at Pinecrest are better and they will go in to North Marysburg with this attitude." He concluded that the principal and staff of North Marysburg school would be confronted by this preconceived feeling among the transferred pupils.

Reeve Rutter chairman Edward Rutter, "I'm sorry to hear that the pupils would go with this feeling." He added that the staff and program of this school compared favorably with all others in Prince Edward County.

In reviewing the transportation system, Mr. Rutter commented that trustees felt it was an injustice to students since they travel much farther than necessary. A definite savings in transportation, which accounts for 8.36 per cent of the annual budget, is also indicated by the proposed change. Transportation problems, including backtracking and delays, were outlined to parents by business administrator E. R. Shorts.

"The whole problem," insisted one father, "boils down to one little boy who wants to ride his bill and making our students ride in the cold for a time." Interjected a board member, "Where would we be if the board based the taxpayers' dollars loosely and ignored costs?"

Still adamant that transportation costs could not justify the transfer, another parent added, "It seems a poor argument that 40 kids have to be taken out of one school since some high school students have to wait in the cold for their bus. The only real reason offered for the transfer is to relieve this tiny problem at North Marysburg of busing these high school students. There seems to be something else in question here," he finished.

"I think you are trying to create something else in your own mind," replied Mr. Rutter.

Trustees reviewed the matter and decided against transferring the pupils from Pinecrest to North Marysburg School.

Board members agreed that the proposed change would parents seemed uninterested in the shorter bus ride that provide for their children.

Although some savings in transportation-costs were expected by trustees if the students were transferred, it was felt the opinions of parents and students must be considered.

Picton's Juliet No Balcony-lover

PICTON (Staff) — Immortalized by Shakespeare as a lovers' rendezvous, balconies by any other name still spell trouble for one Picton Juliet.

Abandoned last week under a back stoop, Juliet, a wide-eyed calico kitten, immediately howled her plight. When no Romeos made the scene to rescue her, she decided to sizzle out on her own. The starving kitten toddled to a nearby porch where she begged for food before an unsympathetic audience. An irate housewife shooed this feline freeloader with a towel and, tottering to go indoors, accidentally shut Juliet's tail in the screen door of the verandah. The kitten sent out distress signals that attracted the attention of a bystander who scooped her up and carried her to her home.

Juliet received her first square meal since her desertion from a plastic doll's bottle and then was shown to her room. It was on the ground floor of the house, under the front porch.

Her rescuer made several inquiries before finding a permanent home for the kitten. She bought bundle of orange and black fur. Few pet seekers were interested in a calico female kitten that had to be "spayed" before being adopted. Juliet's chances for adoption was her broken tail which had begun to heal at an odd angle.

A Picton man seeking a kitten for his daughter agreed to look at Juliet but did so reluctantly in view of her case history. When he did see her he remarked, "I have to take her home. If I didn't, with those kids here, no one else would take her in."

Since her arrival in her new home Juliet has learned to eat tinned cat food but still refuses to drink from a saucer. Consequently she receives two bottle feedings daily. Encouraged by her 12-year-old mistress, Juliet has become a playful kitten that enjoys scampering through the house until she collapses into sleep. She was named Juliet when her new owners learned of her life beneath balconies.

Since Picton has no humane society, this kitten's adoption was an accidental rescue. Ordinarily stray cats or dogs reported to the police are turned over to a local veterinarian for destruction if they are unclaimed by their owners within a week.

The Ontario Humane Society has approached Picton town council with a plan for caring for strays but it is still under discussion by the finance committee. The society has considered the purchase of a mobile Animal Control Vehicle which would operate from the main shelter in Belleville and provide daily patrols in Picton. Impounded animals would be taken to the Regional Animal Shelter in Belleville and held for claiming. The suggested cost of this service is $1 per capita each year. Council has recorded no official decision on this proposal yet but it was noted by one councillor that it seemes "rather expensive".

To Juliet, who has spent most of her life on or under balconies" this idea sounds like "the cat's pyjamas".

Tax-saving Idea Outlined to Board

BLOOMFIELD (Staff) — An unusual plan to save the taxpayer's dollar was relayed to the Prince Edward County Board of Education last night through a letter from the Great Northern Pulp and Paper Group Ltd., Toronto.

In part, the letter stated, "There are hundreds of pupils who study each year in Metro Toronto high schools who come from beyond Metro's borders, the majority studying technical courses at Central Technical School. Fees payable to the Toronto board for these courses are about $1,500 per annum, paid, as a rule, by the pupil's home board. This is where we can help. This company owns much vacant land within Metro's borders on which we pay taxes but which is non-income producing. We would be willing to lease any of these properties at $750 per annum in order to ease our tax burden. The pupil would then be classed as a taxpayer in Toronto and, hence, entitled to free tuition. Savings to your board would be about $750, per annum per pupil. The mechanics would be quite simple; we would have our solicitor draw a lease in the pupil's name and would have to register him or her on our tax rolls prior to the beginning of the school year."

Trustees took no action on this savings scheme" during last night's meeting.

Drugs-an Answer?

If neither a permissive nor a punitive approach is the answer to the problem of drug abuse then what is?

A permissive approach, such as that suggested by the LeDain Commission in its interim report (removal for example of prison terms for possession, and in their place fines totalling not more than $100) does not seem the ideal answer in a society where indiscipline, alienation and parental neglect are already dangerously apparent.

Nor are lengthy jail terms either desirable or commensurate with the character of the offence. .

The federal government meantime seems unable to come to grips with the problem. It does, however, have the evidence of cross-country opposition in the form of comments by the provincial attorneys-general meeting in Halifax last week.

Attorney-General D. V. Heald of Saskatchewan for example criticized the LeDain report for demonstrating "quite clearly its anti-police bias and its drug-price stance."

To this and other criticisms of the report Justice Minister Turner, who was present at the meeting, said he would pass on the views to his cabinet colleagues "who now have to digest the report and decide what to do."

Thus, the problem remains up in the air. Drug abuse of course will not just go away overnight, although sometime in the future youthful addicts will perhaps come to realize there are better pursuits. And yet, if there were no such thing as drugs the kids likely would find some other way of departing from the norm. The only valid solution in our opinion is to inculcate in the young some old fashioned morality, interest in education, in people and the world around them, and of course, in a life's vocation.

Handing the youngsters their marijuana, speed, LSD, heroin or whatever on a silver platter, as the LeDain commission would have it, is not the answer. Nor are heavy jail terms. Essentially, what is required is restoration of the validity of the "square" world, which as we have noted before provides a man with all the necessities of life and still leaves room for individualism and some degree at least of eccentricity.

If the federal government and the provinces addressed themselves to this goal — to the improvement of the overall quality of life; and if the young people currently trapped by the drug thing could turn from their self-defeating ways and regain respect not only for themselves but for their fellow man, we are sure that drug abuse would largely disappear.

Political Babes

Precisely as we feared, and spelled out in a recent editorial, the United Nations World Youth Assembly in New York has proved to be nothing more than a propaganda exercise in the classical tradition.

An Associated Press report from the event which ended Saturday quotes one delegate's diplomat describing it as a parody on the performances of the adult representatives in the UN General Assembly. The report continues: "The assembly had hoped that the younger generation would offer fresh ideas for dealing with world problems (a point we made in our earlier editorial) and would be able to discuss in a friendlier atmosphere than the official spokesmen of government usually encounter.

"Instead, the assembly has been marked by ideological disputes, stereotyped speeches, procedural bickering and nearly chaotic conditions. Emphasis has been on political attacks rather than new approaches and steamroller tactics rather than consultation.

"Some observers were shocked by a lack of tolerance for opposition viewpoints. This was reflected in such actions as the refusal of the leftist-dominated majority in the Peace Commission to hear representatives of South Vietnam, South Korea and Nationalist China . . ."

The event reached the ultimate in farce when two of the participants — rival representatives of Angolan liberation movements — came to blows.

So much for the representatives of tomorrow's world, all 600 of them from more than 100 countries. Incidentally only 68 per cent of those present met the stipulation that delegates should have been born within the lifetime of the UN (1945 or later) and only 7 per cent were over 27 and one from Greece was 45.

Clearly we cannot put our trust for the future of mankind in political babes like these. And the sad thing about it all is contained in one paragraph in particular of the AP report: "It quickly became apparent that many were being coached by the UN delegates of their country and that, at least in the important [illegible] commission, the leftists were firmly in control."

With Election Only Two Years Away

Robert Stanfield's Low-key Approach in Question

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield never ceases to amaze.

He is so "responsible" — one of his favorite words — that, as he has told it, almost three years later, he deliberately withheld the Opposition's knock-out punch when the Liberal Government of former Prime Minister Pearson was reeling on the ropes of a defeat in the House of Commons, on a budget tax bill.

It was so astonishing as to be all but beyond understanding... the casual, matter-of-fact way Robert Stanfield told of how, knowing full well what he might be doing, he passed up the stunningly open — it was there, ready and waiting, almost begging — opportunity to take power.

It may never come to him again.

He did it — he has murmured in his low-key way, as if it were hardly worth mentioning— because at the time the Canadian dollar was weak, and to overthrow the already defeated Government might plunge the nation into international financial panic.

But was it really "responsibility" alone?

Or was there a nagging doubt of self-confidence?

Could it have been that, new in his Conservative leadership and only months into Federal politics and Parliament, he felt himself unready for the supreme burden a prime minister must bear?

The surprising confession — can you imagine Prime Minister Trudeau revealing such uncertainties and self-doubts? — came in answer to the blunt question as to how he felt he was doing, midway between national elections.

"I'm not at all satisfied with the effect," he shrugged, "and I don't know when you can expect a change. But I'm not contemplating becoming complacent about it."

Perhaps it is little wonder he sounds unsure.

For over these last two years he has taken a hammering more than hard enough to flatten even a man of steel.

But Robert Stanfield seems made of tougher and definitely more resilient stuff than most.

Not an insensitive man — for he has on most infrequent occasions betrayed anger — his pride must have been wounded thousands of numbing times in newspapers and magazines, on radio and TV, and especially in person in confrontation with Conservative MPs and constituents impatient with his very style.

Reasonable, responsible Robert Stanfield . . . with such a low boiling point as to suffer in silence while he took his most hurtful hammering over his "failure" to accept Parliament's open invitation, with the Liberal Government down and counted out in a Commons budget vote, to force, and at that time, almost certainly win the election.

It would have been "too theatrical" and altogether uncharacteristic for the man it now becomes apparent, to have defrocked himself then by explaining he had acted in what he considered the national interest.

But can responsibility be overdone to the point of approaching the irresponsible?

Since he burned his back on the open doorway to power almost nothing has gone right for Robert Stanfield.

His one partial success has been his facing down of Finance Minister Benson on the Government's White Paper on Taxation. But he has yet to pursue this path to still uncertain victory.

Must not a leader display confidence? Give inspiration? Lead the charge? Promise the victory?

Every leader so far on both sides of Parliament, yes, except Robert Stanfield.

"We must," he has low-keyed his last press conference, "intensify our preparations to take over the reins of government whenever the Canadian electorate gives us a mandate to do so."

What a contrast to George Hees' ringing "We'll lick hell out of thy Grits" . . . John Diefenbaker's "vision" . . . Pierre Trudeau's "Just Society" . . . Lester Pearson's "new Canada" . . . Louis St. Laurent's "good government" . . . and even Mackenzie King's "We do it better."

All of them sure of themselves. All positive with promise. All able to sound the call to arms. All confident of triumph.

But Robert Stanfield . . . "We have to come forward with appropriate policy approaches, find candidates of stature and establish confidence in myself as leader" . . .

And after doing all this, with less than two years in which to do it, not to demand, nor fight, perhaps not even plead, but to wait patiently for "the electorate to give us a mandate."

It is an almost emotionally different — except that, of all things, Robert Stanfield's sensational is not — kind of national leadership.

Will it work?

A Canadian in New South Wales

A Jaundiced Look at School System 'Down Under'

Letter to The Globe and Mail

I am terribly concerned about the possibility of Canadian teachers being deluded into accepting positions with the New South Wales Department of Education without knowing the true facts — which they are unlikely to hear from the recruiting officers. As a Canadian teacher here for years, I can possibly speak with some little authority.

As a country, Australia must stand very close to the proverbial paradise. As a people, Australians are as friendly and hospitable a race as you'd meet anywhere. As a source of inspiration to students and writers alike, the education system here would rank somewhere back in the Dark Ages.

Education here is authoritarian and repressive, the general attitude here seems to be that man was born in Original Sin, and he will never leave that state unless firmly shown the way — by external influences such as the cane. Little evidence is placed in the natural goodness of children, and "psychology" is a word that evokes gales of anti-intellectual laughter at any staff meeting.

Though potentially wealthy, Australia churns her present wealth back into mineral resources, paying scant attention to her human resources. The tiny funds allotted to education are a national scandal, and gaps pils are choated from infancy to university of their natural heritage. Unless a school is in a wealthy area where parents make large contributions to the school's finances (a major source of education funds), materials and teaching aids are severely limited or non existent. We had two raw record players, a film strip projector, a movie projector — and we considered ourselves well - off, in a school of 800 children. We had, I say, because all this equipment was stolen within three months in an ever-present problem in New South Wales.

One is lucky to get enough art paper (white, one size only) to give one's class art once a month; and I've managed to keep it a closely guarded secret that I have one full can of each color of paint. The one set of inferior quality scissors allotted to these 800 children has been depleted over the past year so that now there are only 30 pairs in it. I regularly "help myself" to butcher paper (unscripted when I shop at the groceries, in order to provide an alternative art material. The thousand little things a teacher needs and uses — cellulose tape, paper clips, pins, rubber bands — must all, all come out of his or her own pocket.

Developmental equipment for physical education is practically unknown, except from educational films (and expert, once again, for the wealthier areas).

Rooms are small, shoddy, and incredibly inferior in every way to the worst rooms in the Toronto system. My own blackboard measures about 8 ft. by 5 ft., and my one bulletin board would be twice that. (They managed that last year, to cover up years of use on poor material.) Stencils are given grudgingly, and paper for running them off is carefully allocated. You see, even duplicating machines, stencils and paper are supplied by the parents' organizations, whose sole purpose is fund-raising, not educational interest.

These organizations, by the way, are chartered by the Education Department itself, and according to the department's latest guide - book, one of their chief purposes is "to assist in providing desirable aids to teaching which the Department of Education is unable to supply (library books, pictures, sewing machines, handcrafts, and manual arts materials, etc.)". To add insult to injury, the guide-book goes on to state that "All equipment purchased and donated to the school by a Parent and Citizens' Association becomes the property of the Education Department." Some militant P and C groups have been partially successful in directing policy (the construction of a badly needed school was moved forward by two years in a local situation), but one can't help but notice that this usually obtains in an area where the parents have contacts at much higher levels than that of school principal.

An English friend of mine, formerly teaching in Toronto, teaching now in an inner city fast school here, goes home frustrated and depressed day after day. She has no blinds on her windows (tantamount to teaching in Canada in a school without central heating), her overcrowded Grade 1 class has no creative materials whatsoever (not even crayons!) and there is no piano or other musical equipment in the whole school. She recently arranged a bus trip for her class, most of whom have seldom been outside the suburb. Because a large number could not produce the 20-cent fare, the trip had to be cancelled — there simply are no funds available for such "luxuries".

My son attends the local high school, one of the largest in the state, where his elective subjects extend to music and geography. French is the only foreign language taught (Latin teachers are nearly as hard to find as Science and Mathematics teachers here.) One language she boys do know, however, is that of the cane. It is administered for tardiness into line, touching the railings while ascending or descending stairs, or dropping litter. However, the exact same punishment — "six of the best" — is given for theft, rudeness to teachers, or truancy. The penalty for politically-motivated outside school hours, is suspension. I'm sure there is a lesson in this somewhere, but the values and priorities are too confused for one to locate it.

And now here some mutterings from the "silent majority". "Good on the Australians—they know how to keep their kids in line. One of these unnecessary and badly needed school was moved forward by two years in a local situation), but one can't help but notice that this usually obtains in an area where the parents have contacts at much higher levels than that of school principal.

Michigan Woman Seeks Information on Forebears

Editor,
The Intelligencer,

I am looking for information regarding my grandparents whom I believe had connections with the Belleville area.

My grandmother was Mary Webb, a French Canadian and a Catholic, and she had brothers and sisters in the Belleville area.

She married Peter Pittman in Canada and they came to Michigan in the 1880s, settling first in Wyman and then in Edmore. They had one daughter, Martha, who married my father, Albert Jannings, of Edmore.

My mother died young; when I was only two and she is buried in Edmore. My grandfather died about 1936 or 1937 and is buried in Edmore. My grandmother died in 1929 and is buried in Ewart.

I have very little information about either of my grandparents and would like to get in touch with relatives. My grandmother's memory is sacred to me as she was the only mother I ever knew.

When my mother died she left behind her, besides myself, a half-brother. I was born in May, 1926.

Decision Soon On Satellite

Communications Minister Eric Kierans today told a Belleville source that a decision will be made this week or early next week on Canada's communications satellite contract.

Mr. Kierans was quoted by Frank Murray, Belleville Chamber of Commerce president, after a long-distance telephone discussion with the minister this morning.

The phone call added the Chamber's voice to city hall's support of the bid of Hughes Aircraft of California on the satellite contract — a tender which carries a $5,250,000 subcontract for Northern Electric in Belleville.

Meantime, A. F. G. Tooth, Northern Electric's satellite program manager in Belleville expressed increased optimism on the federal cabinet's decision on the controversial contract.

"We feel more optimistic than we did a few weeks ago," said Mr. Tooth.

Mr. Murray's phone conversation with the communications minister followed plans to lead a Chamber delegation to Ottawa on Northern Electric's behalf.

Mr. Murray said such a delegation was immediately impossible because of Mr. Kierans' "back - breaking schedule.

However, Mr. Kierans telephoned him personally this morning and told him a decision on the contract was a "difficult one" for the government to make.

However, Mr. Kierans said a decision had to be made "quickly," reported Mr. Murray.

Mr. Murray, originally intent on stressing the urgency of a decision for the Belleville electronics plant, said Mr. Kierans told him: "You are preaching to the converted."

Meantime, an official of Spar Aerospace Products in Toronto, today said the firm has negotiated a $1,250,000 contract with Hughes for the satellite's structural components.

The Montreal Gazette said Hughes was including the Toronto firm as a major subcontractor in its contract bid.

In Belleville, Mr. Tooth said he was also aware that parts of the satellite would be involved in the Spar contract.

Vaccination Program Readied for Children

Thousands of young children in the Quinte district will be vaccinated against German measles when they return to school this fall.

Dr. C. R. Lenk, medical officer of health, says his Hastings and Prince Edward Counties Health Unit is preparing students in grades one and two this fall.

Meantime, in Winnipeg, the Canadian Pediatrics Society Monday passed a resolution urging health authorities at all levels of government to institute mass vaccine programs to counteract what has been described as an epidemic looming in Canada.

The resolution, passed at the annual meeting of the society, warns that defective children could be born in Canada this winter if no effort is made to control the disease.

Dr. Donald McLean, chairman of the society's infectious health authorities can't be persuaded "that we have an epidemic situation on our doorstep."

He said a pregnant woman exposed to the highly infectious disease in her first three months of pregnancy runs a 30-40 per cent chance of producing a child with heart disease, cataracts, hearing defects or mental retardation.

Dr. Lenk said German measles is not "very easy" to discern because of its extreme mildness.

Because it's difficult to diagnose, statistics are not reliable and any prediction of an epidemic would therefore be hypothetical, said the health officer.

Its only hazard is to women in the first months of pregnancy, he said.

But many pregnant women — perhaps as many as 80 per cent — already have had German measles earlier in life and are therefore immune, although they may never have been aware of contracting the infection.

A smaller percentage — maybe 10 per cent — of those infected would produce children affected by the disease, he added.

While such cases are rare they are personally tragic, said Dr. Lenk.

"While it is rare, we must consider that even one case is worthwhile fighting for."

In instituting mass immunization in the schools, the health unit is following steps advocated by the provincial government, said Dr. Lenk.

Vaccine is not now available at the health unit. It will be received from provincial authorities in time for the school program.

The said vaccine was available earlier in the United States but Canadian federal authorities were more cautious before releasing it for use in Canada.

In Toronto, Dr. J. S. Bell of the Ontario department of health said the province began an immunization program this spring of children in the four grades of elementary school.

He said the immunization was carried out in May and June and will be completed this fall.

Dr. Bell said reported cases of german measles are lower in Ontario this year than last, but exact figures were unavailable.

He said U.S. health authorities predicted an epidemic this year, but it has not materialized.

Doctors say vaccination of all children from one to 11 years would quash any potential epidemic, and reduce the likelihood pregnant women would catch the disease.

Children one to 11 years are more susceptible to German measles than persons who have had the disease, or children immunized during the 1964 epidemic.

Both varieties of vaccine, HPV 77 and Cendehill, are available in bulk to governments at $1 a child.

"Many parts of Canada escaped in 1964," Dr. McLean said in Winnipeg Monday, referring to the high incidence of the disease that year.

"We're going to get it this time," he said. "We have to be prepared for the worst."

A woman exposed to the disease during the first month of her pregnancy runs a 50-percent chance of giving birth to a defective baby, he said.

The symptoms — a slight peach blossom rash, swollen glands and slight fever — are so mild that four or five cases are misdiagnosed or ignored for every case reported.

Permission Sought To Burn Refuse

Sidney Township Council will make application to the Ontario Department of Energy and Resources, Air Pollution Branch in Kingston for a temporary permit to burn garbage at the disposal site north of Bayside School.

While it is not the intention of the township to burn garbage, but rather, to cover it up, citizens have been setting their own fires. The township must, therefore, make application for a permit to burn the refuse.

An announcement from the township treasurer reported that $16,730.09 has been collected in taxes. This amount is an increase over the July collections of last year.

The engineering department of the Ontario Department of Highways will receive application from the township to install an eight foot high, 78 foot long major culvert on Whites Road in concession one. The township must receive approval on the installation before construction commences.

'Lifeline' Service Explained to Rotary

By BARRY McCULLAGH
Staff Reporter

Many Bellevillians are familiar with Lifeline, which provides a 24-hour telephone link with trained counsellors for people in varying degrees of distress. But although its telephone number, 962-4111, is advertised regularly in the newspaper and its work has been publicized on a number of occasions, some are still unaware of its existence..

Established in Australia seven years ago, Lifeline now operates in five countries. The Belleville operation was the second one to come into being (in 1967) in Canada, after Sudbury's, and where now are two others in Kingston and Hamilton. Among those hearing about Lifeline for the first time were some members of yesterday's Rotary audience; they heard a young woman counsellor outline the work of the Belleville operation.

The counsellor is one of about 50 who preserve a 24-hour shift system vigil at the end of a telephone. Of 1,564 calls last year, 223 were from persons suffering from loneliness and depression; 190 were teen problems such as a pregnancy, breaking with a boy friend or problems with parents. Another 177 were in the realm of marital breakdown and 155 had to do with alcohol problems and boat calls.

The boat calls, the counsellor said, are not always easy to detect but are listed seriously anyway because they might come from persons "testing" the service and who might be heard from again.

Both Lifeline's location and the identity of counsellors are kept secret because it is felt that anonymity increases their effectiveness, especially in a relatively small community like Belleville. Counsellors undergo a 17 - week training course, including what is called the sensitivity training" which involves learning "more about self and others.

The training course starts in the fall. In addition to 17 weeks tinuously upgrading their training, counsellors are continuowledge in the light of new developments such as the drug problem.

Counsellors not only are an immediate human link with those in trouble, they also have access to other professional help in the medical and psychiatric spheres. Lifeline also works closely with the United Community Services.

The counsellor explained that while counselling could have a religious background "we are not a bunch of Bible thumpers who try to cram religion down people's throats." It was felt however, that counsellors had thought of this aspect of their own lives; the organization believed there was a need for such a forum and that it must cater to the "total man."

The Lifeline representative described the organization as "an interesting way for the Christian church to get into the swim of life."

She said that among last year's calls 22 were threatened suicides which "rather surprised me." The remaining calls included 81 concerning parent-child relationships, 31 about drugs and pills, 99 were spiritual problems, 27 were from unmarried mothers and 11 had to do with sex.

Last year's report said the calls represented all levels of distress — "from mild apprehension to absolute desperation."

Lifeline's budget in Belleville is about $1,000 annually which comes principally from the organization's members. Funds are not solicited although donations are welcome.

the arms it would need, he told the House of Assembly.

Britain has emphasized that any weapons it would sell to South Africa would be used for external defence and not for use to quell internal opposition.

However, in the United Nations, where Britain also came under attack, Ambassador Davison Nicol of Sierra Leon said that the arms South Africa would receive would be used for "the suppression of human rights."

"Naval vessels may certainly be used for aggressive acts by ship-to-shore bombardment" of every coastal state-from Morocco to the Red Sea," he told the UN Security Council.

Also at the UN, fears of an Anglo-French veto has forced militant Africans to drop demands for a mandatory UN embargo on such sales.

But their chairman, Ambassador Radha Ramphul of Mauritius, said the group will press for a stronger Security Council resolution than those adopted in 1963 and 1964.

The council then called on all states to stop selling South Africa arms, military equipment and the means for their manufacture.

Ramphul, who conferred with other members of a 10-nation African strategy group after the council adjourned debate on the arms sales issue Monday night, said he hopes a new resolution will be tabled today.

Mohawk Women, Priest Found Craft Industry

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

TYENDINAGA — Age-old designs are producing a brand new range of gift products with an immitable Quinte touch on the Mohawk reserve here.

It's all due to the revival of a native skill and the enthusiasm of an Anglican clergyman.

Indian bead and leather products now are being handcrafted once more by the Mohawks — the original Bay of Quinte settlers.

And the man to place an order with is Rev. Cyril Betts, rector of Christ Church, chaplain to the Mohawks — and business agent for what may be a flagging cottage industry of unknown potential here.

The embryonic enterprise had its beginnings earlier this year with the arrival of handicraft classes on the reserve.

Broadly, the program was part of cultural revival — made possible by federal grants — that also launched courses in native dialects for the Tyendinaga Mohawks.

The craft classes reintroduced Mohawks to hand skills long fallen into disuse.

A number of women — working in their own homes — could program production in their own time.

Rev. Betts assumed the role of business director — a post he felt blended with his clerical assignments.

"As rector of the parish and chaplain to the band, the welfare of the whole is my total concern," he says.

Later, discussing the project with a diocesan executive, he was asked if his Mohawk parishioners could prepare a display of their handicrafts for a church event.

The colorful combination of buckskin and beadwork scored a hit — a success later repeated at an arts council display in Oshawa.

Now, says Rev. Betts, the group is ready to exhibit its work on request anywhere.

The stock is dramatically native.

Buckskin is patterned through a range of clothing — from tiny, baby-size moccasins to fringed vests to beaded dresses.

The colorful headwork is designed into necklets, headbands, men's ties.

But the Mohawks apparent-ly are not strictly confined in designs.

"We take orders for anything — in any color scheme and then send them out on approval," claims Rev. Betts.

Prices graduate with the size — and designs — of the goods.

Rev. Betts quotes prices anywhere from $1 for a pair of infant moccasins up to $125 for a fringed, full-length, beaded buckskin dress.

However, he warns, prices are subject to change — as costs of materials vary.

The project serves a multiple purpose.

Culturally, it provides an incentive for a revived native art. It's an economic benefit — which can be achieved without housewives leaving their homes.

"Women can work it in with their housework, as the mood strikes," says Rev. Betts.

"We're hoping, as this catches fire, more women will go at it," he adds.

The results could be an even broader accomplishment — a cottage industry, homegrown on the reserve, not tied to the need for initial capital investment.

Rev. Betts believes the project "could develop to the point it will make a real financial contribution to the community."

Cambodian Girls Train to Become Combat Soldiers

PHNOM PENH (AP) — The three Cambodian girls held hands and giggled quietly among themselves as they walked with the graceful glide of Southeast Asian women across the grassy field.

They might have been school children exchanging bits of gossip, but each carried a U.S. M-1 carbine across one shoulder. They were going to a class in the use and care of small arms, and were part of the first class of 1,700 Cambodian girls being trained to become combat soldiers or nurses.

Some would join train crews, which is about the same as a front-line soldier in Cambodia. A few would be officers or communications experts with combat units. All were volunteers.

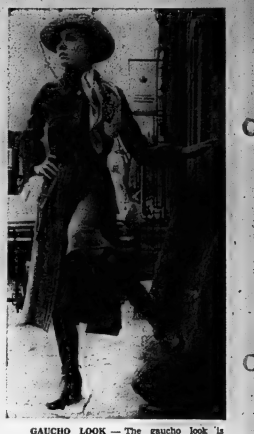
Male volunteers for Cambodia's army often find themselves firing a weapon for the first time when they are plunged into combat three days after enlisting. The girls will get at least a month of training before going to the field. The nurses and officer candidates will get still more schooling, says Col. Oum Pena, commandant of the newly-formed Women's Army School.

The parade ground showed more litter than grass. The formations resembled girl scout troops marching in a museum.

There were at least half a dozen types of berets, field caps and fatigue caps. Blouses and trousers might be either khaki or green or any combination of the two. Shoes often were civilian models designed for tennis, street or leisure hours at home. The most common were rubber sandals with a thong passing between the big toe and its neighbor.

While the instructors went through the intricacies of stripping and reassembling French, American and Chinese small arms the girls might encounter later, small boys moved through the groups hawking soft drinks from plastic bags.

Some of the weapons refused to give up the resounding click of a spring-loaded firing pin going home. The rifles were too old or in too bad a state of repair to fire. As Asians do when they are embarrassed, the instructors giggled. The girls giggled back, not maliciously but in sympathy.



One of the student privates was Ann Thrang, a girl of 18 who wore hand-me-down fatigue pants discarded by some male soldier, an ill-fitting khaki shirt and a beret cocked at an angle far more stylish than military.

She alternately grinned and bit her tongue as she tried to replace the firing pin and spring inside the bolt of a First World War French rifle.

Why had she joined?

"I lived in a village near Prey Veng when the war started. The Communists came with their mortars and guns to our village in an attack one morning. I have seen what the Viet Cong do in Cambodia and I hate them for this. I do not understand politics, but I must fight for the Government of National Salvation."

That is the official title of Gen. Lon Nol's regime.

Biki Boutiques Displayed at Show

ROME (AP) — The girl Biki had in mind in her fashion collection at the Italian fall-winter high fashion show must have a split personality. When she's wrapped in the haute couture creations, she's well bred. In Biki's boutique clothes she's quite the opposite.

The boutique items, for instance, included knitted, long-sleeved, skin - tight leotards with contrast stockings; the body banded in orange satin ribbons. Or consider the sadomasochist stance of maroon-quins, carrying whips with their white wool Zouave pants suits, life-sized cheetah pelts dangling like arrows from their belts.

The serious clothes that followed the boutique numbers stressed nicely-tailored suits, coats, ensembles in a wide range of tweeds and patterned wools. Jackets were short and fitted, skirts were usually gored. Mid-calf was the day length. A version of the bloused battle jacket, modified and soft, was a key shape for both day and evening suits.

Biki was big on culottes both in one-piece pants dresses and in suits. Some had apron panels. Comfortable-looking jersey culotte dresses accompanied smooth wool casual coats with patch pockets, tied belts and long prep-school plaid mufflers.

Most coats were fitted, loosely, and barely flared at the hem. A bias band neck with the end looped was used on the best coats — in tweeds and printed wools. A pattern with enormous chic resembled the geometric leading that frames stained glass. It was shown in black on white and the reverse.

Dresses for little dinners were soft, often sashed in satin ribbon, with either full, long sleeves or gathered full skirts.

A pretty brown mat jersey long-sleeved dress had a scoop - neck bodice and gathered skirt, satin ribbons crisscrossed over the diaphragm.

Trailer Used as Classroom to Help Parents Help Offspring

TORONTO (CP) — Since last November a new and expensive trailer has been appearing in various parts of Toronto and then disappearing.

The white trailer does not belong to an affluent band of gypsies but to the Ontario department of education which is using it as a centre for continuing education and community development.

The $21,000 trailer is equipped with a classroom and blackboard, projectors, video equipment, an office and sitting room —and an urn with an endless supply of coffee.

The trailer's designer, Ken Koyama, is also its director. The purpose of his program is to help parents help their children.

Attracted to the trailer by a series of outdoor movies, the interested parent can then choose the program he wants. It can be anything from reading to communications, but he is expected to carry on with his studies after the trailer leaves.

Mr. Koyama and his staff of three are emphasizing programs on pre-school children because, as the former grade 1 worker says, "the problems of a child begin before the child is five years old."

The only obstacle the trailer staff has found is a multiplicity of social-work agencies serving one area. The agencies, says Mr. Koyama, think sections of urban Toronto are as closely knit as any farm community.

"In these city areas I strongly suspect that most of the people don't want to know each other," he said. "They all have problems of their own."

Mr. Koyama kept that suspicion in mind when he designed the program to benefit the community and its development and not be on a person-to-person basis.

The trailer, however, is not as isolated as it may seem, since during the interview with Mr. Koyama one of his staff came into the trailer leading a small boy who had cut his knee. That boy's parents may be among the 200 to 300 adults who are using the trailer.

Modern Woman Likes Pants

ROME (AP) — Despite the title of long skirts sweeping in, Tiziani does not see the active modern woman abandoning pants.

In his collection, pleated culottes and gaucho pants — midi, naturally, — were a strong feature. They were topped by dashing capes, jackets or jerkins over sweaters, and worn with sued boots and visored caps.

One of the best by the Texas-born designer, Evan Richards, better known as Tiziani, was double-faced brown wool cape lined in brown and white window - pane checks to match pleated culottes. Also there was a hip-length belted suede jerkin over a white ribbed turtleneck pullover.

The coats were fitted and widely flared, often with double martingale - back belts. There were several good-looking coat costumes, notably a grey wool printed with small flowers in pastel stripes over a matching midi dress.

Antonelli's collection was a deft reprise of late 1930s look. Girls in slick, tween-belted suits with modified square shoulders and box - pleated skirts were muffled to the ears in fluffy fox hats. Suits were shown with classic white shirts and big felt hats with brims turned up in front. Lots of rust, pearl grey, brown and white.

Antonelli kept street hemlines at mid-calf, and showed late-day midis about five inches above the ankle. The distinction is a good one.

The best of the glamor clothes were soft and supple. A standout was a dully-glistening silvery jersey dress with dolman sleeves, bare back, clinging at the hip and opening into undressed deep pleats.

The Girl of the Golden West was the star turn at Ognibene-Zenderman. Wool suits had vests of metallic-and-tweed brocade over silk shirts. Models wore felt Aussie hats and high-heeled gruesome boots of suede or colored kid.

Whipped suede edges trimming coats and jackets carried out the western theme. And several coat and suit ensembles of solid-color wool had contrasting patterned skirts.

Suit jackets were fitted and hip-length, the midi skirts barely belled or pleated. Fabrics were combined imaginatively.

WEDDING

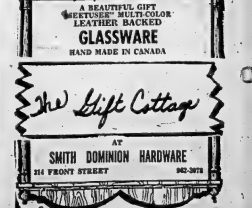
BORGMAN — GORR

TWEED — Holy Trinity Anglican Church, Plevna, was the setting for the July wedding of Sally Grace, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Gorr of Plevna, and Manfred Anthony Borgman of Peterborough, son of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Borgman of Peterborough. Rev. John A. Lombard officiated, assisted by Rev. James Thompson of Madoc. Wedding music was played by Mrs. William Gorr.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose a floor-length gown of white silk organza over taffeta with embroidered flowers and matching train. Her shoulder length veil was attached to a floral headpiece and she carried a bouquet of red roses and white carnations.

Miss Lynn Gorr, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and wore a pale yellow floor-length gown of polyester silk with three-quarter sleeves and floral headpiece, and carried a bouquet of tinted green carnations.

Mrs. Paul McLaughlin, sister of the bridegroom, Mrs. Frank Sleeprand and Mrs. Norman White, sisters of the bride, were bridesmaids. Mrs. Patsy White, niece of the bride, was flower girl. All wore mini-gown floor-length gowns of polyester silk with three-quarter length sleeves and wore floral headpieces and carried yellow tinted carnations.



Paul McLaughlin was groomsman and the guests were ushered by William Gorr, Frank Siegerland and Norman White. Mark Gorr, nephew of the bride, was ringbearer.

At the reception in the community hall, Plevna, the bride's mother wore a blue long-sleeved silk dress with sleeveless lace coat and white accessories. She wore a corsage of white and pink Sweetheart roses. For travelling to the east coast, the bride changed into a pink silk pant dress with white accessories.

The couple will reside at 540 Bolivar Street, Peterborough.

Left: This is Madeleine de Rauch's version of the midi-skirt, seamed and flared, in plain rust color British wool Saxony, worn with a loosely fitted tailored jacket to thumb base, with high and low pockets cut on the slant, in a classical checked Harris tweed picking out the shade of the skirt plus slate blue and black on white base. A navy wool beret an matching narrow scarf top off the ensemble. Right: British wool jersey fabric with the knitted look is a strong fashion story. Rhona Roy, of London, combines the two for a dress with a close fitting rib-knit top and short jersey sleeves, belt and gently flared skirt. Colors: Beige, white, blue, turquoise, sage, navy and gold.

Country Style Beets and Mushroom Sauce

By MARY MOORE

Are you a good vegetable cook? A great majority of restaurant chefs are not.

Our carefully grown local vegetables are coming into the market and it is our role to treat them with the same tender care that the grower did.

The beautiful little beets and the new tender spinach were side by side in rows in our local market. I was delighted with other fresh vegetables and fruits and wished I had a great big family to feed. I took my armloads to the car and went back for those beets and spinach.

I made Country Style Beets and a Mushroom Sauce to go over the spinach. The beets are a nice change from the Harvard treatment and the sauce can be used for countless purposes.

COUNTRY STYLE BEETS
(serves 4 to 6)

½ cup dairy sour cream (or natural sour cream)
2 tbsps. lemon juice
1 tbsp. minced green onion or chives
1 tbsp. sugar
1 tsp. salt
1-8 tsp. pepper (preferably white)
4 cups sliced cooked beets (or two 1-lb. cans when fresh are out of season)

Simply mix first six ingredients together and pour over hot beets. Heat through slowly but do not boil. I heated mine through in double boiler.

SPINACH WITH MUSHROOM SAUCE

NOTE: I have mentioned spinach but this sauce is good on green beans, broccoli, steak, meat loaf, meat cakes etc.—

two 10-oz. packages spinach
Mushroom Sauce Ingredients:
3 tbsps. butter or margarine
1 cup scrubbed and sliced fresh mushrooms (or ½ cup drained canned stems and pieces)
2 tbsps. flour
1 ¼ tsps. instant beef bouillon granules or 1 beef bouillon cube
¾ cup hot water
¾ cup light cream (or milk)
shake of nutmeg

Wash spinach and cook without adding water in covered pan, turning over once or twice until wilted and tender but still bright green. Drain through sieve and turn into preheated vegetable dish.

To make Mushroom Sauce melt butter or margarine, add mushrooms and saute until just limp, not brown. Then add flour and bouillon granules or cube and stir to blend. Stir in hot water (or if mushrooms are canned use their liquid) and cream and stir until thick. Add nutmeg. Pour over vegetables in serving dish or if to be used on meat dishes serve from preheated sauceboat.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Grandmother: "I used to enjoy taking care of my little granddaughter when she was a baby, but now she's 4, she is so much harder to manage. Anne has gotten into the habit of leaving her here once a week for the whole day. It wears me out, but I don't like to seem unkind."

Some grandmothers enjoy the chance to have their grandchildren by themselves. Others, equally loving, do not have the patience nor the strength to cope with active children for long periods.

Anne: "Mother, I know you love little Annie, but she's so full of pep, and I don't want her to exhaust you. Why don't you just invite her over whenever you feel up to it, and I'll have a babysitter the rest of the time."

Some grandmothers enjoy the chance to have their grandchildren by themselves. Others, equally loving, do not have the patience nor the strength to cope with active children for long periods.

Girl's Indian Father Gives Good Advice

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: The letter from the Iroquois Indian who wanted to speak for our boys and girls on the bus as "dirty old men." There are more dirty young women around than dirty old men.

Does the writer know how many females are working half naked in bars these days? It isn't safe anymore for a family man to stop for a quick one on his way home. Last Saturday I took out 15-year-old Jenny to lunch while his mother was shopping. The place used to be respectable. I was shocked when a cocktail waitress appeared wearing nothing from the waist up except a string of beads. The kid's eyes nearly fell out of his head. I got him out of there as fast as I could.

What's this country coming to when a man can't get a beer at four o'clock in the afternoon without getting embarrassed like that? What can the average citizen do? — SAN FRANCISCO SHAME.

DEAR SHAME: The average citizen can read. Bars that feature half naked waitresses say so on the outside. You'll be happy that most of these clip joints have gone out of business.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Six months ago I bought a pedigreed Chinese pug dog with my own money. I was crazy about him.

Yesterday when I came home from a movie my mother informed me that she had given away my dog. I blew my top. Now I am not speaking to either of my parents and they are treating me like I have some'loathsome disease. Was my dad right to do this? Does my letter sound biased? Please shaver in the paper so my folks can see it. — PRAIRIE VILLAGE FAMILY FIGHT.

DEAR FIGHTER: Your letter doesn't sound biased. It sounds incomplete. You offer no clue as to why your dad gave away your dog. Did he bite somebody? Did he bark at night? Did you neglect to walk him or feed him or bathe him? I cannot believe that out of a clear blue sky your dad gave away your pet. Supply the missing links and I'll offer an opinion.

Dancing Should Follow Natural Body Movements

TORONTO (CP) — Isadora Duncan was laughed at 50 years ago when she tried to tell people that dancing should follow the natural movements of the body.

The dancer, who died tragically when her scarf was caught in the spokes of a car's rear wheels, would probably be delighted at today's performance and success of Toronto's Esotonian Gymnasts.

Mrs. Felix Koop, director of the Kalev-Estienne School of Modern Gymnastics, said the triumph of her gymnasts at the world championships in Switzerland in 1969 gave her "goose pimples all over." They were one of 10 winners chosen on an equal basis from 153 international teams.

Mrs. Koop's team did not come to perfection easily. Like Isadora Duncan, they spend long hours of practice to make their movements seem effortless.

Even women who take Mrs. Koop's classes for exercise and grace rather than competition are subjected to an arduous schedule.

They practise twice a week, two hours a session, and receive extra lessons. They are not allowed to talk, wear makeup or arrive late, and must have their hair pinned back. Sweets and starchy foods are forbidden.

"It's all part of the very necessary discipline," said Mrs. Koop. "The girls don't need makeup or to have their hair done to look nice . . . the real beauty comes from within them and flows out."

The youngest of Mrs. Koop's "girls" is 5 and the eldest 63. There are about 1,000 of them in Toronto learning exercise of a feminine kind, built on walking and running movements, using handbells and silk scarves.

Although this type of gymnastics is a far cry from the often laborious vaulting-horse kind, all the muscles in the body are used.

"The muscles are used in such a way," said Mrs. Koop, "that none of them becomes over-developed but they all become toned up. The body becomes very beautiful. Girls develop poise, self-confidence." It was that poise and self-confidence that made Prime Minister Trudeau tell their performance "eye-catching" when he saw them perform at Expo '70 in Osaka, Japan a few weeks ago.

The enthusiastic response the Estonian Gymnasts received from the Japanese and Mr. Trudeau will probably be echoed when select groups of the best perform at the Canadian National Exhibition in August. The groups will tour Canadian universities in the fall, perform at the National Arts Centre in Ottawa and fly next spring to Argentina for a universities tour.

After that they will appear on the Johny Carson television show and represent Canada in December at the world modern gymnastics championships in Cuba.

The school started with 25 members, all of Estonian descend. It supports itself on membership fees of $25 a year and fund-raising demonstrations. Recently Mrs. Koop received from Estonian Minister William Davis a $200 cheque as a start to the Ontario Modern Gymnastics Federation.

Town Gets Female Planner

GALT, Ont. (CP) — Sally Thorsen says planning a town's growth is like doing a jigsaw puzzle. She is this western Ontario city's newly appointed planning director.

She says, for instance, that if a new subdivision is proposed she must consider its impact on the surrounding area and on the whole city. She must look at the location of schools, parks, shops, churches and road layouts.

She says cities are divided into communities that are in turn divided into neighborhoods.

She says her idea of an ideal community is one with a population between 75,000 and 100,000 —large enough to have all the facilities people want, small enough to be the administration of nearby country living.

Mrs. Thorsen works a four-day week. Her husband has a two-year old daughter, Lisa, who is looked after by a housekeper while her mother is at work. Her husband, Dr. Jan Thorsen, teaches veterinary virology at the University of Guelph.

Mrs. Thorsen says she chose her career partly because she wanted to do something that would not keep her tied to a desk. Now she says the work is becoming increasingly important as the country becomes more urbanized.

"People are becoming more concerned with planning problems now. For example, Galt hired its first full-time planner in 1963 and five years later the department has a staff of seven."

She and her staff are preparing a new official plan for Galt that will feature the gradual phasing out of industry from the city's downtown area over the next 20 years.

She says the plan may disappoint people who hoped to see full-scale urban renewal down town, but is a compromise she says the city and the people can afford.

Successful Living

Self-esteem Vital to Healthy Personality

By DORIS CLARK

Social workers suggest that we have just as much to fear from psychic pollution as we have from our material threats. Developing self - esteem in children — and even those who have suffered the polluting effects of broken or unhappy homes — is vital to the restoration of healthy personalities.

In a book entitled "Towards Effective Counselling and Psychotherapy", by Charles Truax and Robert Carkhuff, three essential qualities are required of a counsellor. These are genuineness, empathy, and warmth.

Genuineness is seen as the ability to be freely and deeply oneself; the same on the outside and the inside.

Empathy is the ability to understand the other fellow's problem as if it were one's own, and to communicate this.

Warmth is an unconditional caring and respect for an individual. Most of us tend to be conditional and possessive in our regard for children. Warmth is love.

Unloved parents produce children who have better relationships, more self-esteem, more than a mere positive approach to life in general.

Dear Doris: I was a blue baby and the doctors tell me it is a medical phenomenon for being alive at 45.

To add to my misfortune my mother always took a queer delight in making my life a whole lot grimmer than was necessary. One of her chief means of punishment was her loud complaint: "Now I hate dirty, rotten old kids. They should be drowned at birth!"

I also remember that when my brothers that since I had the lowest forehead I was the dumbest. Dig that 5th century attitude!

She also has the detestable habit of not speaking to me for weeks on end. I should like her but I don't. All I have is a great desire to get away from home and her influence.

Because of my bad heart I get a disability pension. I am not stupid and got good marks in school, but I don't think I could do a full - time job.

How can I get out of this place? — Unlucky.

Dear Unlucky: To judge from your long letter you have a greater potential than you are using.

You say you did go away from home five years and managed all right. I am wondering whether there might be a friend with whom you could share an apartment, and keep expenses down. Could you support yourself by doing something such as telephone sales from your room?.

You need the moral support of someone right on the ground who can help you think things through, and the practical information you can get from a vocational guidance resource.

Telephone your family counselling service for counselling and steering.

Designers Agree on Hemlines

PARIS (AP)—Hemlines will be low for fall, most designers agree, but designers still will give the women who wear fashion a chance to choose their own low level.

Yves Saint Laurent is all for ankle-length lilted styles. Jean Patou is promoting a long elegant look but says the days of pavement sweepers are over. Courreges says feminine problems must be settled individually. Griffe settles for 15 inches from the ground for daytime, and Lanvin definitely prefers calf-length.

Then a big group — including Dior, Chanel, Griffe, Nicci, Gosse and Cardin — propose from knee to mid-calf for day wear, ankle-length for cocktail wear and floor length for gala evenings.

Having already thrown the fashion world into confusion, the designers promise no bonabshella in their collections for this season.

The edict for lower hemlines in the spring and summer showings didn't really catch on, although some long dresses did appear in the collections. Store buyers were uncertain about what lengths to stock, and the customers in the stores generally turned up their noses at the new length.

Now the public will be given time to digest the new fashions before any more radical changes are made.

Andre Courreges, who has always been inclined to extremes, says there will be a new classicism in his collection.

"It will be less avant-garde than previous collections," he said. "It is a collection of transition, to reassure women who have just survived a troubled fashion experience."

He will propose no sex through effects. Fabrics will be opaque and smooth.

Cardin, who long hemlines dominating," covers up all nudity. He says he is against peek-a-boo fashions, bare arms and nude eroticism. He promotes dark stockings so that even his miniskirt hemlines give a total look.

A question of pants is no longer an obsession. Many designers say pants are out. But Dior says pants will never die, and Coco Chanel thinks they are right for sports or country relaxation.

For once, everyone agrees on the winter color palette. Dark muted tones stress ranges of violets, chestnut browns plum or a dark burgundy red. Black is revived by all, even for daytime at certain houses.

Economic Squeeze Will Shorten TV Season

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Inflation, rising costs, the economic squeeze and the loss of cigarette advertising are combining to make the coming television season the shortest ever.

The average series will have only 24 original shows. Some will have as few as 22, while a few lucky series will run as long as 26 weeks before going into reruns.

This means that the season will run out sometime in March, the exact week depending on whether the networks pad the time by dropping in a special or two.

Not only are high costs nibbling away the number of shows, but some producers are having to cut corners in other ways, such as fewer sets, less location shooting and smaller casts.

Just 10 years ago a half-hour show such as Richard Diamond could be brought in for $20,000. Producer Bob Claver said The Partridge Family is costing $108,000 an episode.

"That's a lot of bread when you think Diamond was done for under $40,000," he said.

Eleven years ago, when Bonanza began, it cost $114,000, which was expensive then because it was the first program filmed entirely in color. This season it will cost $215,000 a show.

Hal Holbrook, starring in The Senator, said budget restrictions are forcing some compromises in casting on the show.

"The administrative staff is what keeps a theater going, but we can't cast as many assistants as we'd like to," he said.

The ban on cigarette commercials, ordered by the U.S. Congress effective Jan. 1, will mean a $220,000,000 loss to the industry and a $150,000,000 loss to the networks alone.

The rising cost of television programming is due to several factors, the most important of which is the cost of labor. Some new equipment and techniques are being introduced, but for the most part films—including television shows—are still being made the way they were 30 years ago.

Another reason is that the audience today demands a more sophisticated show and the extras cost money.

Aaron Spelling, who is producing three series and 10 movies for ABC said: "We used to do 39 shows a year. Then 33. This year everybody's cut back to 24. That's false economy. It's saving money for the sponsors and the networks, but it's costing the actors and writers. That's two less scripts on every series. What happens a few years from now when it's cut back to 22 or 20?"

Larry Ewashen Guild Director

Larry Ewashen will become the Belleville Theatre Guild's third resident artistic director when his contract is signed early in August, it was announced today.

Mr. Ewashen, who will be taking over from Roy Higgins who left the Guild in June, will be part of what promises to be the guild's most productive and full season in its history here.

He will be in Belleville early in August to plan the guild's program for the coming year. A change this year will be a more flexible program featuring a host of activities other than the regular season productions.

Mr. Ewashen was raised on his parents' 1,000 acre ranch in Alberta. He was a jack of all trades before settling into drama — cowboy, truck driver, bouncer, English teacher, television advertising man, band leader, guitarist and writer — a great and varied backlog of experience to call upon in his chosen profession.

While attending the University of Alberta, although originally his interest was law, he won an acting scholarship to the Banff School of Fine Arts and later became an assistant to the drama division.

At Case Western University, where he took his masters degree in dramatic art, he composed and played the sound track for a documentary film which received acclaim and special mention at the Cannes Film Festival.

Mr. Ewashen, on leaving Case Western University, was accepted for the Ontario Department of Education sponsored program for the Canadian Directors Training Course in Britain.

Belleville Theatre Guild president, Frank Seemungal, told the Intelligencer that he had expected the members of the guild to learn a lot from a man as qualified as Mr. Ewashen.

He said that with the director's experience, not only could guild members learn extensively, but they could be part of a sophisticated theatrical program for the coming year.

Although the government promised further consultations with Commonwealth countries before making a final decision on the arms sales, there is little to indicate that the talks will change the government's intention.

But the touch of restraint is reported to be heartening to Arnold Smith of Canada, Commonwealth secretary-general, who has made repeated appeals to Asian and African members not to walk out of the 28-country association.

So far only Tanzania has seriously indicated it will vacate its membership.

PE Crops Thrive in Rain

PICTON (Staff) — The rain in "Little Spain", as Prince Edward County is nicknamed, continued its fall mainly on the plain with no serious consequences for farm crops.

Agricultural representative for the county, Ivan Bell, commented yesterday that recent storms have not damaged any fruit crops and, in fact, should benefit corn crops and spring grain. He admitted that steady downpours during the past few days have harmed hay remaining baled in the fields.

"Most of the hay was handled in good condition but the quality will be down quite a lot on hay that has soaked up several rains," remarked Mr. Bell.

Although a number of county cherry growers had planned to begin picking their crops yesterday the work was postponed because of all day rains. This delay, in Mr. Bell's opinion, is brief and, therefore, not harmful to local fruit growers.

Farmers with heavily laden raspberry bushes also were forced to cancel picking yesterday. The raspberries could be affected by the rains if they can't be picked when they should be said Mr. Bell. He added that no trouble is anticipated in this area, however, for any of the crops.

Farmers who lost hay during this damp July have found sales for their soggy bales at the Campbell Soup Company's mushroom plant in Wellington. A plant spokesman remarked yesterday that there is a steadily growing pile of grass and alfalfa bay near the factory. He noted that the plant now has purchased all the grass hay it requires but there is still a demand for alfalfa hay. The mushroom factory has not yet opened but, according to the spokesman, is expected to swing into operation shortly.

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, TUESDAY, JULY 21, 1970

Five time Canadian dirt track champion Yvon Duhamel will be looking to wrest the Ontario title from fellow Quebec-resident Jean Marc Houde in the Ontario championships, held at the fairgrounds Friday night. The veteran racers will be just two of the more than 60 competitors entered in the event.

Duhamel Faces Tough Field In Ontario Championships

By ERIC EMERSON
Staff Sportswriter

Usually the entry of Montreal's colorful Yvon Duhamel in a Canadian motorcycle competition would pretty well confine the list of favorites to approximately one.

However, the five - time Canadian champion will have to share the spotlight with some of the country's top competitors in the Ontario Championship, held at the Belleville fairgrounds, Friday.

To start with, there is Hamilton's Maurice Fraser, who pulled a major upset in beat Duhamel in the Muscular Dystrophy races, July 4th in Belleville.

Fraser, who didn't buy Duhamel's claims of mechanical failure in their earlier meeting will be looking to prove that his victory with a 750 cc Triumph was no fluke.

With the migration of the Sehl brothers to the California circuit, Jean-Marc Houde of Quebec City would have to assume the role of arch-rival for Duhamel. Houde took the 500 cc class at the Ontario championships last year, after Duhamel was late in showing up, and added a win in the 250 cc class, as well.

The Montrealer, who is looking to regain the number one plate which he has held five times, got his revenge at the Canadian Championships, last year by turning the tables on Houde.

Since both veteran racers are driving Jawa - powered machines, it should boil down to the rider with the most ability finishing on top.

Not to be overlooked is 20-year-old Bob Swaddling, who lists the Canadian Junior 250 cc title to his credit, along with a win in the July 4th expert category. Swaddling has had time to accustom himself to his new machine, which he raced for the first time in Belleville, and should be ready to give the "Big Three," a run for top honors.

Both junior - class winners from the muscular - dystrophy races will be returning for a crack at the Ontario title with Mike Binkley assuming the role of favorite in the 250 - class and Glen Weston of Toronto looking to preserve his winning Belleville record in the 750 class.

A total of 67 riders are entered in the race for the Ontario titles, sponsored by the Piston Pushers motorcycle club and the Belleville Firefighters Association.

General admission for the event will be $2.00 with children under 12, admitted for half price. Practice runs will get under way at 6 p.m. Friday, with the elimination heats starting at 8 p.m.

Golf's Million Dollar Winner
WATCH FOR THE DIVOT

On every full fairway shot, a divot of some description should be taken in front of the ball's original position. When this happens, the ball has good backspin. And this backspin keeps it airborne and straight.

Now, how do you accomplish this? Here's one way that will help you bring the clubhead into the ball at a slightly downward angle. Before turning your head to follow the ball after impact, watch for the divot hole to appear. If it doesn't, practice until it does. Soon you'll start taking the divot and stay down on the shot as well.

Fergus' Lacrosse As It Should Be

Lacrosse was played as it should be Tuesday night as the peewee and bantam teams from Fergus put on an amazing display of lacrosse skill and knowledge while defeating our local teams.

Pinpoint passing and alert defensive interceptions paved the way to 14-1 and 9-4 victories over Belleville's inexperienced peewees and bantams respectively.

"They have nothing to be ashamed of tonight," states Roy Payne of the minor Lacrosse Association. "Fergus is from the hot-bed of minor lacrosse and some of these boys have been playing lacrosse for three or four years even though they are only peewees. Bright spots for Belleville during the games were Rick Barbeau's three goal performance in the Bantam game and Rob Richardson's peewee tally.

Lacrosse is big entertainment in that town of 5,000 with minor games drawing three to four hundred people and the personnel of their teams hope to create and promote some interest in Southern Ontario.

"This area never has been a good region for lacrosse but during the next week we hope to show the people here how lacrosse can be played," expresses Fergus manager Merv McComb.

The next week includes a busy schedule of games which will take the westerners to Kingston, Cornwall, and Ota wa where they will perform their lacrosse wizardry against local opposition.

If saddened in defeat the locals can be assured that they learned from their losses and next time won't be so bad. "For only two practices we played pretty well against a really good team. Give us, and the whole area a little more time and lacrosse will catch on and some pretty good teams will develop," confidently predicts bantam coach Barbeau.

Three Period Games Nemesis of Juniors

If lacrosse were only two periods instead of three the Belleville Juniors could be close to the top of the Quinte Lacrosse League but as fate would have it there are just one too many periods for the Juniors.

Tuesday night it was the second frame that struck the Belleville team as their Trenton opponents took control and fired two unanswered goals good enough to lead them to a 5-2 win over the Juniors.

The loss all but eliminates Belleville from the play offs with only a slight mathematical chance of grasping a fourth spot clinchers in the final standings left for them.

J. Hamilton, Mike Surina, D. Le France, B. Weston, and R. Reid were the goal scorers for Trenton.

Brian Reddick and Pete Fleming were the Belleville marksmen.

"It puts us with our backs to the wall now. We have to win four of our next five games and hope that either Trenton or Picton goes on a losing streak if we are to catch them and fourth spot," states Roy Payne of the lacrosse association. If they can just keep the spirit to play three full games they still have a chance to make it. These guys can play good ball when they want to. We play Campbellford next and if we were like we did when we beat Cobourg, we have as good a chance against them as we do against anybody."

'Gimme Dat Thing!'

Belleville centre Pat Nuttall does battle with his Fergus check Brian Costin during an exhibition peewee game between the Western Ontario team and the local all-stars. Fergus, in the hot-bed of lacrosse, displayed amazing skill and precision in whipping Belleville 14-1.

Elliot Admitts 'A Few Mistakes Made' But Still Has Flair for Umpire-Ref Role'

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. (CP) — Frank Elliot has quit jobs and headed west, was once escorted by police from Charlottetown Arena and has been assaulted by a little old lady in his home town.

As a hockey referee and a ball umpire he admits to "a few mistakes," and has found that newspapers constantly mis-spell his name.

"I've had a few bumps, bruises and fractures, a lot of laughs, been called a few names I can't use and, but when the game is over, the players and I are back again and we often go out and discuss over a beer mistakes they claim I've made."

Elliot admits to being almost 50, although he began his career as a hockey referee shortly after leaving his native Toronto for St. Catharines in 1938, and that was to play senior hockey.

But he still works six or seven hockey games each week during the winter and as many as a dozen or more softball and golf games each week of the summer.

During the final nine days of June this year, he handled 17 softball games, which included the Welland Rose Tournament and the Ontario senior championship at Richmond Hill, about 100 miles away.

Although he has never referred regular-season National Hockey League games, Elliot has handled games in every category from nine-peroids to the American Hockey League and Western Hockey League.

From 1949 to 1951, Elliot was a full-time referee in the Cape Breton senior league, attached to the six-team Maritime Major league in 1951-52 and handled games in Sydney, Glace Bay, Halifax, Charlottetown, St. John and Moncton.

It was during a period serves in Charlottetown in 1952 that he and referee Gerry Mahon awarded a game to Sydney when Charlottetown refused to send out a centre ice. They finally hustled the officials out a side door and took the safety of their hotel.

In baseball, he was umpire-in-chief of the semi-professional Halifax and district league in 1953 and umpire-in-chief of the Cape Breton senior league in 1960-1962.

"A lot of people always thought I was crazy to give up positions in St. Catharines to go away in the middle of summer to do something as insecure as refereeing hockey games or umpiring softball and baseball," he says.

"But refereeing, just like playing sports, gets in your blood and you just can't let it alone."

He recalls how he awarded a girls' softball game to one team because the other was loading—and stalling as darkness closed in on the park.

"Someone came up behind me, grabbed my sweater and ripped it off," he recalls. "I turned around ready to swing and here it was a little old lady."

Elliot works with the flair of a carnival barker, using all the signals he ever heard of and a few he invented. Spectators have claimed they paid to watch Elliot officate a game.

In 1947-48 he worked a full schedule in the American Hockey League, handled both Memorial and Allan Cup playoffs in Canada and refereed games in Ontario senior and junior competition.

Now, with "56 closing in fast," he is only off when the sun doesn't shine.

After a full day's work as assistant store keeper at St. Catharines General Hospital, he handles one or two games a night.

And, in addition to this, Elliot bowls three times a week during the winter, joining early groups so that it doesn't interfere with his refereeing later in the evening.

Als Force Last-Minute Mistakes To Send Ottawa to Fourth Defeat

OTTAWA (CP) — Montreal rebuffed two late scoring threats by Ottawa to defeat the defending Grey Cup champions 15-6 in an Eastern Football Conference exhibition Monday.

Ottawa quarterback Gary Wood was fawced into a fumble on the Montreal seven with less than three minutes to go and Montreal tackle Gordon Judges recovered to nip the first threat.

Tackle Charlie Collins intercepted a Wood pass with only seconds to go to kill the other scoring threat.

The game was played in a steady downpour that produced numerous fumbles and missed field goals by both clubs.

Alouette quarterback Sonny Wade combined with Terry Evanshen for a 45-yard pass-and-run touchdown. Also for Montreal, Pierre Guindon kicked two field goals and Gino Berretta a single.

Alouettes got their other two points when Ottawa kicker Billy Van Burkleo conceded a safety touch.

Wood threw a 45-yard first-quarter touchdown pass to rookie Hugh Oldham for Ottawa's only touchdown, which was converted by Ivan MacMillan.

Ottawa's 143-pound rookie kicker. He also got a single off a missed field goal attempt for Ottawa's other point.

A crowd of 15,788 watched the Rough Riders lose their fourth pre-season game. Alouettes have won two and tied another in their exhibition series.

Wade completed 13 of 28 pass attempts for 232 yards. Evanshen caught three passes for 121 yards.

Wood threw 30 times and completed 14 for 238 yards. Flanker Billy Cooper caught four for 75 yards.

The rain-soaked field was a quarterback's nightmare. Ottawa managed only 79 yards on the ground while Alouettes were held to 30.

Ottawa fullback Jim Mankins carried 11 times for 30 yards and Montreal's Dennis Duncan carried 13 times for 20 yards. Each quarterback had two interceptions.

Southern Junior Tier Finally Gets Off Ground

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The southern Ontario tier two Junior A league of the Ontario Hockey Association, an outgrowth of the independent Western Junior A Hockey League, formally got off the ground Monday.

The six-team league will comprise Detroit, Welland, Chatham Brantford St. Thomas and Guelph. Teams will play an unbalanced 44-game schedule that will open on two fronts Oct. 2. Chatham will play at Brantford and Detroit will play at Welland.

Team representatives meeting with Ontario Hockey Association officials Monday, set out the mechanics for the operation.

No overtime will be played through the season. Teams will be permitted an unlimited number of imports that may include as many as eight branch transfers.

Teams agreed to establish a gate equalization plan whereby the home team contributes 10 per cent of its gross gate to a pool found. Receipts from the fund will be distributed equally at the end of the season.

Detroit's new entry was given special concession to employ up to six players from the Metro Detroit Junior B Hockey League in lieu of affiliating with any one single team in Detroit.

Nelson Kipp, representing Brantford Majors who won a bid over the independent Brantford Foresters for entry into the new league, told OHA representatives he was optimistic the two Brantford teams would yet amalgamate.

Sport Briefs

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Unbeaten George Foreman knocked out Roger Russell of Philadelphia in 2:29 of the first round Monday night for his 21st professional boxing victory, The 21-year-old Foreman, who turned pro after winning the 1968 Olympic heavyweight championship, floored Russell twice, the last time with a right-hand shot to the jaw. It was the 18th knockout for Foreman, who meets George Chuvalo in New York in two weeks. Russell never landed a solid punch in the brief fight while Foreman landed at least half a dozen brushing left hooks as he moved Russell around the ring with ease. Foreman who is ranked seventh in the heavyweight division by the World Boxing Association and ninth by Ring Magazine, set up Russell with the left hooks. He floored him with a right hand early in the round.

DETROIT (AP) — Michigan's boxing commissioner said Monday a proposed heavyweight championship match in Detroit between Cassius Clay and champion Joe Frazier is off, "The fight is dead in Michigan at least." Commissioner Chuck Davey said Monday from his summer home in Oscoda, Mich. He said the members of the boxing commission could not agree on the acceptability of the fight proposal and therefore no boxing licence would be issued to Clay. Davey did not say what was unacceptable about the proposal.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Jim Nicholson, a 190-pound, five-foot; 10-inch running back, put on waivers by British Columbia Lions of the Western Football Conference, has been claimed by Ottawa Rough Riders of the Eastern Football Conference, Lions announced Monday. Nicholson won Little-American all-star rating while playing for Willamette College in Oregon.

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The five clubs in the Senior Ontario Rugby Football Union have approved the entry into the league of the Ottawa Sooners, last year's Canadian junior finalists, but a problem of scheduling has held up the team's official acceptance. Bill Thurgarland of Toronto, Senior ORFU president, said he expects to hear from Ottawa officials Wednesday concerning arrangements for their home games, and he expects to make an announcement Thursday. Ottawa didn't compete in a league last year but had anticipated joining a Montreal junior conference this season.

OTTAWA (CP) — Sam Berger, owner of Montreal Alouettes football club, was admitted to an Ottawa hospital Monday night suffering from glaucoma, an eye disease which causes loss of sight. Berger had come to Ottawa to watch his team play the Ottawa Rough Riders in an Eastern Football Conference exhibition game Monday.

Strike Gains Support

NEW YORK (AP) — Gale Sayers, Roman Gabriel, Frank Tarkenton, John Brodie and other top professional football stars strongly supported the National Football League Players' Association in its money dispute with the owners Monday at a news conference.

At a session called to clarify the issues involved, John Mackey, president of the association, said the players had never proposed any increase in ticket prices and never suggested coaches, trainers and front office pension benefits be curtailed or discontinued. He also said published reports of proposed pension benefits were "unrealistic."

Mackey said no negotiations had been held with the owners' committee since last Monday although he had requested Commissioner Pete Rozelle to bring both parties together again.

The NFL owners have scheduled a New York meeting for Tuesday and the players' association has asked the federal mediation and conciliation service to consider the matter Wednesday night in Washington. The owners have not yet agreed to appear.

Alan Miller, former player and now a lawyer for the association, presented a chart of costs to show that the player requests would cost each of the 26 NFL clubs an average increase of $110,000 a year for the four years of the proposed contract. He said the players wanted an average yearly increase in benefits of $170,000 a club and the owners offered an average of $60,000.

"The key issue is the amount the owners will put into the retirement plans in the next four years," said Mackey, chief aide of Baltimore Colts.

"There are other issues unresolved but the pension is the most important. The players want their pension plan to be the No. 1 in all major sports."

Messages and telegrams of team support came from Roman Gabriel of Los Angeles Rams, John Brodie of San Francisco 49ers and Jim Houston of Cleveland Browns.

Mahoney Cops Second Gold Canucks Add Butterfly Sweep

EDINBURGH (CP) — Bill Mahony of New Westminster, B.C., and George Smith of Edmonton won their second gold medals of the Commonwealth Games in swimming today, leading a pair of one-two finishes for Canada.

The Canadian men pulled ahead of Australia in the battle for gold when Mahony added the 100-metre breaststroke title to his earlier gold in the 200 and then Smith followed with victory in the 200-metre individual medley.

Mahony, 20-year-old student at the University of Michigan, won a close one from countryman Peter Cross of Montreal, who got the silver. Paul Jarvie of Australia won the bronze.

Smith, another 20-year-old student, finished ahead of Ken Campbell of Vancouver in the 200 medley. Campbell grabbed the silver and Martyn Woodroffe of Wales the bronze.

In the women's 200-metre backstroke Canada added the silver medal when Donna-Marie Gurr, 15, of Vancouver placed second to Australia's Lynne Watson. Debbie Cain of Australia was the bronze winner.

Mahony is the first member of the Canadian team to win two gold.

Smith followed shortly after and now has three medals. He won the gold in the 400-metre individual medley last Saturday and was a member of the second-place 400-metre medley relay team last Friday.

Mahony proudly accepted his gold from the Queen and gave her one in return.

"I gave the Queen our team pin after she had presented me with the medal after our national anthem had been played," Mahony said.

"She asked me where I was from and said she had seen me swim before at the Games in Jamaica." he added. "I told her I'd like her to have this pin. I've was pretty excited."

Mahony said the Canadian swimmers were not told until early afternoon that the Queen, who attended with Prince Philip, Prince Charles and Princess Anne, was to make the medal presentation for his event.

EDINBURGH (CP) — Mike Wenden of Australia, the fastest swimmer in the world, won his third gold medal of the British Common wealth Games yesterday and said he is near the end of his water sports career.

The Australian, paced by Wenden and Karen Muras led a sweep of the medals for Australia in the men's 100-meter free style and the women's 400 free style respectively.

Susan Smith, 19 - year - old Edmonton butterfly specialist, captured the silver in the women's 100 butterfly, won by Diane Lansley, 17 - year - old English schoolgirl.

Don Wagstaff became the first Australian to win the men's three - metre springboard diving title in 22 years. He was second in the springboard and tower diving competition in the 1966 Games. MORE

Wagstaff was particularly brilliant in the last three dives and beat his nearest opponent, 19-year-old Lorne Sully of White Rock, B.C., by more than 80 points. Sully won the silver and Ron Friesen of Saskatoon advanced two placings — he was fifth after the semi-finals to snare the bronze.

Although Byron MacDonald, led a 1-2-3 sweep in the men's 100-metre butterfly, Canada did get ground to Australia in their battle for pool supremacy. The Aussies won three more events, bringing their total to eight. England and Wales broke the two-country monopoly with one gold medal each.

He said he is near the end of his competitive career and these games probably will be his last. "I won't be at Munich for the Olympics of 1972."

EDINBURGH — It was a first ever sweep for Canada in international swimming. The 100-meter butterfly was won by three men trained in the United States, including one who was born there. It produced two fine starts by an Australian who the Canadians said should have known better. It was won by Byron MacDonald who was born in Chicago and cut his big toe before the race started.

And if that wasn't enough, all three Canadians agreed the starting procedure at the British Commonwealth Games was terrible and might have caused a couple of them to be disqualified.

There were two false starts before the race got underway both by Australia's Neil Rogers who eventually finished fifth. Under swimmin' rules, if there is a third false start, anyone who enters the water is disqualified.

"He might have been trying to get us disqualified," said Donald said.

MacDonald was born in Chicago and holds dual U.S.-Canadian citizenship. He said he plans to become a Canadian citizen when he turns 21 next year.

MacDonald and Arusoo attend the University of Michigan and Jacks goes to the University of Indiana.

EDINBURGH (CP) — Australian swimmer Pam Kilborn, who has held most of the world records in the hurdles, took the early lead in the Commonwealth Games pentathlon today.

Miss Kilborn was timed in 13.3 seconds over the 80-metre hurdles in the first of the five events and had a 30-point margin over her nearest competitor, another Australian, in the performance chart with 1,148 points.

Jenny Meirum of Toronto, also an international hurdler, managed only a 14.2 timing and was in seventh place in the field of 13 with 1,018 points. Diane Jones of Saskatoon, who specializes in the long jump and high jump, ran a slow 12.5 and had 858 points, good for 11th place.

The five-event competition ends Wednesday.

Canada Out of Davis Cup

SAO PAULO, Brazil (UPI) — Brazil won the American zone Davis Cup finals yesterday when Edison Mandarino, playing beautiful placement tennis, defeated Canada's John Sharpe, 6-1,6-0,6-2.

The victory gave Brazil 3-2 edge in the three-day series.

Mike Belkin earlier downed Brazil's Thomas Koch, 6-8, 8-6, 6-3, 6-4, to even the series at 2-2.

Mandarino's game was near perfect, a great change from his performance on Saturday when Belkin beat him easily in a singles match.

Sharpe on the other hand, was noticeably nervous and way off form. The native of Australia repeatedly double-faulted and drilled easy shots into the net or past the base lines in disjointed efforts.

The easy victory of Mandarino over Sharpe was in contrast to the defeat suffered by Koch, Brazil's top-ranked player, earlier in the day.

Belkin, the Yugoslavia Canadian, lost the first set but improved steadily against the long-haired, mustachioed Brazilian and went on to win the next three sets. Belkin won the key point of the match in the fourth set when a freak dust storm made Koch lose sight of an easy volley.

The unusual play occurred when Belkin — playing for match game but down 15-30— returned a Koch volley. A stiff breeze whipped up loose court clay around Koch just as the Brazilian was set to return and Koch missed the shot entirely, clasping his hands to his face instead.

That evened the score at 30-30 and gave Belkin the momentum to run out the game and take the match.

Hendrick's Cools Detroit Surge As Baltimore Boosts Lead

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Ellie Hendricks and the Baltimore Orioles threw cold water on Detroit Tigers surge towards the top of the American League east by bombing the Chicago White Sox 16-5 Monday night behind Hendricks' grand slam homer and a two run double.

The victory boosted Baltimore's lead to four games over Detroit which climbed within three games before losing to Kansas City Royals 3-0.

After watching Frank Howard blast a long homer in Washington Senators 5-0 victory over Milwaukee Brewers, U.S. President Nixon came out in favor of Senator's manager Ted Williams' rule which keeps his clubhouse closed to sports writers for 15 minutes after each game.

It was a good idea for politicians as well as baseball players," he said. "After a game — win or lose — clubhouses are a little bit wrought up. So give them time to cool off and let them talk and then talk to the press."

Howard's 25th homer with two out in the sixth inning off Al Downing, 3-7, bounced off the mezzanine in centre field, about 450 feet away. The Senators got only one hit, Tim Cullin's lead off single in the first inning.

The Orioles, who had lost three of their last four games while Detroit was winning five in a row, burned up the White Sox with six runs in the second inning, four in the seventh and three in the ninth.

Jim Rooker cooled off the Tigers for his sixth win with a six hitter, ending Kansas City's six game losing streak and the eight game winning string of his mound rival Les Cain (9-3).

Jim Kaat, (8-7) won his 80th major league game me Minnesota Twins with relief help from Ron Perranoski in the eighth inning as the Twins defeated Cleveland Indians 4-3.

Fritz Peterson 11-6, slowed California Angels with a three-hitter after the Angels had won five of six games. It was Peterson's fifth victory since the 25th and the New York Yankees made it easy for him as Danny Cater ripped a single double and homer and drove in three runs and Curt Blefary hit his eighth homer and four in seven games to give the Yankees a 6-1 win.

Frank Fernandez hit a decisive solo homer, his 11th, in the fourth inning for a 3-1 Cleveland Athletics lead, cutting the A's losing streak at four games.

Wins 5-0

Phillies Aren't Laughing At Singer's No-hitter

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Bill Singer started getting serious in the sixth inning but the Philadelphia Phillies couldn't find anything funny about the Los Angeles Dodgers' righthander in the first five.

"I kiddingly thought about a no-hitter in the first inning said Singer Monday night after no-hitting Philadelphia 5-0. I got serious in the sixth. There had been omens the no-hitter was in the cards for Singer who had been out with infectious hepatitis for 53 days between April 22 and June 14.

The 26-year-old, now in his seventh season in the majors pitched no-hit ball for seven and two thirds innings June 23 at Atlanta and posted a two-hit shutout over San Francisco July 5.

First place Pittsburgh Pirates lost 5-4 to Houston Astros in 11 innings and remained two games back of the New York Mets, who bowed 7-4 to San Francisco.

Cincinnati Reds swept St. Louis Cardinals 4-3 and 4-0 in 10 innings, Atlanta took Chicago Cubs 3-1 and 5-0 in a rain shortened five inning game and San Diego edged Montreal Expos 3-1.

Singer struck out 10 and allowed only two base runners. Oscar Gamble was hit by a wild Ralph and Don Money reached base in the seventh when Singer threw wildly. In one stretch Singer retired 18 straight batters.

Gail Harvey Moore Takes Road Back from Injury

VANCOUVER (CP) — Gail Harvey Moore still plays a mean game of golf.

This fact might pale to insignificance except that eight months ago the 36-year-old pro was in traction, her hip broken in three places and her pelvis partly crushed.

She had escaped an auto crash with her life—but then her life had been mostly golf and her injuries left some doubt about whether she would ever play again.

It was a tough road, but she fought back with all the tenacity that has made her one of the finest female players Canada has ever produced.

She spent five weeks in bed, three of them in traction. She got out before doctors thought she would, but then here was a six-week span on crutches before she could walk properly again.

When she started to play golf again in the spring there were times when she couldn't finish 18 holes. She was tired and limping by the time she hit the 10th tee—but this was golf and this was living.

"When I think back on it now, I guess I was lucky I wasn't killed. The car hit us from the side. I was in the front seat, and the doors sprung. I got thrown out, or I would likely have broken my back or my neck."

Her knees and face were badly cut and scraped, but the effects were not serious Her knees she doesn't worry about and makeup covers any minor damage to her face.

How has the whole experience affected her golf game?

"Not much, really," she said. "I lost 30 pounds, and can't seem to put it back on again, so I can't hit she as far as I used to. But I can't say I'm playing any worse than I did before."

She proved her point, recently during a practice round for the British Columbia Ladies' team trials. She shot a two-over-par 76, which included a three-over-par seven, at the 14th hole.

Mrs. Moore enjoys talking about the game almost as much as playing it. She revels in taking apart a certain hole piece by piece, and learning how to defeat it.

Now that she has discovered that tiredness and lack of muscle are her only problems, she has lined up a full tournament schedule.

She will head east in August for the Canadian Ladies tournament in her home town—Toronto. The Canadian open championship is about all that has eluded her in a career that has seen with the first of her three straight Canadian junior titles back in 1956.

She won the Close title in 1964 and 1965 and has been on Canada's world team and in several other international competitions. To her, golf is a game that demands competition, or it isn't that much fun.

"I don't think I'll give it up for a while yet. What have I got to lose by playing? Just a little pride if I don't play well."

Number Two in Heath Cabinet, Iain Macleod, Dies Suddenly

LONDON (CP) — Iain Macleod, as chancellor of the exchequer the second most powerful man in Britain's new Conservative government, died suddenly Monday night of a heart attack.

There was speculation that Prime Minister Edward Heath would ask House Secretary Reginald Maudling to take over the financial post.

Macleod was 56, had been in politics 25 years, and had a notable career. First elected to the House of Commons in 1950, he was elevated to the cabinet only two years later by Winston Churchill. Between 1952 and 1961 he was successively health minister, labor minister and colonial secretary, then for two years was chancellor of the exchequer the second most powerful man in Britain's new Conservative government, died suddenly Monday night of a heart attack.

There was speculation that Prime Minister Edward Heath would ask House Secretary Reginald Maudling to take over the financial post.

Macleod was 56, had been in politics 25 years, and had a notable career. First elected to the House of Commons in 1950, he was elevated to the cabinet only two years later by Winston Churchill. Between 1952 and 1961 he was successively health minister, labor minister and colonial secretary, then for two years leader of the House of Commons and chairman of the Conservative party.

Macleod grew up his government and party posts in October, 1961, to preside the manoeuvring by Prime Minister Harold Macmillan which resulted in Sir Alec Douglas-Home being named Macmillan's successor. But a year later Macleod led the Conservatives' fight against the Labor government's steel nationalization bill. And after Heath replaced Douglas-Home as party leader in mid-1965, Macleod became the financial expert in the Tory shadow cabinet.

He was one of the most formidable debaters in Commons, with what was considered the best memory in Parliament, a ravaging lacklustre and quick, acid rejoinders for his debating opponents.

Macleod died before he had a chance to grapple with the serious economic problems facing Britain, including trade deficits and the first nationwide dock strike in 44 years, but he had commissioned an intensive review of the economy as the first step toward fulfilment of the Conservative campaign pledges to reduce taxes and cut public spending.

Maudling who held the position of chancellor in the last Conservative administration up to 1964, was widely regarded the only part-in-the Conservative front bench equipped take the job on.

But Heath may hesitate transfer Maudling from the home office where he is already involved with the explosive Northern Ireland problem and with possible complications from the five-day-old national dock strike.

Macleod was stricken as he prepared for bed at 11 Downing Street, the chancellor's official residence. He died 10 minutes later, his wife Eva by his side. He had been released on Sunday from a hospital where he underwent an emergency appendectomy July 7.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Breath Too 'Short' Due Overbreathing

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: All my life I have been a victim of anxiety, tension and undue stress. I have tried not to give way to it as I wish to be a fighter, but I fail.

I am now 41, active in church, teach a Sunday school class of children of 11 years of age. I am employed two days a week in an insurance office. I was a widow at 21 (my husband of 26 years died quite suddenly) of a heart attack, leaving me with two small boys to raise). I was remarried four years ago to a wonderful man and am very happy in this marriage.

I have had a heart murmur since I was 6 due to an attack of scarlet fever. However, I have had all sorts of tests and my doctor finds my heart is all right.

He says my shortness of breath and dizziness are due to nerves. It does not come on after exertion. Just some days I have it, then days way, they comes back. This shortness of breath causes me to be uncomfortable. I feel I cannot get a good deep breath. The muscles in my neck and shoulders are so tense and tight they actually feel sore.

I sigh and yawn a lot and the shortness of breath still comes and goes making me very nervous and uneasy. Can you explain what is happening? — Mrs. G.

Comment: It seems evident that what you call "shortness of breath" isn't. Many patients who can't take a deep breath say they are short of breath. It's a wrong label.

With your history of sighing, and secondary irregular breathing accompanied by nervous feelings, I have a hunch (which I hope your doctor will look into) that you may be suffering the symptoms of hyperventilation.

Many people who have trouble with their breathing unconsciously suffer from this overbreathing (especially when they sigh a lot). This can cause nervousness and dizziness. Check us it and let me know if my hunch (only a guess) is correct.

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Gas! Gas! I can't seem to get rid of it. I go to a doctor here and take his medicine to calm my stomach. The pressure inside my stomach gets tremendous. I'm afraid to eat. I am only 21 so I haven't smoked for years nor X rays. Can you please help me? — Miss B.

Comment: Doctors are often guilty, but quite often innocent, too. I never like to make a diagnosis of "nerves" in a patient unless every indicated diagnostic test has been made. If it is possible, in your case, I would want to make sure your gall bladder is behaving. The fact that you are 21 doesn't automatically absolve your gall bladder — or anything else.

* * *

For Mrs. W.: The ringing in your ear, the gradual loss of hearing on that side, and the dizziness all add up to the possibility of Meniere's disease. It's one thing to be told "you'll have to learn to live with it," another to feel you're doing everything possible to find relief for this stubborn condition. In addition to the care by your family doctor, I agree that you should see an ear specialist.

* * *

For Mrs. S.: Any especially bright 5 - year - old who becomes "slow" in school and around the house deserves investigation. The first two things I should want to rule out would be difficulty in hearing and seeing.

Such disabilities are often present, yet rarely hand out the red lantern to warn parents where the trouble lies. Unsuspected hearing and sight difficulties are the label "stupid" on many a potentially bright child.

Sydney J. Harris Says

Women's Interest Is People

Speaking of the differences between the sexes, as I was yesterday, reminded me of a line in Ned Rorem's amusing Paris Diary: "Hairdressers, harpists, cooks — most are women, but the best are men."

And a famous expert bridge player has likewise remarked publicly: "Women are better bridge players than men, except that men are best."

What he meant was that among the generality of players, women are more proficient, but the top dozen or so are all men.

It is relatively easy to see why a man would be superior to a woman at bridge, because at the highest level the game calls for traits that seem more masculine than feminine — boldness, coolness in a crisis, and an intense desire to win competitively.

But it is harder to understand why the leading chefs, for instance, should all be men, when cooking is supposed to be a woman's province. Or why the most popular (and presumably most skilful) hairdressers should be men — and by no means all of them homosexuals.

This leads to the general question of "creativity," which has long perplexed psychologists and sociologists — why has there never been a female Shakespeare, a female Mozart, a female Michelangelo, a female Einstein, a female genius limited to the male of the species, like plumage?

One long-standing theory is that a woman's particular "creativity" has been subsumed to her role as a mother — that what she creates are babies, and her energy, intuition and ambition are focused on that project of perpetuating the race, so that little of the "libido" is left over for artistic or intellectual productions.

Another view is more environmental: it says biological: it holds that women have traditionally been kept away from artistic pursuits, except as a hobby or a social grace; that male chauvinism has held women in the thrall of domesticity and instilled in them a kind of "slave mentality", so that their self-esteem is maintained at a low level and they don't aspire to the heights of artistic creation.

But this, even if true, wouldn't explain why women aren't the best cooks, or hairdressers, or even couturiers. If we don't subscribe to the doctrine that there is some inherent "inferiority" in women (and I don't for a moment), then their preeminence must signify that women, as a class, are less interested in "things" than they are in "people," and are simply not motivated as forcefully as men are to manipulate and conquer external objects.

It is in relating to other humans that women have an excellent edge over men, which is why I would prefer to see more of them in the parliaments of the world, and fewer politicians in the beauty salons.

RIOT EQUIPMENT

WEST VANCOUVER, B.C. (CP) — The city of West Vancouver has purchased $800 worth of riot equipment — enough to equip about 15 members of the municipal police force. The equipment includes helmets, protective face masks, tear gas, respirators and 36-inch riot sticks. Mayor Alex Forst says the city plans to spend the same amount annually on riot equipment for the next five years.

WEST VANCOUVER, B.C. — The city of West Vancouver has purchased 2000 worth of riot equipment — enough to equip about 15 members of the municipal police force. The equipment includes helmets, protective shields, tear gas, respirators and 36-inch riot sticks. Romney Requests Worldwide Effort to Combat Pollution

ST. CLAIR, Mich. (AP) — George Romney, U.S. secretary of housing and urban development, appealed Monday for massive worldwide co-operation to combat the international environmental crisis.

Romney issued the plea at a joint meeting of the Great Lakes Basin Commission and the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development. The meeting continues through Wednesday.

Romney said the water resources groups that advanced nations must pool their anti-pollution efforts on an international scale to halt the steadily-worsening problem.

The secretary, who was the personal representative of President Nixon at the meeting, said the fight against pollution would require restructuring international priorities and cost great sums of money, but added the alternative is the extinction of man.

The GLBC is a state-federal organization charged with overseeing all uses of the Great Lakes and nearby land resources. Its membership includes representatives from the eight states touching the lakes, plus nine cabinet-level federal departments with responsibilities for national water resources.

The OECD is an international agency established in 1961 to administer aid to European countries.

The groups are meeting to develop plans for future co-operation in tailoring international solutions to problems plaguing the world's water resources.

Man 20 Hours Adrift

ORILLIA (CP) — A Toronto man was rescued Monday after more than 20 hours in Lake Simcoe following a boating mishap near here Sunday in which his female companion was drowned.

William Eric Bonby, 46, was reported in satisfactory condition in hospital after treatment for exposure. Police said he was picked up from the 70-degree water by a private craft after bolding on to the partially-submerged boat from 10:30 a.m. Sunday to 7 a.m. Monday.

Police identified the victim as Pauline Tomiczec, 35, also of Toronto.

Huron Resorts Said Polluted

OWEN SOUND (CP) — The Sun-Times says a government report labels many water supplies in the Bruce Peninsula unsafe and calls for development to be halted or curtailed until community sewage and water supplies are installed.

The newspaper quotes a 300-page report on water quality along the Lake Huron and Georgian Bay shoreline prepared by the Ontario Water Resources Commission which has not been released.

The report says development cutbacks should be made "without hesitation or water quality will deteriorate rapidly and a serious health hazard could result."

Pollution in the nearby Sauble Beach area "is reaching major proportions," the report says.

The report says 42 of the 76 water supplies sampled in Eastnor Township were found unsafe for human consumption. Domestic sewage was gaining access to the water supply in many instances.

Creek Polluted

TORONTO (CP) — Pollution Probe says water samples taken from a creek in the borough of North York have shown gross human sewage pollution and contamination from chemicals.

The anti-pollution group, based at the University of Toronto, said Monday samples taken last week show sewage bacteria counts as high as 330,000, far exceeding the 1,000 level accepted as safe.

Fear of DDT Called Mistake

LETHBRIDGE, Alta. (CP) — Fear of the effects of DDT as an insecticide is emotional and bad mistake, a British pharmacologist said Monday.

"We have no evidence that DDT is harmful when it collects in organic tissues," said professor Andrew Wilson, head of the University of Liverpool's department of pharmacology and general therapeutics.

"Of course that was a concern about DDT: Would it produce a disturbance of organic functions? The original fear was that it might produce cancer in the liver, and that's not a single shred of evidence that this can happen."

Prof. Wilson is one of 75 international scientists attending a nine-day conference on toxicity of pesticides used in livestock, organized by the Lethbridge research station and sponsored by NATO.

"DDT does collect in meat tissues, but it isn't harmful in the prudent doses normally acquired, and it eventually leaves the tissues and the body," he said.

"In terms of the alternatives to DDT, one would have to be even more prudent and careful. They're much more toxic in the long run than DDT."

Nationalist China Warned Against Raids on Mainland

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nationalist China has staged many more raids across the Taiwan Straits in recent times than Communist China despite growing United States concern the harassing action could increase.

While the top U.S. diplomat in Taiwan discussed the forays as pinprick raids, Ambassador Walter P. McConaughy acknowledged in Senate testimony that "even these small ones really should be avoided."

The McConaughy account of raids back and forth across the Taiwan Straits during the last five years was heavily censored before the publication Monday of testimony by U.S. commitments to Nationalist China.

McConaughy said the government of China's tad chek has been informed the United States will not be bound by a mutual defence treaty to aid the Nationalists against attacks prompted by "offensive action against the mainland to which we had not agreed."

He said the actions involved included maritime raids, reconnaissance flights and propaganda shelling.

McConaughy and U.S. military and officials reported the Nationalists are building air bases on Taiwan big enough to handle B-52 bombers, apparently in hopes of fashioning a strengthened American commitment to defence of the island.

At the same time, they testified there are no U.S. plans to station any of the big bombers on the island, and insisted there was no American involvement in the expansion of at least two bases.

Televised Lectures Failures

TORONTO (CP) — A $1,000,000 experiment in televised lectures at the University of Toronto's Scarborough campus has been a failure, Scarborough College Principal A. F. W. Plumptre said Monday.

"But it was far from a total loss," he said. "We are finding the right way to use it now."

Students did not like the system because it presented "talking head" lectures. A good lecturer was still effective, but a bad one became worse.

Federal Fiscal Policy Likely to Be Unchanged

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government is expected to maintain its present mix of fiscal and monetary policies through the balance of 1970, a finance department source said Tuesday.

This means that no fall budget is planned, but Finance Minister Edgar Benson and his top advisers will review the government's tax position about Christmas time.

The last budget was presented March 12, making no change in tax rates but stretching out for another year the government's deterrents on commercial construction in the principal centres of Ontario, Alberta and British Columbia.

Mr. Benson has been an advocate of twice-a-year budgeting when necessary to keep government tax policies flexible to meet changing economic circumstances. The current thinking is, however, that the present outlook requires no change for at least six months.

Since the March 12 budget, there has been a distinct shift in monetary policy affecting the money supply, interest rates, and government borrowing.

The Bank of Canada, after reining in the money supply during the winter of fiscal 1969-70, has eased the restrictions so that the total of currency in circulation and chartered bank deposits reached nearly $30,000,000,000 on July 1. It was about $28,625,000,000 early in March.

The more plentiful supply of money, and the government's policy of staying out of the bond market for new borrowings in the first half of this year, has pulled short-term interest rates down. Rates on treasury bills and short-term bonds have declined to about six per cent from nearly eight earlier in the year.

In the process, the government has drawn heavily on its flush cash bank balances. They totalled more than $1,500,000,000 at the end of January and at July 15 were down to $345,000,000.

This requires careful management until the next big inflow of funds in November, when the next issue of Canada Savings Bonds goes on sale. Terms of the new issue are expected to be announced about mid-September.

June Employment Growth Half 1969

OTTAWA (CP) — Employment grew at mid-year June 30 by less than half its comparable 1969 growth as the important manufacturing and utilities industries provided fewer jobs last month than a year earlier.

Labor force figures released today by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics showed that the only major increases in Canada are at work were in community, personal and other service industries.

The government's anti-inflation program is believed by government sources to be a cause of the slowdown in trade and the reversal of the job growth trend in manufacturing, transportation, other utilities and primary industries.

Employers are slowing expansion and in some cases, actually cutting back on payrolls in line with the emphasis on curbing inflation.

The figures belie some government assertions that the labor force is expanding rapidly. Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey was quoted in that effect in Toronto Monday.

Union Chiefs Asked To Talk

VICTORIA (CP) — Leaders of five construction unions who didn't go back to work Monday as ordered by the provincial government were expected to attend a meeting this morning at 11 a.m. with Premier W. A. C. Bennett.

"I think they will all be there," said Ed Fay, secretary of the B.C. and Yukon Building Trades Council, a union organization.

"I am quite sure that when the premier asks them to do this they will all be prepared to go an dmeet him. We have no idea of what he wants. He has just requested us to be at the meeting."

Premier Bennett said Tuesday in announcing the meeting that "it is the duty of the premier to make sure that people who get outside the law have an opportunity to talk the matter over with the premier."

"Anything I can do as premier to meet citizens when there may or may not be misunderstanding, I am willing to go the second mile."

He refused to comment on what would be discussed at the meeting, to be attended by representatives of the carpenters, bricklayers, plumbers, bricklayers helpers, insulators and oper-

Release of Seven Terrorists Sought

ATHENS (CP) — Arab commandos seized a Greek jetliner and held its passengers and crew hostage at Athens airport today for more than seven hours. Then the plane rolled down the runway and took off after releasing some passengers.

Olympic Airways said 15 of the plane's 53 passengers had been allowed to leave.

Olympic Airways said the plane headed for Beirut, Lebanon.

It had arrived here at 10:30 a.m. from Beirut with a crew of eight in addition to the 53 passengers.

The commandos, armed with machine-guns and hand grenades, demanded the release of seven Arabs either convicted of terrorist acts here or awaiting trial.

After landing they gave Greek authorities a three-hour deadline, threatening to blow up the Olympic Airways Boeing 727 if the demand was not met.

It wasn't. But the commandos extended the deadline another three hours while negotiations continued with Greek vice-premier Stylianos Pattakos in the control tower.

Apparently after reaching an agreement with Pattakos of an undisclosed nature, the commandos released passengers one by one and then ordered the plan to take off.

Reuters news agency had reported that the Greek government had offered to release the prisoners in two stages. It said that Aristotle Onassis, multimillionaire shipowner and owner of Olympic Airways, had offered himself as a hostage at one stage.

It said that the commandos had accepted the Greek offer in principle but that they demanded that Pattakos come with them to Beirut as a hostage.

The six Arab gunmen, believed to be members of the Popular Struggle Front, a small Palestinian commando group, seized the airliner when it landed here after a routine

Dockers Asked To Move Food

LONDON (AP) — The British government pressed the country's striking dockworkers Tuesday night to handle food cargoes with an implied threat to call in the army to do the job.

Harried by rocketing food prices, the government summoned leaders of the 47,000 striking longshoremen Tuesday and is reported to have told them it could not allow perishable food to rot in holds and on wharves while shortages forced housewives to pay high prices.

Jack Jones, general secretary of the Trans' port and General Workers' Union, said after the meeting: "We were asked if anything might be done by the unions rather than by other means. We asked for time to look at it the problem."

Jones warned: "We are aware that the government might want to press troops into operation. But this would exacerbate the situation and create tension."

Meat and produce workers voted Tuesday to refuse to handle goods unloaded by soldiers. Last week the country's truckers said they would not move loads for the army.

Health Authorities Unmoved By Measles Inoculation Plea

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Most health authorities in Canada do not seem to share the feeling of the Canadian Pediatrics Society that only mass inoculation programs can prevent an epidemic of German measles this year.

At a conference in Winnipeg Monday, the pediatrics society passed a resolution urging all levels of government to institute mass vaccine programs or face the possibility of defective children being born this winter to women who contract the disease during pregnancy.

Dr. Donald McLean, chairman of the society's infectious diseases committee, said a woman exposed to the disease in the first three months of her pregnancy runs a 30-to 40-per-cent chance of giving birth to a child with heart disease, cataracts, hearing defects or mental retardation.

The pediatricians said the danger would be eliminated if all children under 11 were inoculated.

Ontario Health Minister Thomas Wells said he has received no warning of an epidemic situation.

Ontario health authorities are confident a province-wide inoculation program started earlier this year and scheduled to finish in the fall will prevent an epidemic, he said.

Dr. Jean-Paul Breton, assistant director of the epidemic division of Quebec's health department, said the epidemic talk is based on predictions by the Communicable Diseases Centre in Atlanta, Ga., but Quebec has a different climate and may not suffer as much.

Dr. David Severs, Newfoundland's chief public health officer, said manufacturers of German measles vaccine have been using the Atlanta predictions in their avertising but there is no indication of an epidemic in Newfoundland and the government has no plans for an immunization program.

Dr. Emmanuel Snell, director of preventive medical services for Manitoba, said measles appears to have peaked in Manitoba with 528 cases, reported in June about 20 times higher than the incidence in June, 1969.

Meanwhile, other provinces are planning inoculation programs against an epidemic. They include Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island and Quebec.

British Columbia has earmarked $75,000 for inoculations but Health Minister Ralph Loffmark said his department is still studying the need for province-wide inoculations at an estimated cost of $400,000.

The director of Saskatchewan's communicable diseases branch, Dr. George Davidson, said a program of mass inoculations mighi prompt bad reactions in people who would otherwise naturally form antibodies to combat the disease. Health consultants in Saskatchewan will study the question at a meeting in Regina July 29.

Nasser's Position Unchanged

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

EGYPT — A semi-official newspaper Al Ahram says that President Gamal Abdel Nasser's response to the new United States proposal for a Middle East peace negotiations reiterates his long-standing demand for Israeli withdrawal from all occupied territories and the preservation of the rights of the Palestinian refugees.

The newspaper says the Egyptian reply is being delivered today to Donald C. Bergus, the senior American diplomat in Cairo. The message says Egypt "seeks peace and refuses to surrender." Al Ahram reports.

Al Ahram reported earlier that the United States proposed a limited ceasefire between Egypt and Israel of at least three months and suggested that Egypt, Jordan and Israel find out from United Nations mediator Gunnar Jarring what steps would be necessary to implement the 1967 Security Council resolution calling for a peace settlement.

"Egypt insisted—as it always has—that complete Israeli withdrawal and preservation of Palestinian rights are basic demands for any political solution to the Mideast crisis," Al Ahram says.

In Tel Aviv, meanwhile, the Israeli military command denied an Egyptian statement that 20,000 Americans are serving in the Israeli army. It said some less born in the U.S. are in its army but they are Israeli citizens.

Other sources placed the number at about 300.

Mohammed Hassanein Heikal, Egypt's information minister, made the statement in a television interview in which he also said the Egyptians have captured an American flying for the Israeli air force. That, too, was denied by the Israelis.

The Egyptian government said the pilot's name was Menahem Eind, a common Oriental Jewish name. The Israeli government refused to give any information about him, in line with its policy of no publicity for its airmen, and said it did not know whether he was an immigrant from the United States who still had dual nationality. But an army spokesman commented: "There are no American nationals in our air force, and with a name like Eind, I doubt very much whether he is American."

Israeli spokesmen pointed out that similar Arab claims have preceded past increases in Russian aid to the Arab forces.

Ben Corke to Direct UCS Fund Campaign

Alderman Ben Corke this morning replaced Jack Bennet as chairmen of Belleville's 1976 United Appeal campaign.

Mr. Corke was at the United Community Services headquarters on John St. this morning to familiarize himself with the mechanics of this year's campaign.

The swift change of chairmen began last night, when Mr. Bennett revealed to UCS president Robert Ord, that he would not be available to work on the United Appeal for a part of September, a key period for the fund raising drive.

On the basis of this, he asked to be released from the job, Mr. Ord immediately began a search for a new chairman.

He asked Alderman Corke yesterday evening if he would accept and this morning Mr. Corke confirmed that he had decided to take on the task.

Alderman Corke came to Belleville 17 years ago from the western provinces and has been involved in the commercial life of the city since his arrival.

A downtown merchant, Ben Corke was chairman of the commercial section of the United Appeal two years ago and was responsible for raising commercial contributions from $8,000 to $20,000.

This spring, he chaired a special campaign to provide funds for UCS.

The new chairman is an ex-member of the Belleville General Hospital's board of governors. He served on city council from 1969 to 1985 and was returned to council again last fall.

Mr. Corke is council's appointee to the board of directors of United Community Services.

In an interview this morning Ben Corke stated that he is willing to devote a great deal of time to the United Appeal.

"I believe in it," he said, "and I believe that the largeness of spirit in the community will over-ride any difficulties."

Mr. Corke mentioned that he intended to open a campaign office in the downtown area by the beginning of September.

Part of the alderman's reason for taking on the time-consuming position was his admitted confidence in the new UCS executive director, Isidore Cooperman.

Referring to Mr. Cooperman, the new chairman said that "he is a conscientious social planner, who merits public support".

To confirm his own respect for the work of United Appeal agencies, Mr. Corke said he had decided both to take on the job of campaign chairman and fi ncrease his own pledge to the campaign by a substantial amount.

"I cannot ask people to give," he concluded, "unless I am prepared to give of myself."

No Juice For Yachts

In response to requests from boat owners who purchase docking facilities in Victoria Park for the installation of electrical facilities, the Public Utilities Commission recently delivered questionnaires to the owners.

A statement from the PUC said, "we had written to 59 boat owners who had docking facilities in Victoria Park asking if they were interested in having electric service to their dock area.

"To date we have received 11 replies, of which four were interested."

The PUC will not take steps to install electric units for power tool work until more requests indicate the installations are truly required.

Welfare Funds 'In Good Shape'

The Hastings County Social Service Department, which looks after welfare in Belleville, Trenton and in the county of Hastings is in "good shape" considering the increasing degree of unemployment.

This was the statement made today by county welfare administrator Reginald Tucker, who said that expenditures, exclusive of administration costs, were only about $25,000 ahead of the year's budget as of June 30.

The 1976 county budget for all phases of welfare is $1,060,- 626. Of this $378,644 had been spent to the end of June.

"Unemployment is the ever increasing degree of unemployment, Hastings is not doing too badly," said Mr. Tucker.

At the end of June, welfare total payments in Belleville and Trenton were under 50 per cent of each municipality's budget for the six-month period, while in the county, payments had exceeded the 50 percent mark.

Belleville's welfare expenditure had been 44.42 per cent of its budget, Trenton's 42.36 per cent and the county's 52.53 per cent.

Services supplied by the county social services department included general welfare, special assistance, indigent hospitalization and nursing home care in addition to other services.

Cost of most of the services, but not all, is subsidized 80 per cent by the province of Ontario.

Pledging Himself

Ben Corke, the new chairman of Belleville's 1976 United Appeal campaign took time this morning to brief himself on this year's fund raising program and to sign his personal donation pledge. Mr. Corke is shown above making his pledge at UCS headquarters.

Meeting Will Decide Water, Sewage Policy

The Ontario Water Resources Commission will conduct a public meeting involving 12 local municipalities on Tuesday, July 28 at Centennial Secondary School.

The meeting, which will commence in the morning, will receive votes from the municipalities as to whether an area-wide water and sewer service will be set up.

The Belleville Utilities Commission received tenders some time ago for the extension of the existing facilities on the west side of the city.

The tender of Schwenger Construction Company for construction totalling $1,330,- 685 was accepted. A tender was also accepted from Rutliff Grass Ltd. to build a water intake for $134,000.

To date, the PUC is required to pay a total of $55,000 for designs and incidental fees for both companies.

The utilities commission has suspended operations on the extension work until a ruling is received from the OWRC based on the decision reached at the July 28 meeting.

Gerry O'Connor, a PUC commissioner, commented, "we need this plant and the increase in water and treatment it will provide.

"We can't afford to be held up for much longer."

He emphasized that the city is using between three and seven million gallons of water per day at this time of year.

Pending decision at the July 28 meeting, the city is holding the tenders so that construction will not commence until they are released. The city must receive OWRC ruling by September 14, the date when the tender expires, or a re-tender will be needed which would increase the estimated total costs of $2 million.

Mr. O'Connor expressed optimism that the OWRC would credit the city with the required expenditure of $55,000 and apply it to any costs that Belleville would have to share if the joint program was agreed upon.

Commenting on the future of the existing plant should the joint water treatment plan go through, Mr. O'Connor predicted that regardless of the extent the water was treated before reaching Belleville, a portion of the plant would be phased out.

He explained that it would depend on whether the water would be raw water from Lake Ontario or treated water. The raw water would require a large part of the Belleville plant to purify it. If it was treated water, chlorine would have to be added as the chemical loses its effectiveness over long distances.

Purification Plant Waste Poses Problem for City

At the present time, Belleville draws its raw water from the Bay of Quinte into the purification plant where it is treated for human consumption.

The wastage is then released back into the bay. The effluent consists of algae, microorganisms and bacteria.

With the pollution count rising in our waters, the city is not satisfied with this method of disposal of the waste.

At yesterday's meeting of the Belleville Utilities Commission, plans were discussed to divert this waste through our sewage control plant and return the purer water to the bay.

E. L. Burnham, general manager and secretary of the BUC, explained that the backwash of water from the purification plant would be too high for the sewage disposal plant to handle.

Plans to facilitate passing the bay wastes through the sewage plant, tentative plans are under way to construct a 50,- 000 gallon decanting tank which would control the outflow and still have all the wastage treated.

Mayor J. Russell Scott has expressed great concern about the condition of water being returned to the bay.

He emphatically refused to accept having "that stuff going back into the water if we're going to have a running sewer."

The treatment of the bay water wastage would only be required if the water treatment plant remains here. The future of the plan would be affected if the 12 municipalities meeting with the OWRC on July 28 decide to have a centralized water treatment system.

If the plant in Belleville is required to treat raw water, the retaining tank would be needed.

But because this is wastage different from that being treated in the sewage plant, the OWRC will be requested to delete on the bay wastage to discern whether further treatment will be required other than at the sewage plant.

After all, the algae, bacteria, and organisms ingested with the concentrated chlorine which would be found in the bay waste, might interfere both with sewage treatment and human consumption," said Mr. Burnham.

Said Mayor Scott, "safe water and clean water are two different things."

The consulting engineer firm of Gore and Storrie of Toronto will be called in to provide plans for the proper retaining tank and the best method of diverting the waste into the sewage plant.

Water Levels Up

Following an almost record July rainfall, creeks and rivers in North Hastings area are running at near spring flood level.

This was indicated yesterday by Mayor J. Russell Scott who said that small lakes in Faraday township were two feet above normal level for this time of year.

"Creeks and rivers are running at near spring crest", he said.

Minor Repair Job For Lingham Dam

The Moira River Conservation Authority will obtain prices from at least two contractors for minor repairs at the Lingham Lake dam north of Madoc, the condition of which has been under investigation since last spring.

During the spring breakup period, Belleville Mayor J. Russell Scott raised the condition of the dam's condition which he claimed could pose a threat to downstream municipalities.

Since then engineers from the Ontario Department of Public Works have inspected the dam and have recommended certain repairs be carried out.

An Authority official said yesterday that repairs will be made to the concrete sill of the discharge valve installed about 10 years ago and that plywood would be installed on the upstream side of the dam stoplogs to prevent leakage.

Also, patching of loose rocks in the dam structure will be done.

The repairs will be carried out this year but so far there is no estimate of the cost of the work.

Hydro Strike Vote Here Last Night

Members of the Ontario Hydro Employees' Union have met and had a strike vote over contract disputes with the Ontario Hydro Commission.

The results of the vote held last night at the Army, Navy and Air Force Hall in Belleville will be revealed, the votes in other Ontario centres, on Aug. 4 when they are counted.

Members of the union have been instructed to work to rule as a first step that could lead to the general strike in August.

In a directive dated July 17, members have been instructed to work under the hydro's working rules and to know these rules. Ontario Hydro employees work under many rules but some of them are waived at times for the sake of efficiency.

They, the local 1,000 of the Canadian Union of, Public Employees, has been bargaining with the Ontario Hydro Commission since Jan. 12. Bargaining ended May 14 after 95 meetings between the two bargaining agents.

Further meetings under conciliation officer, William Dickey, began on June 2 and ended July 2.

William McCullough, bargaining committee member explained that there are 97 issues involved in the dispute over the hydro contract.

The union is asking for a 14 per cent wage increase to all members across the board. The commission has offered an average of 4.5 per cent across the board with a split wage increase from 2.5 per cent to 5.5 per cent.

The union serves such employees as plant and station operators and weekly salaried clerical staff.

Other issues at stake are pension benefits, a pension, vacation pay, health insurance, shift differential and job security.

The union is also asking for retention of the contract's existing clause on the commission is asking that it be excluded from the contract.

The escalation clause at present states that for every three per cent rise in the consumer price index employees should receive a three per cent increase in wages.

The union is also asking that the clause be amended to allow employees to receive a one per cent increase in wages every time the consumer price index rises one per cent.

Ontario Hydro Commission public relations officer, Norman Manning said the Intelligencer this morning that total union demands amounted to approximately $33 million in the province.

In the Eastern Region of hydro, which has its headquarters here in Belleville, the demands of the employees if met would mean an increase in financial benefit of $2,625,- 000.

All issues are being bargained over a one - year contract.

At present, the lowest paid worker in the commission starts directly out of secondary school at $87 per week. A 14 per cent increase would create a starting wage of $99.70.

Mr. Dickey will give his conciliation report sometime between Aug. 3 and Aug. 16. Most hydro officials expect it to be late.

After that there will be a 16-day delay before a strike can begin if such an action has been voted. The delay is a two - day mailing date and a two - week cooling off period.

Union officials maintain that they will legally be able to strike Aug. 24.

County Home Proposal Shelved

FICTON (Staff) — After hearing estimated cost figures for construction of a new Prince Edward County home for the aged last night, several county councillors agreed that the project should be temporarily abolished.

Chairman of the county home and welfare committee, deputy reeve of Picton Donald Thompson suggested that the proposed home would cost $1.5 million.

To cover debenture costs and interest, Reeve Ault estimated $84,750 would have to be raised annually in the county for the next 20 years. This would bring the total cost of the home for senior citizens to an estimated $3 million. "It's sterling," commented Mr. Thompson.

He pointed out that a staff of 35 persons would be required to operate a 100-bed county home and observed that if the present superintendent resigned he would probably be replaced by a superintendent and an assistant superintendent. The total payroll for the staff of the proposed new home was quoted at approximately $190,000 annually.

Commented Mr. Thompson, "When you add this you are talking big money".

When council had heard all cost estimates, South Marysburg reeve Allen Bailey expressed concern that councillors are still not close to a final decision concerning the new home.

"I realize it's a large expenditure but I see no way around it. A little seems to be looming about whether we should have a new county home or a new school in Ameliasburg. I would not like to make this reeve a 'B' choice," remarked Mr. Bailey.

Reeve Bailey was supported by Sophiasburg reeve George Foster who observed that the problem should be resolved soon. "I hope the county home and welfare committee bring in some type of permanent figure so we can decide," said reeve Foster. He added that he felt a new county home was necessary, noting that senior citizens deserve care as much as the growing generation requires new schools.

Viewing the project from the taxpayer's standpoint, county warden Gordon Lloyd commented, "I think if you translate the cost into tax dollars the ratepayers cannot afford to do this under the present grant structure. It's in the interest that kills the whole thing."

He was backed by county home committee chairman Donald Thompson who said, "The people here are reaching the limit of their capability that he had been talking with Father Hart who assured him that discotheque operation would be under good control.

Discotheque to Open On City Waterfront

Belleville's waterfront area is to have a drop-in centre for the area's young people.

It is The Pendulum discotheque for young people 18 years and over which was intended to open on the second floor of the old firehall building on Front Street near the upper bridge.

But, for safety reasons, the required licence for the old firehall building could not be granted and the principals have now rented the Bell-Hat Marina building on South Front Street next to the Quinte sea cadet headquarters.

Heading up plans for operating the discotheque is Rev. Raymond Hart, Wooler Roman Catholic priest, who was unavailable today for comment as to where the new facility was to open.

A local real estate firm confirmed today that the Marina property had been rented and a start was made yesterday in cleaning up the building in readiness for opening.

Mayor usuell Scott said today that he had been talking with Father Hart who assured him that discotheque operation would be under good control.

Music and dancing will be featured at entertainment and light rfreeshments will be served

11 Teams Entered

Weekend Canoe Race Seeks More Entries

TRENTON (Staff) — Chamber of Commerce officials are hoping for a last-minute flood of entries for this weekend's fourth annual Trent-Ontario canoe race.

Robert Bell, chairman of the Trenton Chamber of Commerce committee which is organizing the event, reported that only 11 canoeing teams had registered as of Tuesday night.

Of these, seven are from Trenton and district and four from other Ontario centres.

However Mr. Bell expressed optimism that 10 more local entries and several additional out-of-town teams would register before the race begins early Saturday morning at Serpent Mounds provincial park on Rice Lake.

He did say that the certificates which will be presented to each entrant will not be ready for the presentation dinner Sunday evening at the Skyline Restaurant in Trenton because of the large number of late entries expected.

Rumor has it that there will once again be a team representing the father sex, but The Intelligencer was unable to confirm this report before press time.

Plans for the race are nearing completion and Mr. Bell says that the Campbellford Chamber of Commerce has agreed to supply breakfast for the canoeists Sunday morning before they embark on the second 20-mile leg of the two-day, 60-mile voyage down the Trent Waterway.

There is a shortage of power boats to perform patrol duties and Mr. Bell has asked that anyone who would like to assist in this regard could call Commerce offices.

An added attraction this year will be a competition between members of the news media for a trophy donated by Don Bell Sports Shop of Trenton.

Bill Huffman, sports editor of the Trentonian, issued the challenge to The Intelligencer and promised to give the opposition a few surprises.

He also said that he and partner Al Watson "don't need any practice".

Mr. Huffman may be correct; but Malcolm Johnston, The Intelligencer's Trenton bureau reporter, and his cohort Constable David Camp of the Trenton Police Department, are confidently preparing for the race with the belief that performance and not talk will determine the victor.

Latest reports indicate that a third member of the media, Robert Rowbotham of CJBQ radio may also enter the race. He is believed to be paired with Constable Fred Noakes of the Trenton Police Department.

Sir Oliver Mowat Honored by Stamp

A Kingston native, Sir Oliver Mowat, is tobe honored by the release of a special commemorative stamp. Marking the 150th anniversary of his birth.

Born at Kingston on July 22, 1820, Oliver Mowat was one of Canada's Fathers of Confederation and died on April 19, 1903 at Government House after serving six years as Lt. Governor of Ontario.

He began his legal career as a 16-year-old law student in the Kingston office of John A. Macdonald. He was called to the Bar of Upper Canada in 1841 and appointed Queen's Council in 1856.

His election as an alderman for Toronto in December of 1858 later brought him recognition as founder of the parks system. He was elected to the legislative assembly in 1857 as the representative for Southern Ontario. He served as provincial secretary in 1858 and as Postmaster General in 1863-1864.

He played a significant role in opinion-making from Upper Canada to the Quebec Conference in 1864. He defended the right of the provinces to retain substantial powers and was recognized for his contribution to the 72 resolutions prior to October 29, 1864.

He retired from politics on November 14, 1864 to accept the appointment to the Bench as a vice-chancellor of Upper Canada. He re-entered politics in October, 1872 to become Premier of Ontario one month later.

He was appointed to the Senate in 1896, terminating his position as Premier. He served both as Government leader and held the portfolio of Minister of Justice before retiring from politics to become Lt.-Governor in 1897.

In 1892 he was created Knight Commander of the Order of St. Michael and St. George. On June 22, 1897 he received the Grand Cross of the same order.

The commemorative six-cent stamp was designed by Ernst Roch of Montreal and will be printed by the British American Bank Note Co. Ltd., Ottawa using the two color gravure and one color steel method.

Recently the Canada Post Office has been using start colors. Notably, the recent release of the Louis Riel issue.

The Mowat commemorative will be printed in red and black with 34,000,000 stamps being issued.

Comments concerning these stamps have been generally unfavorable and this letter from a J. C. Allen recently printed in the Ottawa Journal is an average sample.

"The Post Office has issued some pretty gruesome stamps in the past, but their latest, in remembrance of Louis Riel, must be the worst ever!

"Poor unfortunate Louis! If he had been offered an alternaan's rope and this remembrance he might have been tempted to choose the former!

"His execution has been considered one of the greatest stains on Canada's reputation. Why add to it!"

Other letters printed in various newspapers have voiced basically the same opinion, although with less vehemence.

Welfare Cases Are Attracted By Low Rents

PICTON (Staff) — Welfare recipients seeking low housing rental in the Bloomfield area seem to be flocking to Prince Edward County to enjoy a higher standard of living.

In a report to council last night, welfare committee chairman Donald Thompson commented that 16 new welfare cases arrived here last month. In the past four days nine additional cases have been reported as newcomers.

"Now in the world are these people getting all this fine information about Prince Edward County?" demanded Bloomfield reeve Allan Anderson. "Somebody," he concluded, "is lobbying."

Mr. Thompson noted that the maximum rental allowance is $95 a month and persons seeking to stretch their welfare dollars are moving to areas where low cost housing is available. In high -rent areas welfare recipients often are forced to dip into their food and clothing budgets in order to pay housing costs.

Still annoyed by the number of welfare cases he has seen in the county, Mr. Anderson remarked, "Let's be honest about it. We are a slow growth area and we've had the squeeze on us ever since the early days of the 1950's ago. Now we have these people who appear to drag us down a little further. Frankly, we are a real welfare county."

County warden Gordon Lloyd admitted that the case load last month exceeded the nine cases level of 1969 by 40 per cent in Prince Edward County. "I think we should take some pressure on the provincial government to change this flat ceiling on the rent," he said.

Quebec's Bourassa

A "desperate desire for stability . . . a cry ing need for change and for economic growth." According to Premier Robert Bourassa, of Quebec these are the twin priorities of his province.

Change he believes is already apparent; the most radical in fact in the province's history, and in the short time since he became premier. While confident of French Canada's survival within Confederation, the emphasis now, he says, is on "developing the province's enormous reservoir of talent and ability."

Mr. Bourassa illustrated Quebec's new impetus since the April election in an interview with the Montreal Gazette's Hal Winter. Reference to legislation passed in that time is indicative of both policy and performance — thirty-six bills (almost matching Mr. Bourassa's youthful 37 years) in 18 short days, setting a new record and covering, in addition to medicare, a number of spheres relating to security. Control over the use of explosives for example, and closer surveillance over such activities as pop festivals, as well as a crackdown on speeders. Loans to commercial fishermen affected by pollution were also authorized. And much more — mostly of a routine nature perhaps, but eloquent of an administration concerned more with the needs of people than with empty rhetoric, radicalism and the shadow world of nationalism.

As interesting as this stabilization of the situation in Quebec is the personality of the premier himself. The Gazette's Richard Cleroux tells that story, and Mr. Bourassa emerges not only as a man of political acumen and professional talents (he is a lawyer and an economist) but of eccentric ways — the sort of person one might look upon, not unkindly, as the proverbial "some kind of nut."

Behind a "dull, eggbead facade," writer Cleroux sees Bourassa as "perhaps the private-ly most-colorful leader this province has ever had." Here for example is Bourassa, a family man who now sees his wife and two children in Montreal only on weekends, living in a $9 a night room in the Victoria hotel, described by the writer as "a very mediocre establishment in Old Quebec."

What his wife, daughter of a millionaire, thinks of this, is not stated, but then the premier himself is of relatively humble beckground, one of a family of 11 that lived Montreal and as a boy he pedalled a grocery-store bicycle to earn money. Here too is Mr. Bourassa dining out at the low-priced Cafe d'Europe, favoring inexpensive wine and finishing up with as many as three glasses of milk. Or holding forth on economics with three friends at a corner table in La Licorne, an Old Quebec discotheque, or he that a man at the next table is moved to ask, "are you a commerce student or something?" And the frail-looking, studious Bourassa replies politely, "I'm the premier." Or he lunches at the provincial mansion, hailing a taxi (he has given his chauffeur the day off and despite three attempts by his wife as instructor, he is unable to drive a car).

Some might be likened to Bourassa, if none of his aides are present, yet is always asking for things, like getting someone to dial a number for him, or bring him food or water. He goes swimming at the public baths, never carries keys or money for fear of losing them, always is borrowing small sums from friends to pay meals or taxi fares and forgetting to pay them back. He has the Montreal habit of fly ing once a week to trim his hair, but has to be reminded to don a clean shirt for a TV appearance.

A glimpse then of Robert Bourassa. If he were not the person he is we suspect he would fit in well as an absent-minded professor or a psychiatrist, the best of whom have personal experience of the odd-ball behavior of their patients.

Anything Goes

Well believe it or not, Simplicity Pattern Co. Inc. of Madison Avenue, in you know where, has an answer to the mini-midi-maxi fashion neurosis currently plaguing women around the world.

For women confused by the coming autumnal fashion equinox, they need not worry. It seems they will be able to weather the gales wearing whatever they fancy.

Here is how the New York firm puts it: "If you're worried that you have to be a contortionist to come out what is the right thing to wear this year, Simplicity has some comforting news for you. It is going to be a year of 'anything goes.'

"If you'd love to wear the midi, fine.

"If you feel best best in a mini, fine again. If you feel like traditional lengths, or if you think you would like mixing and combining lengths, that is okay too. In plain English, be yourself and dress the way you feel best . . ."

Hellyer A Possibility

Former Cabinet Men May Be Given Another Chance

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP) — In the Canadian parliamentary system, a former cabinet minister is considered a goner when his own party is in power.

When a minister is dropped from a cabinet for one reason or another and sent to the Senate or some other resting place he is usually written off politically for good.

In Canada, unlike in Britain and some other countries, they seldom if ever come back.

The idea of trying to change this political graveyard system now is being discussed.

There are suggestions that Prime Minister Trudeau may attempt to institute a change when he next makes over his 26-man cabinet. That could be in late August or early September.

The change would be to drop a man from the cabinet to sit as a private member but on the understanding that he might be invited into the administration again when a suitable post became available.

So far, there are no indications that Mr. Trudeau intends to invite back into the cabinet his former transport minister, Paul Hellyer.

But it is known that Mr. Hellyer would be prepared to consider such an offer and not turn it down flat.

Mr. Hellyer's circumstances are considerably different from those of a man dismissed from cabinet.

He resigned in an argument with Mr. Trudeau about housing policy. But neither man has had an ill personal word for the other.

It is fashionable—and pacifying for the party in power—for a prime minister to appoint a dropped cabinet minister to the Senate or some government agency or board.

There are some faint indications that Mr. Trudeau may not do this in every case, though he said Thursday he hopes to fill some of the 16 Senate vacancies this summer.

It is considered likely that he will bring, about half a dozen new men into the cabinet from among the parliamentary secretaries or even back-benchers.

One or two of those being replaced might do a previous MP's again and be available for recall to the cabinet.

The specifics of the matter are far from being worked out.

But the general idea is there: that a good man should not be lost to politics by shuffling him off to some agency never to be heard of again, just because he lost his cabinet job in a particular policy clash with the prime minister or because some project turned sour.

Walter Gordon resigned from the Pearson cabinet for, he said, giving the prime minister bad advice in calling the 1965 election. Mr. Pearson later persuaded him to rejoin the government but gave him only the largely-titular portfolio of president of the privy council.

It is not likely that the presidency of the privy council will entice Mr. Hellyer, for one, back into the administration.

The suggestion now is that a proven former cabinet minister would have to be given a big portfolio if he were to be invited back into the administration.

Three ships arrived at Roanoke Island, N.C., 383 years ago today—in 1587—carrying 91 men, 17 women and nine children to find that the 15 survivors of an earlier settlement had disappeared. The settlers' crews refused to sail any farther as the colonists landed. Among them was the governor's daughter, Mrs. Dare, who a month later bore the first white American child. Capt. John White returned to England for supplies and returned four years later to find no trace of the colony except for the word "Croatan" carved on a tree. The mystery was never explained.

Swing to Middle-of-the-Road

A World Weary of Radicalism?

Christian Science Monitor

In almost every major election held in the Western world so far this year, there has been evidence of a swing towards something like greater conservatism. In virtually no instance has this been a swing towards outright reaction, but rather towards a kind of middle-of-the-road centralism. Nonetheless, this shift in voter allegiance has been sufficiently broad to raise the question of what it betokens.

The most startling swing was, of course, that just registered in the unlooked-for victory of the British Conservative Party. But this was only the last in a lengthening series. First came the voting last March in Finland where a right-centre majority replaced a left-wing one. Then came the decided movement to three crucial state elections in West Germany. Early this month the Japanese state primaries showed, on balance, conservative tendencies. In Italy, the left-centre has so far left both lost ground.

The principal exception to this trend came last March in Austria where, for the first time, the moderately leftish Socialist Party topped the moderately rightist People's Party But here there is a strong indication that, after some 25 years, the people had grown just plain bored with the hitherto dominant party.

Although in no case is there evidence of any general counter reaction, there is reason to think that this move towards the middle ground in many instances stems from a general uneasa with social, political, and economic complexities which transcend national borders. Above all, one is led to ask whether these political results were not strongly influenced by widespread unhappiness over social chaos, in part as it applies to youthful revolt.

The average citizen, whether he or she be a British housewife, a West German burgher, an American hard-hat, a Finnish farmer or an Italian clerk feels a vague but growing sense of uneasiness at the world around him Long-time standards are being challenged, inflation is nibbling at his or her pocketbook, youth is "disrespectful," and so on through a litany of ills that he plaints. Under such circumstances the reaction of many a voter is to strike out at those "liberal" forces and tendencies, which they believe, foster such developments.

Nowhere has this movement to rightward been more marked than in Italy, where the Communist Party has been steadily gaining strength. Here too, however, the vote is probably a protest against the inefficiency of the present left-centre coalition government rather than a vote for the Communists as such.

Even in Germany, where the Social Democrats have been the dominant party in the left-centre coalition, the swing to the right has been largely a protest against the Social Democrats' inability to cope with the problems of a modern industrial state.

Whether this swing to the right will be permanent is another question. Much depends on the ability of the left-centre governments to cope with the problems that have given rise to the swing to the right. Much depends also on the ability of the left to present a more attractive alternative to the voter.

Professor Answers Critic Of Australian Education

Letter to The Globe and Mail

I quite agree with Mrs. Anna Fedele (July 15) that Australians are very friendly people. They have, however, one bad fault. They do not like criticism. As an Australian expatriate for the last nine years. I thought I had outgrown this thin-skinned attitude.

I do not know New South Wales very well but from what I have heard Mrs. Fedele's description is fairly accurate of that section of the state. Before Canadians send a spate of cables begging for cancellation of their Australian teaching contracts, I think there should be something of a rebuttal. New South Wales is not all of Australia. It is to fairer to label Australian education on the record of one state than it is to condemn all Canadian schools by reporting from the province with the most primitive system.

If Mrs. Fedele had found Australian parents so friendly, etc. do they get that way, despite the school system? If the physical education facilities are not deficient, how come the Australians seem to be rather proficient at sports, particularly team sports?

I suppose it all boils down to the kind of people a country is trying to produce. Do we want a system where teachers are preoccupied with the supply of paper clips (which is a rather petty way for a workman to blame his tools)? Do we want a system where the fringe areas of the curriculum — such as home, health, and, of course, the social life of the students — dominates the fundamentals? Do we want a system where a child who does not "make the team" is precluded from playing team sports for the rest of his school career?

If the local system is so good, why are so many students are discontented and parents are seeking places in private schools? If the American school system is so superior, how is it that an exchanges student from the United States who was enrolled in a public high school in Australia has said that Australian academic standards are two years ahead of her home high school?

Mrs. Fedele, more are paper does not make for a better education system. I hope you get your piano and I hope your English friend buys a 'air of pink glasses. Meanwhile in Australia, I suggest that Mrs. Fedele write to some of my contemporaries who are living in the affluent schools of Toronto. After the initial euphoria brought on by having two pencil sharpeners in their classrooms, they have become rather soured by the system. For most of them, their disenchantment is easily explained. These Australian teachers don't like these lazy, pampered kids who have more and eat, enjoying it less.

By the way, I am returning to Australia in December. As my children are to be within the jurisdiction of the New South Wales Education Department, at least two of them will be in private schools.

Wheat Surplus Exaggerated

Winnipeg Free Press

A recently completed Free Press survey shows that the amount of wheat stored on prairie farms has been much exaggerated. This has come through a combination of factors, including the bootlegging by farmers of their wheat through outlets other than the Canadian Wheat Board.

The farmer is as honest as the next man. But in recent years he has found himself hedged by so many rules and regulations that he feels frustrated. Added to this frustration is his present painful economic situation. Farmers are resourceful, and most of them are rugged individualists. These characteristics have reasserted themselves in the face of the wheat glut. One way or another the farmer has disposed of a substantial quantity of his wheat. Just how big so he has made a shambles of DBS estimates of the surplus.

Girl Guides' Role In Yukon and NWT

Letter to The Globe and Mail

I don't know what some of your reporters have against Girl Guides.

In the Globe and Mail coverage of the Queen's Tour of the North, the Girl Guides were once mentioned as "inevitable" and the second time as "unavoidable".

Do you realize that in most northern communities the Guide and Scout activities are the only programs being carried on for the young people other than the sending school? Do you realize the immense obstacles to be overcome in providing any programs where distances are so enormous, communication poor, facilities minimal, and leadership largely transient?

Great credit is due the men and women who voluntarily give of their time under these difficulties to bring a program to these young people, and they are worthy of more considerate comments in your newspaper.

Kathryn Arnen,
Commissioner, Yukon and NWT Girl Guides of Canada.

Pollution—It's Everywhere!

Kitchener - Waterloo Record

Pollution, which bids fair to become the scourge of the 1970s, shows up in the most unexpected places.

For instance, in what we he e come to regard as the pristine Arctic Ocean, where Canada must bend all efforts to prevent industry from polluting a region which is the royal tour as founded the Eskimos by taking a dip in it.

The reason: They knew that a nearby outlet was discharging raw sewage.

Even in similar story at Ostia, now rendered virtually useless by industrial waste and careless people.

Not even the empty spaces of mid-ocean are safe any more. Underwater explorer Thor Heyerdahl, on his Atlantic Ocean crossings of examples to the contrary.

Yet for years before he was ousted, Prince Sihanouk had tolerated the presence in his country not only of a large number of guerrillas but had given sanctuary to large units of the North Vietnamese regular army.

While the prince professed to be neutral in what is unmistakably the struggle for Asia, he indirectly but actively participated in the destruction of South Vietnam, leading to the destruction of all the peaceful and underdeveloped nations of Southeast Asia.

Strange Bedfellows

Peterborough Examiner

One of the mysteries of Asian politics is why Prince Sihanouk, former ruler of Cambodia, is on such good terms with the Communists. One does not have to be an expert on Communist affairs to know that Communism and royalty do not mix.

Yet for the Communists have ousted, imprisoned or murder-ed every ally they ever seized immediately after they seized power in the Asian countries. No one in his right mind could believe these days that he is below the Red high command's favor.

Yet for years before he was ousted, Prince Sihanouk had tolerated the presence in his country not only of a large number of guerrillas but had given sanctuary to large units of the North Vietnamese regular army.

Arabs Seize Greek Plane

flight from Beirut with 53 passengers and a crew of eight.

They forced the pilot to land on a remote corner of the airport and used the plane's radio to tell control tower officials of their demands.

Senior officials of the Greek government, including Athinios, went to the airport. Arab ambassadors to Greece from Egypt, Saudi Arabia and Libya also were summoned to the airport and asked to try to persuade the commandos to release the passengers.

The passengers, confined to their seats in sweltering heat, stared down the barrels of the commandos' sub-machine-guns for more than four hours until a woman fainted.

Then the commandos released a slightly, allowing the sick woman and a stewardess to go free and giving passengers permission to take short walks on the tarmac around the plane.

They held the passengers at gunpoint as a crowd of hagglish Greek authorities.

The Greek cabinet met in an emergency session to consider the demands.

Of the seven commandos whose release is demanded by the hijackers, two are Jordanian people men who were scheduled to go on trial in Athens on Friday accused of murdering a Greek child during a bomb attack against the El Al Airline office in Athens last November.

The other five are members of one of the main and best known groups, the Marxist Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine. They had been imprisoned by Greek courts for two earlier attacks against Israeli aircraft at Athens airport.

Aristotle Onassis, owner of the airline, came to the airport, spent a half hour in the control tower and left, authorities said.

An airline spokesman in Beirut said the plane left the Lebanese capital berther with 53 passengers including five Americans, four Greeks, three French and one Australian.

Stylianos Patakos, the No. 2 man in the Greek regime, rushed to the airport control tower with several Arab ambassadors as police ringed the Olympic Airways Boeing 727 on the runway.

The commandos, armed with machine-guns and hand grenades, were reported to have demanded the release of the Jordanians within three hours.

The plane came from Beirut, and the manager of the airline there said most of the passengers were Greek or Lebanese.

"But there were the Syrians aboard, and these may well be the hijackers," he said.

The commandos were probably members of the leftist Palestine Popular Struggle Front, said a spokesman in Beirut for the Marxist Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine. The two Jordanians held in Athens are members of the Struggle Front.

There were conflicting reports on the number of commandos on the plane, which was en route to Rome, and the number of other passengers.

Some sources said there were two or three commandos, others that there were as many as seven. Sixty-one passengers and crew members were said to have arrived from Beirut, but some airport sources said as many as 140 passengers may have boarded the plane for the Rome flight.

Police said the commandos got off after the plane arrived formed a cordon about 50 yards in the transit passengers' lounge, and did not make their move until they re-boarded the plane for the trip to Rome.

Then they made radio contact with the control tower and demanded to talk with Premier George Papapou. Told he was not available, they issued their ultimatum while police formed a cordon about 30 yards away from the plane.

Airport sources said the commandos apparently hoped to take the two Jordanians on board and then force the pilot to take off.

The Jordanians are scheduled to go on trial Friday for a grenade attack on the Athens office of El Al, the Israeli airline, last November in which a Greek boy was fatally injured. The two Arabs are charged with murder.

The foreign ministry summoned the ambassadors of Arab countries and said them the seizure of the plane was "unacceptable and harmful to Greek-Arab relations." The ministry asked the envoys to make contact with the commandos on the plane and get them to release the passengers and crew.

Informed sources said the Greek government promised to let the commandos leave Greece on another plane for Beirut or Damascus if they give up their plan.

The Egyptian, Iraqi and Syrian ambassadors were said to have negotiated with the commandos from the control tower.

The Lebanese ambassador is said to have tempted to enter the plane for face-to-face talks.

Union Leaders Talk with Bennett sting engineers and the Construction Labor Relations Association.

Ray Haynes, secretary of the B.C. Federation of Labor which has strongly backed the five unions' stand, said he was going to Victoria early today in a "standby in case anything develops."

"If we're invited, we'll sit in on the premier's meeting with the construction unions," he said.

Mr. Bennett said he thought about the construction situation a great deal and decided it was his "duty to intervene" where some citizens of the province are "outside the law and that they be given the opportunity for a hearing."

The premier said the government held out no bitterness toward those involved in the impasse and said the government had waived during the course of the dispute, during which much needed school and hospital building was neglected, before it decided to intervene legally.

Last Saturday, the government invoked sections 18 and 21 of the controversial Mediation Act passed two years ago which told the 380-member CLRA and the 15 building trades unions to resume work by 8 a.m. Monday.

Most of the unions complied, including the labourers and laborers, which didn't already have contracts with the recently-formed CLRA, as did the others. It was hard to say how many of the estimated 25,000 workers involved returned to work, since contractors were reported not to be calling all their workers in at once. Little activity was reported.

Tuesday, 200 members of the five unions who refused to go back held a demonstration in the business section of Vancouver, carrying placards that read "no contract, no work" and "no forced labor."

The demonstration came as appearance before a short preliminary hearing of the B.C. Mediation Commission. The hearings are to determine what the issues are in the dispute.

Among the demonstrators was business manager Jack Fisher of the Plumbers' and Steamfitters' Union who said before the dispute is over, "this and other demonstrations will be bigger and bigger."

The 3,000-member union has said it will stop work at all B.C. construction sites if any plumbers are fined for refusing to go back to work. Some plumbers, working under non-CLRA contracts, have worked right through the dispute.

Mr. Fisher said unionists have been "threatened before. Mussolini threatened us and so did Hitler. We put uniforms on to rid ourselves of that threat."

"If no settlement is forthcoming, we could have all 70,000 to 80,000 union members out marching within a couple of weeks. This dispute will be settled in time, but not by dictators."

Those found guilty of violating the provisions of the mediation act are liable on summary convictions to fines up to $1,000 for individuals and up to $10,000 for unions.

However, key to the refusal by the five unions to return to work is the mediation commission's power to bring down a binding settlement. Under this section, union members who refuse to appear before the commission are liable to maximum fines of $500 for individuals and $1,000 for unions, corporations or employers' organizations.

Meanwhile, the B.C. and Yukon Building Trades Council Tuesday called a mass rally of labor unionists for July 29 in Vancouver. Council secretary Ed Fryer said the rally will provide "an opportunity to give an up to date report" to union members in the dispute.

Government Reorganization to Be Investigated

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — Prince Edward county councillors have requested assistance from Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough in further researching the reorganization of municipal government in the county.

A proposal outlining a single-tier system of county government was forwarded to Mr. McKeough by county council's regional committee this spring and last month the committee accompanied by Norris Whitney, MLA for Prince Edward-Lennox, met with the minister to discuss this suggestion.

Later, in a letter to council, Mr. McKeough confirmed that his staff would be pleased to assist in augmenting this study with a request from council.

Before voting to seek this assistance, councillors questioned its possible consequences and regional committee chairman Bernard Hepburn assured them the purpose of additional research is not to forfeit the county to a region.

"If we don't take some kind of steps some day we will be in a region and lose what we might have had," he said.

"I've suggested county government as the answer for the salvation of Prince Edward County residents."

Mr. Hepburn said the Department of Municipal Affairs would advise a move unless council voted for it.

He stressed to councillors that the request for assistance from the Department of Municipal Affairs does not commit the county to any specific course of action.

County Warden Gordon Wood added "That is just to get the men down here to help. If these men meet with various municipalities this is fine with me."

It was pointed out by Sophia Sills and Reeve George Foster that this service offered by the department involved no cost to the county as well as no commitment.

Staff members of the Department of Municipal Affairs are now conducting a study in Lennox and Addington county and are expected to centre their attention on Prince Edward at its completion.

Employment Growth Slower Than in 1969

At mid-June this year, DBS reports, there were 8,146,000 persons employed. This was only 1.5 per cent more than a year earlier. Employment last year was 3.3 per cent more than two years ago.

For the important manufacturing industry, which normally hires almost one-quarter of Canada's total work force, the figures for employed persons for the week ended June 20 showed a decline of half of one per cent.

A year ago, manufacturing employment was showing an increase of 2.2 per cent over mid-1968.

Employment in transportation and the other utilities was down to 710,000 from 736,000 a year ago, but still ahead of 707,000 in June, 1968.

Big gains, however, have been made this year in the service industries, employing 2,063,000 in the latest period for which figures are available. This is an increase of 7.2 per cent over a year ago. Mid-1969 figures were up 5.1 per cent from mid-1968.

Questions and Answers On Highway Travel

Ontario Motor League Eastern Ontario Club

Are you planning a sightseeing trip this summer? The Ontario Motor League services extend you not to get so interested in the sights that you neglect your driving.

The vacationing motorist would be better equipped if he had four eyes — two to mind his driving and two to glance at the passing scenery. The Ontario Motor League emphasizes that driving an automobile is a full time job, demanding the motorist's entire attention. It is understandable that a motorist on vacation wants to see all that he can, but to do so at the expense of driving safely is dangerous to say the least.

It's a mistake to assume that a safe driver never takes his eyes from the road. It is necessary to glance from right to left continously to remain alert for intersecting traffic and other hazards. Moreover, eye strain would result from constant attention to the roadway ahead.

A reminder to motorists of the five seeing habits of good driving . . . aim high in steering; get the full traffic picture; keep your eyes moving; make sure the other drivers see you and leave yourself an "escape route" in case an emergency situation develops.

When driving by tourist sites that have a special appeal, the safest practice is to park the car and have a leisurely look. But, don't try to drive and sightsee at the same time . . . the result can be tragic.

When judgment is involved in traffic, always consider consider safety first. Don't take chances and insist on your right of way.

The "other guy" is only partially responsible for highway collision. Although one driver may be essentially at fault, other motorists on the road should be prepared to avoid him and the dangerous situations he may create. A collision involves at least two cars; don't do your's be one of them.

Be alert for children playing by the roadside. A bouncing ball, a straying kitten or a sudden whim may lead them into the street unexpectedly. Watch out for youngsters playing.

Keep your windshield clean inside and out. Service stations usually take cars of the outside but don't overlook the inside where the film created by smoking strongly reflects the glare of oncoming headlights.

Always drive completely off the highway when stopping to change a tire. If there isn't enough room on the shoulder, move slowly ahead until you find a safe spot. It is better to ruin a tire than to risk your life.

Many drivers neglect proper time in signalling. If signals are to be effective, they must be given soon enough and long enough for other motorists to see them. A late or too brief signal is little better than no signal at all.

It is against the law in New York state for persons under 18 years of age to drive a vehicle on city streets or highways. The Ontario Motor League cautions that the law also applies to under-18 drivers who hold valid operator's licenses from other states or provinces.

It doesn't take long for a youngster looking for a "joyride" to spot a car with the key in the ignition. Protect yourself and him. Take the key with you wherever you leave the car . . . and lock it.

Health Unit Inspector Hits OWRC

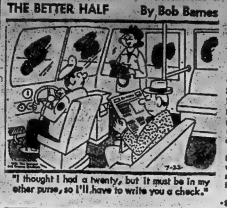
WALKERTON, Ont. (CP) — The chief inspector of the Bruce County health unit criticized the Ontario Water Resources Commission Tuesday for a pollution study last year which found considerable pollution at Sauble Beach, 15 miles west of Owen Sound.

J.W. Sutherland accused the OWRC of "jumping to conclusions" and "basing the findings of insufficient evidence.

The 300-page report was released to municipalities last month but won't be released officially for public reading until later this week.

Mr. Sutherland said water pollution at Sauble Beach on Lake Huron and other bathing areas in the county is minimal.

"If we thought there was any hazard the areas would be placarded," he said, adding that his unit samples the 230 miles of bathing areas in Bruce County at least twice a year.



He criticized the OWRC for basing its conclusions on only one sample and said one test should have been taken before the cottage season and three more during the summer.

Mr. Sutherland said his clinic's tests don't support the OWRC observation that the soil of Sauble Beach is supersaturated with wastes.

An OWRC spokesman said the report concentrates on villages and towns in Bruce County and nine townships: Bruce, Albemarle, Amabel, Eastnor, Huron, Kincardine, Lindsay, St. Edmunds and Saugeen.

Walkerton is 28 miles south of Owen Sound.

THE BETTER HALF — By Bob Barnes

Would-be Premier Hits Roadblock

ROME (Reuters)—Premier-designate Giulio Andreotti's chances of forming Italy's 32nd government since the fall of fascism looked bleak today after the Social Democrat party rejected his draft policy program for a new government.

The party's executive said Tuesday night Andreotti's program is inadequate and that under these conditions it is not possible to begin negotiations for a new coalition of Christian Democrats, Socialists, Social Democrats and Republicans.

Senator Croll Is Convinced Welfare System Is in Mess

EDMONTON (CP) — A two-day hearing of 21 briefs by the Senate committee on poverty had its chairman Tuesday to say he is convinced more than ever the present welfare system is "totally ineffective and radical changes are necessary."

Senator David Croll, an Ontario Liberal, said in an interview as the hearing ended that social assistance programs are in a mess.

"We are spending $8,800,000,000 a year in Canada on social assistance and of course we still have to have a radical change."

Senator Croll said he was pleased with the "terrific brief," most of which supported some form of income security such as a guaranteed annual income or a negative income tax.

"One of the most important things is that people on welfare themselves now are participating and are becoming part of the solution rather than remaining as part of the problem," he said.

During the hearings, committee members made a point of asking witnesses about their reaction to the guaranteed annual income concept.

Edmonton's social planning council, Dick Barnes, the city's social service department and the Edmonton and District Council of Churches all advocated some form of guaranteed income in their submissions.

However, the Alberta government and the Human Or Welfare group which represents almost 500 people in Edmonton receiving social assistance, warned that poverty is not purely an economic problem.

They argued that while such a scheme has merit other factors, such as health, motivation, education and environment, must be considered.

Ray Speaker, Alberta social development minister, said that to consider a guaranteed income as a cure-all was an "over-simplification."

Alberta also agreed with Senator Croll that in order to talk realistically about the elimination of poverty, it will require more profound political and monetary reforms than now are experienced in Canadian society.

Mr. Speaker outlined his department's change toward more rehabilitation and involvement of the private sector and volunteer groups in social assistance programs rather than providing straight maintenance.

Senator Croll said he believed Alberta led the country in taking new initiatives in trying to find new approaches and solutions to poverty.

Senator C. H. Carter, a Newfoundland Liberal, said he "was impressed by the minister's attitude toward seeking new approaches."

Alberta suggested consideration be given to establishing a major scientific institution that would serve human development similar to the National Research Council's role in physical and technological development.

And the effectiveness of programs dealing with poverty would be greatly facilitated if the federal government developed a single agency to coordinate planning and negotiate the efforts of all federal departments and agencies, Mr. Speaker told the committee.

He said his government is trying to remedy the situation in which the expansion of government into "nearly every area of social and economic life" has undermined citizen responsibility and initiative.

The HOW group, in a brief presented by executive director John McMenamin, was critical of current public housing programs.

"It may appear practical and economically favorable to pack the poor together in the new handsome chicken coops called public housing units but experience has taught us that they only create ghettos sooner or later and are, basically, inhuman."

Dr. J. D. Craig, presenting a brief from the Gardenside Society, said consideration should be given to putting vitamins in the rubbing alcohol, shaving lotion, vanilla extract and hay rum consumed by indigents.

He also said areas should be set aside in cities where transients can go to consume liquor without being harassed by police.

The committee moves to Whitehorse, ulone today. Yard will visit Quebec, New Brunswick and Saskatchewan before completing its hearing in October.

Female RNA's in Ontario Earn Less

TORONTO (CP) — Despite Ontario's equal pay legislation, female registered nursing assistants in hospitals across the province are paid an average $20 a month less than male orderlies with less schooling and responsibility.

It seems a clear case of discrimination, but M. K. Howard, director of the Ontario employment standards branch, says there is no legal way the province can force the hospitals to give this group of women workers equal pay.

"We feel registered nursing assistants do a much more responsible job than the orderlies, but they don't do the same job as we can't do anything about it," Mr. Howard explained in a recent interview.

The case points to a critical failure in the Ontario Equal Pay Act, which says that women working in the same establishment as men must get equal pay for doing the same work. (By extension, the criticism applies too, to the federal and other provincial equal pay acts which are modelled on the Ontario legislation.)

In a recent court case, the Ontario Court of Appeal tried to broaden the interpretation of the Ontario act to cover such loopholes. The court ordered Toronto's Greenwood House for the Aged to give equal pay to female nursing aides and male orderlies on the grounds their jobs involve the same skill, effort and responsibility although they were not identical.

However, even this liberal interpretation does not apply to female registered nursing assistants, whose jobs are in fact more responsible than both the nursing aides and the male orderlies.

Since the duties of the registered nursing assistants involve more—not the same—skill, effort and responsibility than those of male orderlies, they get no protection under the law.

"We'd go after the situation pretty vigorously if the jobs were similar," Mr. Howard said. "As it is, our hands are tied."

Although the orderlies argue that their jobs carry heavy responsibility, Mr. Howard says many may do little more than act as porters.

Registered nursing assistants take a nine-month course at the College of Nursing and are required to have a basic Grade 12 education. Orderlies need only a Grade 9 diploma and are trained on the job—how well depending on the hospitals.

Both are involved in lifting and clothing patients and other aspects of bedside care. Heavy lifting falls to the orderlies but they do not share in the registered nursing assistants' responsible duties of administering pills and changing dressings following operations.

Under pressure from unions, a handful of Ont's 200 hospitals this year brought registered nursing assistants' salaries close to those of orderlies.

But a sampling of hospitals in different areas of the province shows these rates; Belleville General—RNAs $378 to 1488 a month, orderlies $393 to $422; Welland County General —$385-$418, orderlies $435-$468; Hotel Dieu Windsor and Riverview—$335, orderlies $446-$488; Toronto East General—$378-$424, orderlies $438-$459; Sault Ste. Marie General—$385-$393, orderlies $438-$459.

Since the law offers no help, the job of winning equal pay for female hospital staff is left up to the unions that bargain for wage rates.

Al Hearne, Canadian vice-president of the Service Employees International Union representing workers in about 20 of the 180 unionized hospitals, says union negotiators "are working as hard as they can to eliminate pay differentials."

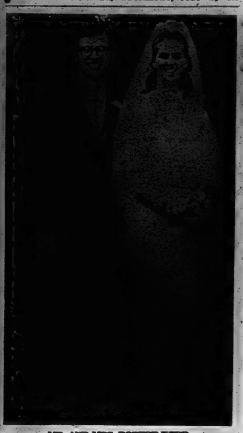
Changes are coming gradually, he says, but he hopes the inequalities will be eliminated in SEIU hospitals in the next few years.

Mr. Howard however, has no patience with unions that agree even temporarily to different pay lists for male and female employees. "I'd like to prosecute all the unions who negotiate different rates," he says grimly.

The SEIU claims the hospitals are using the registered nurses, the highest-paid female hospital employees, to keep the lid on raises for other women workers.

"When we ask salaries for the registered nursing assistants to match the orderlies' the hospitals argue back that they can hire registered nurses for that much," Mr. Hearne says.

In fact, in some hospitals this year, hospital-trained orderlies with one year's experience will be paid slightly more than the highest class of female nurses—women with three or four years university plus their registered nurses' training and who get between $535 and $575 a month.



Some of this is the nurses' fault. While orderlies have been union-organized for 20 years, most Ontario nurses have steadily rejected attempts to form them into a certified bargaining group.

Under Ontario law, all hospital workers are denied the right to strike—considered by unionists to be an essential bargaining weapon.

But the nurses and registered nursing assistants rejected even the moderate progress which organization into a hospital workers' union might give them. They have formed themselves, instead, into professional associations which set standards but have no bargaining power.

"If the nurses would get out and fight for higher wages, we could bring other female workers up from behind them," says Mr. Hearne.

"As it is, we are stymied from the top."

MR. AND MRS. ROBERT KERR

Kerr — Ott

St. James United Church, Ottawa was the scene of the July 4 wedding of Karen Melanie Ott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. George Ott of Ste. Adele En-Haut, Quebec, and Robert Stanley Kerr of Ottawa, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. Stanley Kerr of Peterborough, formerly of Bellleville. Rev. S. K. Christopher officiated at the ceremony. Organist was Mrs. MacNeil of Ottawa and soloist was David Hall, also of Ottawa.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of lagoda crepe appliqued in a petite daisy design with bodice and sleeves of Guipure lace. She wore a matching lace headdress with a full-length veil of nylon tulle and carried a cascade bouquet of bridal sweetheart roses and maiden fern.

Maid of honor was Miss Marilyn Mirabelli of Montreal, wearing a gown of buttercup yellow crepe in classic lines and a matching headdress band appliqued with Marguerite daisies. Her bouquet was a nosegay of lacey gold roses.

Bridesmaids were Mrs. Bruce Duffin of St. Catharines and Miss Margaret Willson of Ottawa. Each was dressed identically to the maid of honor.

Best man was Ronald Arthurs of Toronto, cousin of the bridegroom and ushers were William Ott of Montreal, brother of the bride and Devon Kelland of Ottawa.

For the reception held at Le Salon, National Arts Centre, Ottawa the bride's mother greeted the guests attired in a mistina shade gown of circe crepe with full-length coat. The dress had cost were trimmed in Swiss lace with seed pearls and she wore a small floral band of matching material and trim and carried a clutch bouquet of pink sensation roses.

The bridegroom's mother wore a gown of moss crepe in dacca pink with full-length coat trimmed in venise lace with cavier beads. Her small headdress was of the same material and trim and her clutch bouquet was of talisman roses.

For the wedding trip to England and the continent, the bride chose a dress of orange lee Italian crepe with matching headband and white accessories.

Upon their return the couple will reside at 1236 Carling Ave., Apt. 1008 Ottawa, where both are on the teaching staff of Ridgemont High School.

Push-button Device Developed

TORONTO (CP) — A new electronic push-button device connecting a teacher to each pupil could do away with raising hands to get the teacher's attention.

It will also help pupils too shy to ask what they think might be a stupid question.

The multiple-answer teaching aid (MATA), unveiled recently at the Sir Sandford Fleming College of applied arts and technology, consists of a control panel connected to 30 student "stations."

By pressing one of four buttons at his station, a student can communicate privately with his teacher to indicate he does not understand part of a lesson, or to answer multiple-choice quizzes.

David Fraser, a re-training instructor at the college, says the machine in no way replaces the teacher.

Since the teacher can confirm the correct answer instantly by pushing the appropriate button on the console, the student gets an immediate answer.

The instructor also can gauge himself more accurately during a lesson since he can ask everyone in the class a question simultaneously and get immediate answers.

Costly Mistake

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — A man walked into the ladies' room of a federal treasury building by mistake. Police said several women screamed, a guard nearby thought an attack was in progress and fired into the air, the man was frightened by the shot, bolted from the ladies' room, tripped over a rug and rolled down a flight of stairs.

The Experts Say

Consumers Should Shop Selectively

OTTAWA (CP) — The prices and incomes commission established by the federal government is calling on consumers to be tough customers, selective in their shopping.

In effect, it is also an invitation for Canadian homemakers, who make many of the day-to-day purchases for the family, to join the fight against inflation.

It's not a case of having to be familiar with the intricacies of economic and fiscal policy. The commission has a simple, straightforward explanation of inflation.

"Year after year, as prices keep going up, each dollar we spend buys less and less," it says in its pamphlet, called Fight Inflation, Save Jobs.

"That's inflation, and it must not be allowed to continue. But getting it under control presents serious problems."

The commission says that prices paid by consumers today are 20 per cent higher than they were only five years ago. In 1969 alone, prices rose by 4½ per cent, the largest yearly increase since the Korean war in 1951.

Measures to restrict spending by individuals, business and governments have been in force for some time both in Canada and the United States.

And the commission says that if applied long and severely enough, these measures alone would eventually break the inflationary spiral.

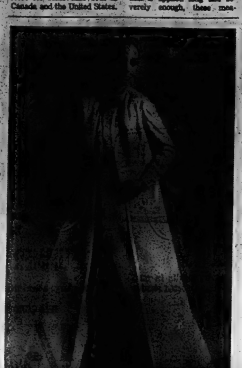
"In the meantime, however, it will be difficult to avoid temporary but painful side effects—higher unemployment and loss of production affecting every region of Canada.

"There is a way of fighting inflation that can save jobs and production.

"That's through co-operative action on the part of all the main groups in the community to help scale down more quickly the size of increases in prices, wages, salaries and other forms of income."

The commission says every person can help by being a tough customer.

"If you find the price of something you buy regularly has gone up, ask for an explanation. If you aren't satisfied, write us," it says, giving its mailing address as P.O. Box A, Ottawa 2, Ontario.



The commission also warns the consumer that at today's interest rates, it costs a great deal to borrow money.

"Think carefully before you sign up to pay those high current interest rates for months and years ahead," it advises.

Persons in the labor force should not count on a continuing rapid rise in prices or on future pay increases as large as they might have been getting recently.

"But remember, although your pay increase is smaller, your wage or salary will go farther as prices rise less rapidly.

"Support common sense and realism about the size of pay increases the economy can deliver without inflation. Price increases won't become much smaller unless increases in pay and other incomes become much smaller too."

WINNING COAT — Canadian fashion editors selected this sleeveless coat and jumpsuit, by Auckie Sanft of Montreal, for the best coat award in the National Collection sponsored by the Union Label department of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union. It is worn over an abstract print shirt. (CP Photo)

Senior Citizens Hold Picnic

COBOURG — The Twelfth Annual Senior Citizens Picnic at Victoria Park on the shores of Lake Ontario, Cobourg, was attended by 26 from Marmora. Leaving Marmora by bus at 10 o'clock, they arrived in time for lunch with friends from Senior Citizens' clubs from Belleville, Warkworth, Norwood, Lindsay, Campbellford and Bowmanville.

Most of the groups contributed to an afternoon program. There was a rummage sale by Madoc: a sing song by Lindsay members; Kingston presented a choral group; Campbellford a music festival. Marmora, its last show, and two sisters from Warkworth gave an entertaining knitting performance.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Mother: "I don't know why I get so furious at Jimmy and Sandra this morning. They nagged and nagged about going swimming after I told them 'no,' so I finally blew my top. I'm ashamed they saw me act so angry."

An infrequent outburst by a mother who is exhausted or irritated beyond control should not harm the relationship of mother and child, if the mother responds most of the time with warmth and enjoyment.

If children old enough to know better continue to heckle, even a usually calm mother may explode and yell for peace. Don't be too upset by an occasional blow up — just so it is only occasional.

Successful Living

Reader Has Confidence

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: A person recently asked you, "Is it possible to tell if a child is capable of attending university from as early as the first grade?"

From my own experience I know that schools do have this particular wisdom. In my 18 years of schooling I was flunked twice and told many times that I wouldn't amount to anything. Finally, half way through the eighth grade, they threw me out as hopeless.

Fortunately for myself I didn't accept this evaluation of my ability. I have raised a family and while I don't consider material wealth any standard I have done all right there too. — Anonymous.

Dear Anonymous: There is a world of difference between ability to attend university and to make a good life for oneself. You can't really go by how a person ranks at school.

More important for making a life are good principles and habits of living. We are called upon to use what God-given intelligence we have, and to add to this warmth and self-discipline and a respect for honest dealing.

I'm glad you made it in spite of the pessimists.

* * *

Dear Doris: Letters are streaming in from all across Canada inquiring about the book "Easy on the Eyes." Our supply has been exhausted.

We are not republishing because there are now good stocks in the public libraries of new books with large print. In recent years publishers have shown a special interest in the near blind.

Would you like to put a note in your column that libraries want to be helpful and are willing to put in more books, based on demand from their handicapped readers? — Executive Director, Canadian Association of Optometrists

Dear Director: So now it is up to the persons who need them to ask for the large print books.

Get to your libraries, friends. The librarians need guidance about what they should be ordering, and will be glad to hear from you.

* * *

Dear Doris: I haven't heard from my husband, let alone seen him, for the last 30 years. To get a divorce, one lawyer insists my husband has to be found and notified. For this he wants to hire a private detective and have me pay him $50 a day.

Another lawyer says that all that has to be done is to put a notice to my husband in the paper. I could manage the lawyer's fee, but I'd never be able to pay for a private detective.

I have read several stories about women doing their own legal work and obtaining a divorce for under $50. How is this done? — Appreciative.

Dear Appreciative: It does seem that a person has to know about it if he is being divorced. Yet if he can't be found, it is conceivable that a judge would accept proof that you have made an exhaustive search for him without success.

It is possible to obtain a divorce without a lawyer, and I am sending details. But if there are complications involving custody or property, don't try it. The eventual cost might be far greater than a lawyer's fee.

Grammar Important, But Not Everything

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I was fascinated by the letter from the former teacher who expressed concern over the daily slaughter of the English language. Her kind turns kids off and makes them hate English. I'm glad she's not teaching anymore. — I

Of course grammar is important, but it's not be-all and end-all. Any exciting, original composition with grammatical errors will get a better grade from me than a dull, unimaginative, mechanically perfect composition. Teachers who are nipped on grammar stifle creative excellement. Give me a bright, imaginative student and I can teach him grammar. Spare me the student who can turn out an errorless essay but doesn't have an original idea in his head. I can teach him nothing. — DETROIT TEACHER

DEAR TEACHER: As one who has split countless infinitives and dangled many a participle, I applaud your point of view. A person who has nothing to say, and conveys it in flawless English, still says nothing.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I just read the letter from the former teacher who offered a free lesson on the correct usage of such words as "bad" and "badly." She asked, "Where are today's English teachers? Don't they teach grammar anymore?"

As an English teacher who is still teaching grammar I would like to inform the writer that there is no such word as "anymore" in Webster's dictionary. She should have asked, "Do they no longer teach grammar?" — R. L. of Hollywood.

DEAR R. L.: Please look on page 97 of Webster's Third New International Dictionary. You will find the word "anymore." (Do they no longer check current references to determine what words are part of the language?)

Steak handled with tender care for barbecuing or broiling is Mary Moore's topic today

Barbeque or Broil Marinated Sirloin Steak

By MARY MOORE

Someone wrote asking if round steak or sirloin steak that had not been hung could be used for broiling or barbecuing. This reader said she had been told by a French housewife that marinating meat made it tender.

To be sure that I had steak that had not been hung long enough I drove nearly 20 miles. It was tough and certainly needed tenderizing. I would say that this notion of tenderizing steaks by marinating them is only partially successful. To be sure they are tender if you are going to broil or grill or barbecue steaks, buy red brand beef hung at least 18 days — preferably longer.

MARINATED SIRLOIN STEAK
(serves 4 or 5)

one 2½ lb. sirloin steak
¼ cup lemon juice
¼ cup red cooking wine
1 tsp. flavor salt
1 tsp. meat tenderizer
¼ cup corn oil

Have the raw steak spread out on a platter with deep flange. Mix together thoroughly the lemon juice, wine, flavor salt, meat tenderizer and corn oil. Pour all over the upper surface of the steak. Then turn the steak over. Let the steak soak in this marinade for 48 hours turning it over two or three times during this period. It will lose its red color but do not worry. At serving time remove steak from marinade and let it drain on cake rack.

To BROIL: Place on rack on broiler pan and broil four inches from preheated burner until top side is deep gold and sizzling. Turn over and broil other side. Time depends entirely on your tastes for rare, medium or well done and you must test it by slicing at bone with sharp pointed knife.

NOTES: 1) If you are grilling steak on your barbecue, as you know, you must start the fire well in advance to have glowing coals on which to barbecue your steak. 2)Red brand, well hung beef does not require this marinating treatment at all.

Couple Married 60 Years

TWEED — Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Smith, of R.R. No. 1, Mountain Grove, celebrated their 60th wedding anniversary on July 8th, 1970. Mr. and Mrs. Smith were married at Mrs. Smith's home, R.R. No. 1, Parham, Ontario, on July 8th, 1910. Mr. Albert Smith, brother of Mr. Smith, and Mrs. Fred (Silla) Simpkins, sister of Mrs. Smith, were the attendants at their wedding of 60 years ago. Rev. Cornell of Sharbot Lake, Ontario, performed the wedding ceremony.

Mr. Smith is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John M. Smith and Mrs. Smith (Mina) is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sills.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith have lived at R.R. 1, Mountain Grove all their lives and they farmed until their retirement a few years ago. They have been active members of Mountain Groove United Church (which Mr. Smith still attends quite regularly). Mr. Smith was 80 years of age last April 27th, and Mrs. Smith will be 83 this November 27th.

Both enjoy fairly good health. Mr. and Mrs. Smith have one daughter, Mrs. Lousa Reid, of Toronto, and two sons, William of Verona, and Fred, of R.R. 1, Mountain Grove; six grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren. Mr. and Mrs. Smith lived with their son, William, until he moved to Verona a few years ago, they now live with their son Fred and his family.

On Sunday previous to their celebration, from 2 to 5 p.m. an "At Home" was held for Mr. and Mrs. Smith.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith were the recipients of a beautifully decorated three-tier wedding cake, a corsage and boutonniere, many beautiful potted mums and many lovely and useful gifts, cards, and several telephone calls, as well as a plaque from the Ontario Government honoring their 60th wedding anniversary.

Mr. J. R. Simonett, MPP called on Mr. and Mrs. Smith and presented them with the plaque.

Messages of congratulations were received by Mr. and Mrs. Smith honoring their 60th wedding anniversary from Her Royal Highness Queen Elizabeth II, Prime Minister Trudeau, Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield, Honorable John Diefenbaker, Premier John Roberts of Ontario, Mr. Douglas Alkenbreck, MP and Mr. J. Next Few Days Are Critical To City's Space-Age Future

By RARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

The immediate future could decide if Belleville becomes a working community with a space-age production unit unique in Canada.

The fertility is at Northern Electric's Belleville plant. It's the cleanest work area in Belleville.

Its staff wears white smocks and work with covered heads. Women are forbidden makeup — even the silicones in hairspray could tamper with the sterilized environment.

But for Northern Electric, the atmosphere outside the chamber is far from clinical.

The unit with the meticulous work rules is the company's production contribution to space-age communication.

It houses the company's satellite communications program.

Continuation of that program now is crucially linked to a decision soon to be made at the highest level.

In the next few days the federal cabinet is expected to decide who will build Canada's domestic satellite.

Rivals for the multi-million dollar contract are Hughes Aircraft of California and RCA Canada Ltd., a Montreal subsidiary owned 80 per cent in the United States.

Just how the resolution of that rivalry involves a complex corner of Belleville's biggest industrial facility was outlined yesterday by a Northern official directly involved in the company's satellite projects.

Northern has more than a subcontract valued at up to $5,250,000 riding on the Hughes bid.

The cabinet's choice might well decide if Northern's Belleville satellite installation continues for years — ultimately refining within the communications space-age manufacturing facility unique in Canada, A. F. G. Tooth, satellite program manager indicated at a press conference yesterday.

The conference was called by the city's Chamber of Commerce, which now has joined city hall in representing the urgency for Belleville of the cabinet's decision.

The Belleville unit was assembled a year ago—for work on Hughes subcontract involving Intelsat 4, the communications satellite funded by an international consortium.

Being produced at Belleville is the satellite's transponder — its receiver and transmitter.

It's a component which Mr. Tooth describes as "the heart" of the satellite.

The production installation represents an investment of about $1,000,000.

It's highly sophisticated. Testing equipment includes a vibration table on which rocket takeoff conditions may be simulated. Even welding of components follow stiff National Aeronautics and Space Agency prescriptions. Welders white-robed like the rest of the staff within the chamber, work through microscopes.

Mr. Tooth estimates work on the current Intelsat 4 project will end about October. In all, the installation now employs 43 people — a workforce that would be increased 80 if the Hughes bid were accepted.

But there is a windy-immediate time element if the unit continues in operation.

If Hughes gets the Canada satellite program, it has indicated it will grant Northern a further production order on Intelsat 4.

This order, estimated at $200,000, would keep the Belleville unit working through until about next March.

By that time, Hughes would have concluded the necessary pilot projects for the Canadian satellite and have outlined its orders for Northern.

These orders then would arrive as the extended Intelsat contract is drawing to a close in the Belleville workshop. Thus an uninterrupted workflow would be assured.

But the Canadian satellite is only one of a series planned by Hughes. At least 15 others of similar calibre might be sold to the U.S. and other countries.

Northern has a letter of intent from Hughes, says Mr. Tooth, that the Canadian company would also "receive consideration" for subcontracts on these satellites.

This would ensure a work flow for years — one estimated last week could well orders could keep Northern busy for about seven years.

The export market would be a prime target.

What happens in Belleville if Hughes loses its bid?

Obviously, to keep the industrial unit going, Northern would "have to scramble for other work," says Mr. Tooth. But, just how many project alternatives exist for such a highly-refined work mechanism is not so obvious, he agrees.

If the unit was dismantled, its work force would be placed elsewhere in the Northern company complex.

"But it continues in operation "this would form a nucleus of something much bigger here for Northern," says Mr. Tooth.

Meantime, the biggest if is secret. But the federal cabinet, in issue — which Communications Minister Eric Kierans told Chamber Commerce president Frank Murray yesterday — on which a decision must be made quickly".

This morning, Northern's satellite program crew also continued working in their own highly-skilled technician and word from Ottawa was still awaited.

Kierans A Hughes Supporter

By T. DAVID SMITH
Financial Editor,
Montreal Gazette

The federal government is examining ways in which the Canadian aerospace industry can help develop and participate in the next generation of communications satellites.

A Communications Department spokesman in Ottawa said yesterday that discussions are being held between Canadian officials and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration aimed at Canadian participation in the next generation of spacecraft, which would have a much more powerful transmission capability.

"One country is launching the satellites and one company is building them," he said, referring to U.S. launching and Hughes Aircraft Co. construction capabilities. Other companies are making communications satellites but Hughes is the leader, the spokesman said.

"This situation will prevail throughout the current generation of satellites," he added.

Communications Minister Kierans is a strong supporter of Hughes' bid to supply Canada with such a satellite.

"We are looking at ways of developing a new generation of satellites for communications use," the spokesman said in an interview.

"We are negotiating with NASA concerning a series of experiments related to the development of high-frequency satellites. These experiments could lead to some portions of Canadian industry having some expertise in related subsystems," he stated.

The future role of Canada in the global aerospace industry is becoming an increasingly important issue in the current debate over whether the Canadian satellite contract should go to Hughes or RCA Ltd., of Montreal.

Awarding the contract to RCA would be designed, in large part, to develop Canadian industry into a supplier for world markets.

Satellites with increased transmission capability would substantially reduce the cost of each ground station required to receive signals from the spacecraft. It would allow cost savings for the ground station network or permit more stations to be built at the same cost.

Industry sources have been critical about the way in which the government has confused the scientific and commercial roles of government satellite policy and its application.

D. A. McDonald, manager of satellite and ground station marketing at Northern Electric Co., of Montreal, says "It is too late for Canada to compete as a prime contractor for communications satellites. You can't confuse scientific satellites with ones designed to be profitable."

Now a sub - contractor to Hughes in the Intelsat IV program, Northern originally proposed that it build a satellite with Hughes being used as a Consultant only. However, Ottawa rejected this in favor of RCA and a Letter of Intent was signed for RCA to develop communications.

McDonald said in an interview that "apparently we had the experience at home. Their scientific satellite experience was used to judge their expertise in communications satellites."

Another Hughes supporter, in the U.S. industry, says "the biggest failure" of the Canadian government's White Paper on satellite development was that it tried to merge commercial and scientific objectives. "Hughes recognizes the differences between the two and keeps its own organization separated along these lines," he added.

Regarding The Gazette story that Spar Aero-Space Products Ltd., of Toronto, would obtain sub - contract work from Hughes should the California firm win the contract, RCA president John D. Houlding said in an interview here yesterday:

"It's a bit of a red herring. It wouldn't add that much to the Canadian content. If we get the contract, Spar would get more than twice the subcontracting from us that Hughes is offering."

In Toronto, L. D. Clarke, Spar President, said his firm's association with Hughes does not represent a move away from the RCA camp.

"We never had a partnership or team arrangement with RCA which in any way prohibited us from submitting bids when asked by other companies," he told The Gazette.

"We submitted bids on jobs in response to requests from two companies," Clarke said. He added, "The RCA job is worth three times as much, if RCA accepts all of our bids on the various sub-systems we were asked to bid on."

Hughes has accepted a Spar bid for $1,250,000 to build the satellite's frame, should Hughes get the contract. Spar will also have 12 senior personnel participating in various management phases of the program in California.

Northern Electric would be responsible for 100 per cent of the Hughes electronics package, a contract worth $5,000,000.

Both Canadian firms would supply the same sub-systems for Hughes in the 15 other satellite sales it hopes to make in the U.S. and overseas. Spar, the spokesman said, has a maximum of $17,750,000 Clarke said yesterday, and Northern stands to gain upwards of another $25,000,000.

Hughes Aircraft Company Story Centres on 'Man of Las Vegas'

By T. DAVID SMITH
Financial Editor,
Montreal Gazette

Hughes Aircraft Co., of Culver City, Calif., is no ordinary company.

It was started back in the early 1930s to design, build and overhaul aircraft for The Man of Las Vegas to fly. For years it was maintained as a company whose one and only customer was the U.S. Air Force despite the fact that it had also become a pioneer in electronics.

After a traumatic shakeup in the early 1950s that saw several of its executives leave abruptly, later to set up some of America's biggest and most successful conglomerates, the company was reorganized so that its sole shareholder was the Howard Hughes Medical Foundation. The Man is its sole trustee.

Each year Howard Hughes determines how much of Hughes Aircraft's profits go to the Miami - based, non - profit institute for supporting a staff of researchers working at medical schools across the U.S.

This unique shareholder relationship is one of the underlying gripes that Hughes' opponents have against the company's bid for the world's first domestic synchronous orbit, communications satellite for commercial purposes.

Hughes threw a sudden bid for Canada's proposed satellite on the desk of Telesat Canada Corp. president, David Golden, several weeks ago. It undercut the only bidder at the time — RCA Ltd. of Montreal — by several million dollars.

Two weeks ago, RCA's president John Houlding said a group of newsmen that his parent company's shareholders were "slightly different" and alluded to the possibility that the Hughes organization could throw a low bid on the grounds that it needn't be as profit-minded as RCA.

Supporters of Hughes' proposal to Telesat don't see it that way.

For one thing, Hughes Aircraft officials have been known to run the company for years without even laying eyes on or talking to The Man. He expects them to perform and, as long as they do, the parent-subsidiary relationship is a distant one.

More important and concrete, however, is the fact that, by the time Telesat could get its satellite up in space, 22 communications satellites will have already been put out there, circling the globe at the same speed as the earth relates on its axis, i.e. in synchronous orbit.

Hughes supporters point out that the California firm will have put 17 of the 25 up there. TRW Inc. built the other eight but has a checkered track record resulting from a faulty satellite for Intelsat, the community of more than 70 nations which leaks its investment in the world's first global satellite network.

Many people in Canada and the U.S. see Hughes' lead in communications satellite technology as being insurmountable. Even RCA recognizes some grain of truth.

Houlding told newsmen that RCA learned after it had submitted its original bid that "it was to compete with a firm of major standing in the U.S. aerospace industry, whose resources and experience . . . give it an overwhelming advantage over a Canadian-based organization undertaking its first communications satellite program.

Editor's Note

This morning's edition of The Gazette, Montreal, carried two stories by Financial Editor T. David Smith that provide a comprehensive background to the current dispute over the awarding of the contract for building Telesat, Canada's first communications satellite. With the city's large stake in the outcome because of the substantial involvement of Northern Electric Co., local interest in the matter justifies reprinting The Gazette articles.

"The company (RCA) indeed felt, had this project (competition with Hughes) been contemplated at the start of the program, it would not have invested in capital facilities and attempted to compete; nor in its opinion would any other Canadian company."

Hence, RCA's recognition of Hughes' superiority at present.

The question boils down to this: Can RCA be reasonably expected to make up the lost ground and be competitive in the markets against the Hughes organization?

RCA contends that it can get foreign contracts, should it be allowed to develop a Canadian satellite at the taxpayers' expense. Houlding estimated that at least $100,000,000 in follow-on work for the Canadian aerospace industry can be expected over the 1970s.

RCA's proposed Canadian satellite should indicate the extent of the company's follow-on three things — technological advance, cost and service reputation.

Not having built a communications satellite, RCA can't count on the last competitive aspect.

Telesat Canada has recommended the Hughes bid over RCA on technical grounds and no one, except RCA, has denied that the company's technology is sufficiently advanced to overtake Hughes.

RCA wants to write off the development costs of its satellite on the Telesat contract alone, which critics point out is an indication of the company's "wavering" confidence in its ability to compete in a wide - open, knock - down fight with Hughes later in world markets where the protection for RCA won't exist.

On the other hand, Hughes is writing off its development costs over several satellites it expects to build.

As for the cost criterion, should RCA meet all performance specifications on time and within the $25,000,000 target cost, Telesat would pay RCA a 10 - per - cent incentive fee, thus raising the cost to Telesat to $28,000,000.

There is no limit on the cost to Telesat should RCA miss the performance, deadline and cost criteria.

Hughes bid, had it been based solely on U.S. content, would have been $21,000,000. Adding in a $2,900,000 warranty clause, the higher-priced Canadian satellite, $1,700,000 was the case of Northern Electric Co., of Montreal, and a $1,400,000 bonus for work by Spar Aerospace Products Ltd. of Toronto, performance incentives built into Canadian exchange rate has raised the figures bid to $28,000,000.

Thus, under the best possible performance by RCA, Hughes comes in $4,000,000 cheaper.

Time is of the essence for Telesat and RCA admits that Hughes could deliver "I don't know how many months earlier than we could," says Houlding. Thus, if RCA were to deliver on time to keep the cost at $28,000,000, the time allowed by Telesat would have to be greater than if the contract went to Hughes.

But this begs the question: Can RCA be expected to naturally do its delivery time and costs, as well as be competitive in terms of technology, when it meets Hughes on an international technological market later?

Hughes supporters claim that this "special relationship" between the California company and its only shareholder is not the reason why Hughes was able to come in with such a low bid.

They attribute the low cost directly to Hughes' ability to apply technological improvements, the latest being as recent as six months ago.

The company has been able to lower the cost per channel-year, in effect the main cost to users over the lifetime of the satellite, by enough to convince Hughes that it will gain more contracts as a consequence of its latest breakthroughs. As a result, it can write off development costs over all of them.

The rapid acceleration of technology can be seen in the fact that it was only back in 1956 that North America gained its first reliable means of voice communications across the Atlantic when the first transatlantic telephone cable was laid.

And when one company, let alone a country, latches on to a new technology that is subject to such a rapid acceleration, it is indeed powerful.

Can an initial venture by Canada produce a domestic industry capable of taking on the communications satellite industry's equivalent of IBM, Xerox or Polaroid?

Only a positive conclusion by Ottawa can justify the extra expenditure involved in developing a Canadian capability. Holding told newsmen two weeks ago that follow-on orders hold the key — "That's where you get the real return on the taxpayers' money."

If Ottawa concludes that Hughes' lead cannot be closed significantly by Canada, the government will have to find a new role for the Canadian aerospace industry — one in which it can compete on world markets.

Safety Clown

Red Barney, a public relations clown for a Canadian-owned drive-in restaurant chain, was at Belleville's East Hill Playground this morning to talk to participants in the city's summer playground program about the rudiments of traffic safety. Red Barney was a professional clown for many years before he took on his present public relations job that takes him to many parts of Canada and deep into the United States.

Huckleberries High

Vendors on the city market yesterday were quoting 90 cents per quart for huckleberries and from $4.50 per six - quart basket.

"People complain about the price but they don't consider the labor involved in picking the berries" one vendor observed.

"I tell them the berries are free and there's nothing to stop people picking themselves," she said.

Most of the blueberries sold on the Belleville market come from the Kaladar area, long noted for its blueberry crops.

The trouble is that the good pickers are getting farther and farther from the highway and pickers are scarce.

Blueberries have been on the market for the past two weeks with the current year's crop stated to be very good.

"The big trouble is to get them picked. The pickers want to earn a good wage the same as everybody else," was the comment.

Canadian Track Team Boosted By Paulson's Badminton Win

By BRUCE LEVETT
Canadian Press Sports Editor

EDINBURGH (CP) — Canada's track and field team has heartening evidence today that it is possible to win a gold medal at the Commonwealth Games without having to swim for it.

The proof was supplied Tuesday night by Jamie Paulson of Calgary, who climaxed seven years of intensive training and top international competition by winning the men's singles badminton title.

It was Canada's eighth championship in four days of Games activity. All the other seven were won by swimmers and divers.

No action was scheduled at the pool today and the spotlight was at Meadowbank Stadium, where Canadians so far have contributed only a second-place silver and a third-place bronze to the over-all medal count of 27.

While Canada and Australia remained locked in a furious battle for supremacy in the pool, England stole a march on them Tuesday by picking up half a dozen titles in assorted dry-land activities.

Of the five badminton divisions, the English conceded only Paulson's victory in the men's singles and Malaysia's first gold medal of the Games in the men's doubles. They continued to monopolize fencing competition in the men's individual epee, picked up their fourth weightlifting title and won the day's only final on the track.

The Australians replied with three victories in the pool and one in weightlifting. Two Canadian swimmers joined Paulson on the winners' circle and there was a sprinkling of silver and bronze medals in a variety of competitions.

The Australians were still in front in the over-all medal count and the unofficial point standings but England pulled away from third-place Canada to challenge the leaders.

In total medals, the Aussies had 41 to England's 36 but the edge in the gold category was only 17 to 15. The point standings, based on a 10-5-4-3-2-1 count for the top six placings in a final, gave Australia 312, England 291 and Canada 228.

Bill Mahony of New Westminster, B.C., and Peter Cross of Montreal started the day in the pool with a 1-2 finish in the men's 100-metre breaststroke and George Smith of Edmonton led home Ken Campbell of Vancouver for a similar result in the 200 individual medley. It was the second gold medal for both winners.

Australia's Karen Moras, already a double winner, picked up No. 3 in the women's 200 freestyle, defeating Angela Coughlan of Burlington, Ont., the 100-metre winner. Donna-Marie Gurr of Vancouver chased home Lynne Watson of Australia in the women's 200 backstroke.

There were no Canadian medallists as Beverley Whitfield won another Australian victory in the women's 200 breaststroke with English girls taking the silver and bronze.

Paulson, who lost his only match in the badminton tournament in defeating Paul Whetnall of England in the singles final, also joined Ves Pare of Montreal to win the bronze in the men's doubles.

Canada had two men in the epee final and Lester Wong of Toronto came away with the silver medal behind Bill Hoskyns of England, who has won the event three times in the last four Games. Peter Baknonyi of Vancouver, the only man to defeat Hoskyns in the final pool, was fourth.

Weightlifter Bob Santavy of Sarnia, Ont., earned another silver in the middle heavyweight class behind England's Louis Martin, who announced his retirement after winning his third consecutive gold medal. The light heavyweight title went to Nicolo Ciancio of Australia.

In a tournament notable for the near-collapse of the favored Malaysians, England got badminton titles from Margaret Beck in women's singles, Margaret Boxall and Sue Whetnall in women's doubles and Derek Talbot and Miss Boxall in mixed doubles. Ng Boon Bee and Pancha Gunalan salvaged the men's doubles for Malaysia.

John Sherwood staved off a challenge by Kenyans and Ugandan opponents to give England the 400-metre hurdles title.

None of Canada's cyclists got past the quarter-finals in the 1,000-metre scratch sprint and 4,000-metre pursuit and bantamweight boxer Joe Cooke of West Vancouver had his medal hopes dashed when he lost by a technical knockout in the first round of his quarter-final.

Canada's entry in the lawn bowling pairs, which lost its first four games, came back to win the next two but Harold Clayton of Regina, who won his first start, was on the short end of his next five.

Silver Medalist Lacks Experience

EDINBURGH (CP) — Manager John Andru of the Canadian fencing team watched Lester Wong of Toronto accept a silver medal Tuesday night and shook his head.

"It would be a gold if we had the money to get to international competitions," the Toronto-based president of the Canadian Fencing Association said in reference to Wong's second-place finish in the men's individual epee Tuesday at the Commonwealth Games.

He clasped Wong on the back as the fencer sprang from the podium and continued:

"I don't like the idea of the Canadian government placing sports in two categories is correct. I think they want to build the sports, the ones that haven't got a large following, into something bigger.

"But what happens to a fellow like Lester? He wants to compete internationally and he has proved he is capable. But we can't get money for international competition."

Bill Hoskyns of England, who first won the event in the 1958 Commonwealth Games, defeated Wong for the title.

Hoskyns won four of his five matches—his only loss being to Peter Baknonyi of Vancouver—in the final pool. Wong and Peter Jacobs had 3-2 records but Wong took the Silver medal because he had a better record in hits scored and received. Baknonyi finished fourth with two wins and three losses.

Konrad Widemaier of Toronto lost out at the semi-final stage.

The women's foil team of Sigrid Chalat of Outremont, Que., Marie-Reine Campeau, Montreal, and Ryoko Doyagus, Toronto, reached the team foil final by defeating New Zealand, England, Scotland and Australia also reached the finals.

Wong, a 25-year-old industrial chemist, said everything had gone just right for him in his first international fencing competition since 1967 university games at Tokyo.

He echoed his coach's remarks.

"If Canada sent a dozen fencers to Europe to train they could become equally proficient within one year," he said. "As it is, it is difficult to make up the difference.

"I probably fenced better here than any time in my life."

He said he is looking forward to representing Canada at the 1971 Pan-American Games before even thinking about the 1972 Olympics in Munich.

The second-place finish for Wong gave Canada its second fencing medal of the games. The men's team won a bronze medal last Saturday.

Canada has not won a gold medal internationally since the 1954 Games, and the largest number of medals won was in 1962 when she picked up two silver and three bronze at the Games.

City Use Early Surge To Grasp Third Spot

City Hotel used a three run outburst during the first two innings Tuesday night to carry them to a 3-1 Commercial Softball League victory over Rollins Construction.

In the first game of the twin-bill, a last inning base loaded walk gave Point Anne a 5-4 win over Corby's and a share of fourth place with Stinsons.

The Hotelmen grasped soul possession of third place by jumping on Rollins' starter Carl Boomhower for all three runs on three hits and as many walks. Wayne McConnell relieved in the third and gave up only one hit the rest of the way while fanning seven and walking four.

Bob Ebbet picked up the win for City giving up one run on seven hits while blasing third strikes past 11 Rollin batters and issuing only one free pass.

Gary Gow led the winners at the plate with two singles and Rusty Gerwin and Larry Potter added singles.

The Rollins lost their chance to move into a first place tie with the Bell Juniors due to their loss even though outhitting City, Wes May picked apart, City's flooded left fields as the Constructionman backstop punched out three singles to lead the Rollin hitters. The league's second leading batter Ralph Plane crashed a double and Wayne McConnell, Bill Goodfellow and Jerry Hill each hit singles to round out the Rollin hitting attack.

The Point Anne-Corby game saw Corby's battling back to tie the score twice after failing to hold onto a first-inning lead. A seventh inning rally capped the Cementmen's victory and destroyed the Distillers hope for a win.

Jamie Hunter fired the Potsiers' win giving up six hits while fanning four and having perfect control.

Ray Summers paced the Cementmen 10 hit assault with two singles and a double, with Rick Rosebush adding the big hit of the night, a first inning triple.

Gerald Maher added a double and a single and Jim Hosick also contributed two singles to the winning cause.

Pat Scollard took the loss for Corby's giving up 10 hits while fanning one and walking three, including one to Hunter with the bases loaded in the bottom of the seventh.

— Gary Gower was the best for Corby's at the plate with a double and a single, Larry Mavety, Neil Campbell, George Daniels, and Mo Hawkins added single.

Heavyweights Hoping To 'Lift' Canadian Medal Output

By MAURICE SWITZER
Sports Editor

EDINBURGH — The Commonwealth Games have had everything and now the weightlifting competition has added its very own Cassius Clay.

Scotland's Jack Hind, earned that honor Tuesday after boasting that he would best Canadians Russell Prior and Price Morris to Wednesday evening's bronze medal honors.

PRICE MORRIS

Prior, a 20-year old Hamilton sensation, and Morris, representing Belleville's Apollo Bar Bell Club, are rated in the form of the 242-pound entrants, and hope to add to the lone Canadian lifting medal won Monday by Montreal middleweight Pierre St. Jean.

To date, three members of the nine-man lifting team have competed. Vancouver middleweight Keith Adams finished fifth, two places below Pierre St. Jean's bronze middleweight effort.

Little Chan Hon Chan of Montreal and a bitter disappointment — tied for third, but losing the bronze medal on body weight.

Four light and middleweight team members competed Tuesday at the Leith town hall setting the stage for today's heavyweight lifts by Morris and Prior.

The differences in competition were forgotten earlier this evening when competitors and officials attended a reception on the grounds of Holyrood House given by the Royal family, who are in Edinburgh for the week.

AOCO-Firemen Battle For Final Play-off Spot

AOCO and the Firemen continued their battle for the final two playoff positions in the Industrial Softball League Tuesday night as they both picked up important wins.

AOCO whipped their closest rival banding UIC an 8-3 defeat, while the Firemen were just as impressive in their 9-4 victory over the CN Turbos.

Perry Soule fired the Firemen win giving up eight hits while fanning four and walking two. His battery mate Ralph Boomhower supplied Ralph Boomhower supplied two doubles and a single. Soule and Roque Davis added a double and single for the winners.

Brian Plumbe and Ron Conlon took the Turbo loss giving up 13 hits and five walks while striking out five Firemen. Conlon led his own cause at the plate with two doubles and a single. Zane Plumbe blasted a double and a single in a losing effort.

Ron McCoy pitched the victory for AOCO giving up six hits while fanning three and walking one. Ash led the winners with a triple and three singles with Palmer and Boonhower adding a double and single each.

UIC hurler Don Fords was tagged with the loss being touched for 12 hits and eight walks while fanning two. Belnap was the best for the loss with a double.

South Hastings Race Going to the Dogs

Read and Latta gained ground in the dogfight for first place in the South Hastings League standings last night by posting wins.

Read scored three times in the first inning to chase Plane's starter Ted Abrams and start the South Hastings leaders toward a 5-3 defeat.

Frank Farrell scattered 10 hits in the losers' bat w a s tough in the clutch, stranding 11 Plane's baserunners. He struck out seven and walked a pair of batters.

Bernie Coughlin took over after Abrams had allowed four hits and a walk, and three five-hit ball for the rest of the route. Between them they walked four batters and struck out seven.

Carm Milligan led the Read attack with a double and t w o singles, in addition to playing a strong game a shortstop for the winners. Peter Enright picked up a double and single with Ken Abrams knocking two base hits and driving in the game's winning r u n s. Steve White and Gerald Brennan each added a double.

Warren Hay solved Farrell's deliveries for a three-hit night, while Ron Urch added a pair of singles. Other hits went to Ted Abrams, Ray Saffman, Larry Adams, Eric Emerson and Bernie Coughlin.

For the novice T-Birds, Doug Rainboth tallied four times and Billy McFarland thrice to lead them to victory. Kirk McCreadie had two goals and Stuart McConkey one for the winners. Garth Scully had the only Dairy Queen goal.

The Jets used goals from Frank Searle, Rob Turner, Dave Harvey and Darrell Donnelly for the victory over Dickens. John Loder, Andy Ricketts and Kerry Reid replied for the Voyagers.

Larry's Imperials got goals from Duncan Present with three, Danny Payne with three, Pat Raycroft with two and Danny Codden with one in their win over Team No. 3. Vic Power had both goals for the losers.

Only One Decision Reached

S. Hitchon fired the junior Oddfellow goal while Bob Vanderwater replied for the Falcons.

W. Morez accounted for all the Bob's Auto goals while Kevin Meagher and Paul Chapman answered for National.

Puce Wins Gold for Canadian Track Team

EDINBURGH (CP) — George Puce of Toronto won Canada's first gold medal in track and field competition at the Commonwealth Games, winning the men's discus with a heave of 185 feet 7½ inches.

For the 30-year-old Puce, it was his first gold in international competition. His best toss was a Games record and was more than four feet better than the silver winner, Les Mills of New Zealand.

Mills, who beat Puce for the gold in the 1966 Games, covered a distance of 180-9 and Bill Tancred of England was third with 180-11.

Jenny Meidrum of Toronto wound up in one of the great comebacks in sport when she placed third in the women's pentathlon, giving Canada its second track bronze.

Mary Peters of Northern Ireland won the pentathalon gold.

Mrs. Meidrum, who retired from competition after the 1968 Olympics, returned to the track only five months ago.

Kip Keino of Kenya captured the men's 1,500 metres in 3:36.6, the first gold for African nations in these Games; Raelene Boyle, of Australia won the women's 200 metres title and Don Quarrie of Jamaica the men's 200 gold.

In the men's discus, German-born Ziguri Sirenis of Vancouver picked up points for Canada when he placed fifth with 181-1.

Dave Steen of Toronto, the gold winner in the shot put four years ago, placed 10th in the discus today with 166-1.

Plane Power

Rollin's centre-fielder Ralph Plane shows the form that has earned him second position in the league batting standings. City back-stop Larry Potter awaits the pitch that never arrived as Ralph fouls this one off. Plane did pick up a double last night but it wasn't enough as City defeated the Constructionmen 3-1.

Sport Briefs

HOUSTON (AP) — Joe Pepitone was not in his Houston Astros uniform Tuesday night, and was reported to have left the Astrodome saying he was going on baseball's voluntary retired list. Manager Harry Walker said he did not know Pepitone's whereabouts, noting that Joe had been in uniform for early workouts but was not in the dugout at game time. Neither Pepitone nor Spec Richardson, Astros general manager, were available for comment. Pepitone, who did disappearing acts with New York Yankees twice last season, had been feuding with Richardson and had asked the general manager to put him on waivers so that he could go to some other club.

BOSTON (AP) — Joe Cronin, president of the American League, said Tuesday that two league baseball umpires he dismissed in 1963 were fired because of "arrogance," not because they were trying to form a collective bargaining unit. In testimony before a national labor relations board examiner, Cronin said Al Salerno, a major league umpire for seven years, and Bill Valentine, a six-year veteran, were "technically pretty fair umpires." But Valentine "could not keep an even temper" and Salerno "had been in trouble since the beginning of his career." In an unfair labor practice suit, Salerno and Valentine contend that they were fired because they were trying to organize a union for league umpires. Cronin also said he and former umpire supervisor Cal Hubbard received "many complaints" from team officials and players about Valentine and Salerno.

NEW YORK (AP) — Billy Casper moved into contention but Lee Trevino held first place Tuesday in the official money winnings on the PGA golf tour. The PGA Tournament Players Division announced the latest point and money standings following Casper's victory in last week's Philadelphia Classic. Trevino, forced to withdraw at Philadelphia, maintained his money lead with $119,076. Dick Lotz is second with $107,695, followed by Casper, $103,468; Bruce Devlin, $91,755; Dave Hill, $89,626; Gary Player, $89,053; Tony Jacklin, $86,764; Bob Lunn, $84,628; Miller Barber, $83,456 and Frank Beard, $82,469. Trevino also tops the point standings, based on placings in tournament finishes with 1,115.5 followed by Lunn, 1,047.8, and Frank Beard, 962.4. Rounding out the top 10 are Barber, 916.0; Hill, 912.0; Bruce Crampton, 911.5; Homero Blancas, 906.6; Bob Charles, 896.1; Lotz, 860.8 and Larry Hinson, 844.7.

Kirby's No-hit Bid Ruined by Own Manager

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Clay Kirby's first brush with a no-hit immortality ended Tuesday night because Preston Gomez, San Diego Padres manager, plays to win.

The 23-year-old Kirby twirled eight no-hit innings against the New York Mets Tuesday night, left the game for pinch hitter in the bottom of the eighth, trailing 1-0.

The Mets greeted reliever Jack Baldschun with three hits and a pair of runs in blanking the Padres 3-0 behind Jim McAndrew's three-hitter.

"He was coming out," said Gomez, "because I play to win. I knew he had a not-hitter going but we got to score some runs."

The pinch hitter, Clarence Gaston batted for Kirby with the crowd of 10,379 in San Diego roaring its disapproval loudly with cries of "No, No, No." One fan jumped onto the field and attempted to get at the Padres dugout and Gomez. Security police, however, thwarted the spectator's attempt.

The boos continued as Gaston struck out and became even louder when Baldschun took the mound to face the Mets in the ninth.

When Mets' shortstop Bud Harrelson greeted Baldschun with a leadoff single to left, snapping the no-hit bid, the reaction from the fans was a mixture of cheers and boos.

Kirby said he was "a little mad and a little surprised but she's (Gomez) the manager."

As he calmly smoked a cigarette in the clubhouse and joked and smiled, the 6-foot-3, 175-pounder said, "Heck, last year I lost 20 games. So I wouldn't have minded having a no-hitter. It was the first time I had ever come close to one."

Kirby allowed five walks and struck out four while Baldschun was ripped for another single by Ken Boswell and a two-run single by Joe Foy.

In other National League games Houston Astros stopped Pittsburgh Pirates 3-1; Montreal Expos tripped Los Angeles Dodgers 8-3; Chicago Cubs ripped Atlanta Braves 8-2; Cincinnati Reds nipped St. Louis Cardinals 6-5 and Philadelphia Phillies rocked San Francisco Giants 9-4.

The Pirates saw their East lead shrink to one game over the Mets as the Astros topped them for the second successive night sparked by Jesus Alou's fifth inning solo homer.

Alou also scored in a two-run Houston first inning affair drawing a walk. Norm Miller and Doug Rader drove in the Astros other runs. Grant Jackie Aller had a run-scoring double for Pittsburgh.

Carl Morton slammed a homer and won his 13th game to become Montreal's winningest pitcher ever. The right-hander had the support of consecutive RBI outings blasts from Ron Fairly and Rusty Staub. Steve Garvey had a solo shot for the Dodgers.

Right-hander Ferguson Jenkins cracked a two-run homer and limited the Braves to four hits in the Cubs' triumph, delayed by rain five times.

Jenkins evened his record at 11-11 while Hank Aaron drove in a run with a sixth inning single, giving the Braves' great his 1,800th lifetime RBI, the ninth player to reach that mark.

Ron Santo and Randy Hundley stroked homers for the Cubs.

Pat Corrales ripped a two-run, two-out seventh inning single to give the Reds their victory, snapping a 4-4 tie. Dovie Johnson drove in three runs with a single, double and his 18th homer in the Phils' victory. The loss went to Juan Marichal, whose record dipped to 2-9.

McLain 'Breaks' Losing String To Keep Tigers Within Range

Denny McLain scored a breakthrough Tuesday, almost adding a broken leg in the process.

His 5-2 win over the Minnesota Twins was the Detroit right-hander's first victory since he was reinstated following a half-season suspension for association with gamblers.

"I think I'm starting to turn the corner," McLain said after the game.

His progression toward midseason form, however, almost ended when Cesar Tovar's line drive in the eighth inning caught him in the leg and sent him writhing to the ground with a badly bruised shin bone. Precautionary x-rays were ordered but Tiger manager Mayo Smith felt McLain would keep his seventh scheduled start.

In his first five starts, all incomplete games, he was tagged with two losses.

McLain kept the Tigers within four-games of American League East-leading Baltimore Orioles who edged Kansas City Royals 2-1, Minnesota's loss cuts the Twins' West lead to 3½ games over California Angels 10-6 victory over Boston Red Sox.

The New York Yankees topped Milwaukee Brewers 4-2, Oakland Athletics blanked Cleveland Indians 4-0 and the Chicago White Sox downed Cleveland Indians 3-0 in other AL action.

McLain allowed six hits, one of them a two-run homer by George Mitterwald. Willie Horton's two-run homer in a four-run fifth inning was the big offensive backing for McLain.

Baltimore gained its victory over Kansas City with a run in the ninth. Boog Powell drew a leadoff walk and was forced by Brooks Robinson. Ellie Hendricks then singled and Terry Crowley ripped a run-scoring double.

Ron Grich singled in Baltimore's first run in the third. Kansas City tied it in the seventh.

Relief pitcher Ken Tatum of the Angels belted a three-run homer. Catcher Tom Egan also swatted a three-run homer.

Carl Yastrzemski belted a two-run homer, a solo blast and an RBI double for Boston. The homers gave Yastrzemski 25 for the season.

Skip Lockwood's wildness helped the Yankees take Milwaukee. New York scored twice in the fifth on a sacrifice fly and single following two walks and a sacrifice, then broke a 2-2 tie in the sixth scoring one run on Lockwood's wild pitch and another on a sacrifice fly off Bob Humphreys.

Sal Bando tripled in a run and then scored in the fourth inning off Oakland west on to beat Washington as Paul Lindblad saved Diego Segui from a ninth-inning Senators' threat. Reggie Jackson homered for the A's.

Gail Hopkins drove in two runs with a single and sacrifice fly, Ed Herrmann homered and Luis Aparicio pounded out three hits in leading the White Sox over Cleveland, which got a two-run homer from Roy Foster and solo shot from Vada Pinson.

Bombers Rally to Edge Lions 25-22

WINNIPEG (CP) — Winnipeg Blue Bombers scored 15 points in the final quarter Tuesday night for a 25-22 victory over British Columbia Lions in the final exhibition football game for both clubs.

Veteran end Ken Nielsen took a 15-yard pass from quarterback Wally Gabler with less than six minutes remaining to put the Bombers ahead for the first time.

B.C. led 15-0 after the first quarter, 15-10 at half-time and 22-10 going into the final quarter.

Winnipeg, with the wind at its back, got final-quarter touchdowns from Nielsen and Amos Van Pelt and three points on two converts and a single by Ernie Kunzyk.

Winnipeg's other points came in the second quarter on Dave Washington's touchdown and Kunzyk's convert and 41-yard field goal.

Quarterback Paul Brothers and halfback A. D. Whitfield got the Lions' touchdowns in the first and third quarters.

Ted Gerela added 18 points on two field goals, three singles and a convert.

Defensive halfback Paul Brule set up the Bombers' winning points when he picked off a Carol Williams pass near the mid-field strip and lugged it to the B.C. 19 before Williams managed to bring him down.

And five situation, Nielson was all alone in the end zone to take Gabler's pass.

Pollution Control Machinery Required

HAMILTON, Ont. (CP) — Now co-operative machinery is needed by Canada and the United States to control Great Lakes pollution, delegates to an international water conference were told Tuesday.

John Austin, deputy minister of the federal energy, mines and resources department, said the two governments have reacted too slowly to the recommendations of the International Joint Commission.

It has acted as a surveillance and advisory body but was never granted the pollution-policing powers it requested in 1912.

In an interview, he said: "There will have to be something new set up. The very fact that we have pollution in clear evidence that the present international agreements are not enough."

Greenhouses' Future Bright

TORONTO (CP) — The future of Canada's greenhouse vegetable industry seems assured although pioneer work must be done to open new markets, says an Ontario government study released Tuesday.

The study, by Herbert Blum, a senior economist with the agriculture department, said that even in the face of heavy imports from Mexico and the United States "the industry should be able to capture and maintain an adequate share of the market to sustain its viability."

Test Plane Plastics

Gun Fires Dead Chickens

OTTAWA (CP) — The version of "chicken" played by scientists at the national aeronautical establishment is no game.

When bird meets plane, results can be tragic.

The bird always ends up in pieces. But at least one pilot died when a bird crashed through his windscreen. Birds have caused some plane crashes.

A research group at the aeronautical establishment, an arm of the National Research Council, is working on ways to improve the odds for survival of bird-struck aircraft.

With their "bird gun," a flight impact simulator in formal language, they can duplicate the sequence of events when a big bird such as a duck has a high-speed encounter with an aircraft.

By determining the stress characteristics of various metals or plastics, they hope to find materials and methods of construction that will make airplanes invulnerable to birds.

A 70-foot pneumatic cannon can toss dead chickens or simulated birds for ammunition is the heart of the bird gun. In principle, it's similar to an air rifle. A sudden blast propels the chicken or simulated bird at speeds up to 620 miles an hour.

The horizontal stabilizer from the tail assembly of a DC-8 jetliner was subjected to tests. A four-pound chicken fired at its leading edge at 345 miles an hour passed completely through it, severing its main supporting beam.

J. W. Noonan, group leader of the structures and materials section at the aeronautical establishment, said if a similar strike had occurred while the plane was in flight, it probably would have crashed.

Chances of a plane being struck by a bird are, however, less than one in 10,000, Mr. Noonan said.

Sydney J. Harris Says

Everybody 'Against' War

Everybody is "against" war. The U.S. says it is against war, Stalin said he was against war. Even Hitler said he was against war.

What governments usually mean by this statement is that they are against war as long as they can get their own way by other means. If the other means fail, they will resort to war.

But to be genuinely and meaningfully against war is to be against the preconditions that create war and make it inevitable. These preconditions are: anarchy among nations, the lack of an international court, and the absence of an international police force.

Until the nations are willing to give up some of their external authority — just as cities give up some to the states, and the states to the nation — then there is no way to resolve national disputes except by force and violence. It is as simple, and as difficult, as that.

First of all, we must get over the thought that war is a "natural" social phenomenon, when it is in truth a disease of mankind. In earlier eras, it was thought that cannibalism was "natural"; later, it was believed that slavery was "natural." Both these practices have been abandoned in the world, and there is no rational reason that war cannot be repudiated by the mass of mankind.

In my view, it will never voluntarily be repudiated by governments as such. Governments have too much of a stake in ruling ever to relinquish any part of their authority — dubious as that authority is in this age of mass-retaliation and mutual destruction.

It is the peoples of the world, acting in concert, who must persuade their governments to adopt "law and order" in the international sphere. Just as those governments urge us to follow law and order in the domestic sphere. How absurd for a government to preach a doctrine of "non - violence" in its own citizens, and to practice ruthless violence abroad whenever it so desires. What an immoral contradiction!

In my view, also, the student protest movement is the most heartening sign of a moral revolution in this area. The students are not merely objecting to our involvement in Vietnam: they want to stop war altogether, so that other Vietnams do not crop up yearly.

This can be done only by youth calling across the barriers of nations; by students appealing to students in all other countries, by going over the heads of governments and arousing and mobilizing young people everywhere. I don't think that even the Russians or Chinese could control their own youth in the face of a worldwide movement to stamp out the pandemic disease of war that has for too long afflicted the best, the bravest and the youngest of mankind.

Pitman Backers Form Committee

TORONTO (CP) — Supporters of Walter Pitman announced the formation of a committee Tuesday to promote him as candidate for the leadership of the Ontario New Democratic Party.

Mr. Pitman, 41, has indicated he will run if he is convinced of sufficient support at the party leadership convention this fall.

Stephen Lewis, the youthful member of the Ontario legislature for Toronto Scarborough West, is the only announced candidate for the leadership held by the retiring Donald MacDonald. Mr. Pitman is the member for Peterborough.

Details of the committee were given at a news conference by Fred Young, NDP member for Toronto Yorkview, Keakey Cummings, vice-president of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, and John Brewin, party treasurer.

The committee is made up of what is described as 51 "key leaders from every section of our party."

These include:

Andrew Brewin, federal NDP member for Broadview; Toronto school trustee Fiona Nelson; Dennison Nelson, former party secretary; Robert McKenzie, organizer for the United Steelworkers of America; Karl Hamilton, former national party secretary; and George Rawlyk of Queen's University.

Welfare Money Running Short in Many Canadian Municipalities

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Welfare funds in many Canadian cities are running short after the first six months of 1970.

Officials in cities that show a shortage of funds say higher unemployment is one of the causes.

A Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press gives this picture in major cities.

Vancouver's welfare budget for this year is $4,727,000, and assistance payments there are expected to be as high as $11,000,000.

In Metropolitan Toronto, John Anderson said his department handled more than 19,000 welfare cases last month compared to 13,645 in June 1969. He blamed the situation on a large influx of students seeking summer jobs.

"There's intense promotion of students for summer employment this year and the students are actively competing for the jobs available," he said. "The fact that students are getting the jobs is pushing some of the marginally-employable cases, particularly family heads, on to the welfare rolls."

Mr. Anderson said his department's planned June allotment of the $34,700,000 budgeted for 1970 was exceeded by one per cent and if the trend continues he will have to ask for an additional $1,800,000 by December.

The federal capital has not escaped rising costs.

James Sheridan, deputy commissioner of welfare for Ottawa-Carleton—the regional government covering Ottawa and 18 area municipalities—said welfare spending is "higher than anticipated."

His department has spent about $5,000,000 of a $18,000,000 budget. It should have spent less by this time of year, Mr. Sheridan said.

Spending is expected to go up in the fall and there is no slack to take up, he said.

Jean Seguin, director of Montreal's social welfare department, said his city is well prepared to handle rising costs.

Payments have increased in the last two years because "the unemployment situation is not as good as it used to be," he said.

"But we have foreseen that in our budgeting."

At Quebec, welfare director Herbert Chesebrough expects increases in cases and a need for up to $500,000 in additional funds by the end of the year.

Oshawa's welfare budget for 1970 is $1,315,800 and, by the end of May, $723,690 had been spent. On a monthly projection, the budget will be exceeded by $100,000.

Town council at nearby Whitby, taking into account a large increase in welfare spending, voted July 13 to raise the welfare budget for 1970 by close to 25 per cent.

The town's original welfare estimate for the year was $94,000 and the new figure is $134,000. Whitby had spent $56,872 on welfare cases up to the end of June compared to $36,225 for the same period in 1969.

Ajax, another Oshawa-area town, reports a month-to-month increase of $8,748 and welfare officer Mrs. Eleanor Armstrong predicts further increases. The first six months used up $41,346 of Ajax's 1970 welfare budget of $82,000.

Hamilton expects no serious problems in 1970. Spending estimates for assistance programs there total $5,150,000 and the welfare commissioner reported $3,100,000 paid out by the city by the end of June.

In Western Ontario, Sarnia and Stratford both report higher than anticipated welfare payments, but Guelph says it is in a relatively healthy state.

Sarnia has estimated $6 per cent of its general assistance budget for 1970. Deputy City Manager Murray Engels said $135,780 has already been spent from this year's total welfare provisions of $203,400.

Stratford city treasurer Ray McDonald said the welfare assistance budget for the year is $100,000 and, $63,317 had been spent up to the end of June. Mr. McDonald said the payments could exceed the proposed budget by as much as $25,000 by the end of the year.

Guelph city treasurer M. R. Sather said welfare costs of $272,228 for the first six months represent just over 50 per cent of the city's planned total of $457,000 for the year.

The Niagara regional government, which includes 330,000 people in the St. Catharines-Niagara Falls area, reports a 12 per cent increase of welfare costs over 1969. A total of $4,500,000 has been budgeted for welfare in 1970 and about one-quarter of this total has been spent to date.

Suitcase Atomic Bomb Plausible Nuclear Blackmail Method

WASHINGTON (AP) — A frightening subplot has been added to the drama of nuclear warfare—the prospect of a suitcase atomic bomb.

Such a weapon is plausible, says a United States congressional study group and the prospect is important in discussing the "nuclear blackmail" argument used by the Nixon administration to justify the Safeguard anti-ballistic missile system.

Suitcase bombs have been discussed briefly in public by members of the U.S. Senate and House of Representatives armed services committees. But the study group, which supports arms reductions, now says suitcase warfare is made possible by development of compact, lightweight, low-yield weapons.

"For example, a package the size of a portable color television set could conceal a weapon of Hiroshima power," the group says. "It could be carried by one person.

"Introduction of a megaton weapon into a U.S. city involves a somewhat larger package size, no larger than a hi-fi console and weight of half a ton."

The weapon, the study group suggests, could be taken from a submarine off the Oregon shore and placed on a river raft, transported via automobile to a Chicago hotel room or dumped into a trash barrel in front of the Capitol in Washington.

The report says: "If a nation like Red China is reckoned such a risk that it would resort to nuclear blackmail by means of a ballistic-missile strike at a few U.S. cities, then presumably it would not be out of line to take seriously a covert attack with planted nuclear weapons."

The suitcase-bomb study is a compilation of research papers distributed to congressmen by the military spending committee of a group known as Members of Congress for Peace Through Law.

Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird, seeking to justify the ABM system for defense of cities, has told Congress: "If the Chinese threat came to being as early as 1973, there would be a gap of several years"—if Safeguard is not started immediately—"during which the Chinese could threaten nuclear blackmail against us."

The congressional study group concedes there may be the possibility China might develop a few intercontinental ballistic missiles and aim them at U.S. cities.

But such a possibility is little justification for Safeguard for several reasons, including the opinion of the suitcase weapon, the group says.

U.S. Policemen Will Campaign to Remove 'Incompetent' Judges

MONTREAL (CP) — The newly elected president of the International Conference of Police Associations said Tuesday that policemen in the United States will actively campaign to remove "incompetent and incapable" judges from office in the U.S.

Patrolman Carl Parsell, a 23-year-old veteran of the Detroit police department, said it is "highly likely" U.S. police associations would begin to sponsor or support candidates at the local, state and federal levels.

Mr. Parsell said the time has come for North American law enforcement officers to become involved in politics "to obtain our basic rights for the protection of our lives."

"We will throw our weight behind candidates who stand for law and order at all times, not just when voting time approaches.

"This conference will attempt to expose judges and politicians who propose to be for law enforcement but fail to carry out their responsibilities once in office."

Mr. Parsell was earlier elected ICPA president by delegates representing more than 125,000 persons in 123 associations at the group's annual meeting which ends today.

It calls for immediate support of governments and the courts "or else policemen will be forced to deal with their assailants directly."

The second major resolution, passed Monday, called on member associations to seek the right to strike.

Panther Leader Rules From Jail

SAN LUIS OBISPO, Calif. (AP) — From behind the 14-foot fences and steel bars of a state prison, Huey P. Newton guides the militant Black Panther party toward what he envisages as a revolution within his lifetime.

"I decide the final policy on everything in the party," said Newton, Panther co-founder and minister of defence. "I communicate with the party through visits by my family."

The smiling, soft-spoken Newton, 28, has spent the last 3½ years in prison for killing an Oakland policeman. He was sentenced to two to 15 years for the Oct. 28, 1967, shooting of officer John Frey.

On May 21 the California District Court of Appeal ordered a new trial on ground that the Superior Court omitted some required instructions to the jury and made other prejudicial errors.

"I'm not very optimistic," Newton said in an interview. "I have very little faith in the state machine.

"I don't expect justice. I'm just being realistic.

"But I am optimistic about winning the final battle because the people always win."

FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover recently called the Black Panthers the most dangerous organization in the United States and accused it of fomenting terrorism in cities and on campuses.

Newton commented: "The most dangerous groups to the people of the world are the Pentagon, including the CIA, the U.S. military, the local police, the avaricious businessman and the lying politicians."

A party poster picturing Newton with another leader, each bearing a shotgun and a spear has been sold nationally. But he said: "I'm against violence. I'm not a violent man. All revolutionaries are against violence.

"There's a distinction between the violence of the aggressor and the self-defence of the attacked."

While he is proud of the Black Panther breakfast programs and clinics in some big U.S. cities, Newton characterizes himself as a revolutionary, not a reformer, explaining:

"For blacks and other minorities here a socialist government is the only salvation because we've never gained anything from capitalism."

Eventually, internal discontent coupled with an increasing number of war fronts will weaken the United States enough for a successful revolution, he said.

"It will be a world revolution," the Panther leader said.

"The police regime, the Pentagon, is too powerful for it to be defeated on a national level."

"All indications are that it will be a violent conflict judging from the activities of this Fascist government," he added.

While the exact Black Panther party membership is a matter for speculation, Newton acknowledged it is relatively small.

"We are a vanguard group hoping to influence the minds of the people," Newton concluded.

Tar, Nicotine Reductions Are Feasible

OTTAWA (CP) — Significant reductions of tar and nicotine content in cigarettes are feasible, the health department says in a news release listing latest figures for 81 brands tested.

Samples for the tests were collected across the country last February and March and compilations were released Tuesday.

Seventeen Canadian-manufactured cigarettes tested showed reductions of three or more milligrams in tar content, the release said.

"Some cigarettes introduced recently were found to have moderately low tar and nicotine levels."

The tests based on the February-March samples were the third in a series carried out by the department in its campaign to reduce cigarette smoking. Results of previous tests were published in December and May of 1969.

The release said lower levels of tar and nicotine continued to be found in filter cigarettes of short lengths—the regular and compact sizes.

Some brands showed progressive reductions of tar and nicotine in each of the three tests, demonstrating that reductions of these agents are feasible.

The release warned smokers "not to rely on the brand of cigarette as the only way to reduce the inhalation of cigarette smoke constituents into the lungs."

How Brands Rank

OTTAWA (CP)—Following are results of the latest health department tests of tar and nicotine content, in milligrams per cigarette, for brands previous tests in December, 1969, sold in Canada, with results of and May, 1969 in that order.

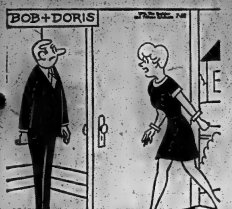
BELLEVILLE residents say:

"EVERYONE PROSPERS WHEN YOU SHOP LOCALLY"

A prosperous town means jobs . . . jobs that help to pay taxes, contribute to churches and charities and build homes. When you patronize local firms, you're helping to create those jobs. Think about this the next time you're tempted to take your business elsewhere!



ARE YOU SHOPPING MORE AND ENJOYING IT LESS?

Then try shopping where friends and neighbors offer prompt, courteous service in a relaxed atmosphere.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Man's his own worst enemy. How often have you heard it — and how true it is. Even though forewarned, he kills himself in one of many ways. Threats against his very existence arise in himself.

Warned against excessive smoking—and heart attack or cancer — he keeps on. He shakes his fist at the heavens and dares lightning to strike him down.

He dares the law of averages to single him out for a heart attack or an inoperable "lump" in his lung. Likewise, the chronic alcoholic "dares" self - annihilation in an auto crash.

Such are but a few of the common (and well - recognized) methods of self - destruction. Others are not so evident. For example, consider the danger of outbursts of temper. Although "keeping resentment in" is certainly not good either, temper outbursts can lead to sudden tragedy.

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: My husband, who is only 42, has already had a severe heart attack. His blood pressure remains over 200 and his kidneys are bad, too. He gets attacks of angina.

Our doctor strongly advises him against getting excited so much. He says his arteries are too weak to withstand such extra pressure on his circulation. Do you go along with that?

My husband goes into the most terrible rages that leave him almost gasping for breath. His face turns purplish - red and his veins bulge in his neck. At times he clenches his fist and tries to punch a hole in the wall. He's on tranquilizers. He's been warned. But nothing seems to help. Will you comment? — Mrs. A.

Comment: As you and his doctor predict, he's likely to kill himself in a tantrum someday. During the past year I mentioned the case-history of a renowned English heart specialist who also had bursts of rage. He correctly predicted his own demise: "My arteries are at the mercy of my bad temper. One day I shall die in an angina attack brought about by myself." Some time later, at a medical meeting, while in a violent disagreement with a colleague — he dropped dead.

What's more important than tranquilizers for your husband, Mrs. A., is learning how to develop a philosophy or equanimity. At 42, he should say to himself, "If it means living quite a few more years, it certainly pays to learn to control my temper."

I have observed such character-transformation in many similar patients. It prolonged their lives. Self-control — although admittedly difficult to attain — may be one of the most important life-saving measures. Bottled up anger and resentment are not good for the body; but sudden outbursts may be worse.

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I recently had a severe attack of shingles. I still have twinges of burning and pain from the darn thing. According to the Old Testament, Job suffered a lot. It couldn't have been complete unless he had Herpes Zoster, too. — Mr. H.

For Mrs. D.: Asthma is not invariably a "hopeless" condition. For example, consider the following letter received today:

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: My 7 - year - old daughter has suffered from bronchial asthma attacks monthly since she was six months of age. After undergoing many tests and taking all types of medication (which never helped) we were told she was allergic to her own cold bacteria.

Well, four months ago our doctor gave her penicillin tablets to take once a day, plus a gamma globulin shot once a month. She hasn't had an attack since. — Mrs. E.

Franklin's Route Is Covered

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — The centennial re-enactment of Sir John Franklin's second Arctic expedition has started on a lake in the boulder-strewn barrens.

Twelve canoeists, mostly from Eastern Canada, are retracing Franklin's route in six 17-foot canoes flown to Wister Lake last weekend.

Half of them headed north to the mouth of the Coppermine River. From there they go to the Arctic coast. The rest, facing numerous portages, struck out south for Yellowknife.

Franklin's party in 1820-21 started at Fort Providence and followed the Yellowknife, Auora, Winter and Coppermine rivers to the Arctic coast.

G. H. Bayly, deputy minister of lands and forests for Ontario and one of the voyageurs, is leader of the team heading north to Coppermine. It expects to arrive there Aug. 7, a day before the others arrive in Yellowknife.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

Your birthday today: This year the Sun changes today, July 23, from Cancer to Leo at 2:38 AM Eastern Daylight Time. In other years it changes at different hours, usually during the calendar date July 22. For both Cancer and Leo people born on this date: Your year ahead involves much adjustment, which is served in more difficult for the late Cancerians than for the early Leos. In either case you must meet the other fellow more than halfway. Today's natives frequently have direct psychic knowledge or learn quickly in abrupt, erratic stages. The personality is magnetic: forceful among the men, quieter for women.

ARIES (March 21—April 19): Your main tendency today is impatience. Give people a chance and the reaction will probably be favorable. Quit at the earliest reasonable moment for diversion.

TAURUS (April 20—May 20): Close associates, particularly if they are bored, want to play games or tease today. Attend seriously to neglected chores and keep going.

GEMINI (May 21—June 20): Slow-starting morning hours let you feel you lack details. With diligence and a bit of good humor it's a lively day. Old friends are more important now.

CANCER (June 21—July 22): In the present relative calm, pick up the threads of interrupted matters, alleviate long-standing nuisances. Further planning is needed before you start anything new.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Questions relating to readily deployable resources come in the morning, but arg quite easily settled. Get in some serious reflections on self-improvement.

VIRGO (Aug. 23—Sept. 22): Keep a calm exterior while calling up the support of those backing you. Conferences work out readily now. Attend to details as rapidly as you can.

LIBRA (Sept. 23—Oct. 22): A ripple of excitement or brief confusion in the early hours gives way to an average day in which you should be able to make good progress. Seek and offer cooperation.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Get on the move early, clear off odds and ends. Much can be done with just normal effort. For the evening, good music—and a lively discussion offer much.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): This is an excellent day for putting original ideas into workable form. Clear out your work area first. You may not need as much help as you had thought.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22—Jan. 19): The people you care most about are most likely to bicker. Listen carefully, then do something direct and simple, without waiting for any immediate reactions.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Travel, long-distance communication lead to some your needs. Getting into your chosen spot is not convenient, but keep your patience and your courtesy.

PISCES (Feb. 19—March 20): There is just enough opposition to stimulate you into developing better plans. Deal with what is near you first. It's a full and quite satisfying day.

CN Freight Derailed After Hitting Truck

Truck Driver Killed

By HARRY MULHALL
(Staff Reporter)

A Canadian National local freight line was blocked north of Belleville today after a northbound train plowed into a dump truck, instantly killing its driver.

Victim of the fatal crash — at a level crossing on Thurlow township's fifth concession — was Frederick Patterson, 46, of Brighton.

Provincial police said Mr. Patterson was an employee of McFarland Construction Company, and was hauling a load of sand for a company project in the area.

They were not immediately certain where the truck had been despatched from or where it was bound.

The impact carried his truck 700 feet in front of the locomotive — enroute to Marmoraton Mines at Marmora with 33 empty ore cars. The locomotive ground to a halt after skidding off the rails.

The railroad's chief despatcher's office in Belleville later reported a mobile crane had been ordered out of Toronto to haul the locomotive back on the line.

Meantime, any traffic scheduled for the line would be rerouted through Trenton.

The single line carries the Marmoraton-bound train and a Peterborough freight run daily.

Nonsuch in Picton Reach

17th Century Vessel Sails Quinte Waters

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
(Staff Reporter)

PICTON — Surrounded by a small flotilla of pleasure craft, the Nonsuch, a full-sized replica of the Hudson's Bay Company's first ship, sailed into Picton harbor yesterday afternoon. She will sail into Belleville harbor late Friday afternoon.

The ship's crew fired a salute to announce the arrival of the 53-foot ketch. As the Nonsuch entered harbor, Picton mayor H. J. McFarland joined Capt. Adrian Small on deck to greet a large crowd gathered at the Prince Edward Yacht Club dock. Mayor McFarland went aboard the ship when she hailed near Glenora yesterday afternoon before making her way to Picton harbor. Crew members dressed in sailing uniforms of the 17th century hauled down the ship's sails and brought her to dock at Prince Edward Yacht Club where a second salute was fired.

Built to mark the 300th anniversary of the Hudson's Bay Company, the Nonsuch represents a magnificent representation of the past. Constructed primarily of solid English oak, her keel, however, is English elm. Small quantities of red and yellow pine were also used in her construction. Bright yellow carvings of lion masks, two life-size crouching dogs, infant cupids amid foliage, and a number of nude female figures decorate the graceful ketch. Carved by Jack Whitehead, a 56-year-old artist from the Isle of Wight, these detailed figures symbolize the romance of the sea. According to an old maritime superstition, a woman, by disrobing, could calm the stormiest of seas. For this reason expertly carved nude figures protect the Nonsuch on her voyages.

Labor Act Changes Opposed

One-day Ontario-wide Strike Urged

TORONTO (CP) — The secretary of the Building and Construction Trades Council of Ontario called Wednesday for a province-wide, one-day strike by construction unions to protest proposed amendments to the Labor Relations Act.

Henry Kobryn of Windsor said the council's 12-man board unanimously endorsed such a strike at a meeting here Tuesday night.

Mr. Kobryn said the one-day, general strike would follow a series of rotating one-day strikes in every major Ontario city.

He said the first of the strikes and study sessions on the proposed amendments are set July 31 in London and Windsor and will involve more than 7,000 workers. He did not specify the date of the province-wide strike, which would involve 80,000 men.

Mr. Kobryn said a march and demonstration by construction workers would be held on the day of the mass walkout.

Labor Minister Dahlin Bales refused comment on the strike "at this stage."

Mr. Bales announced major changes in the Labor Relations Act last month, which are to become law soon after the legislature resumes in October.

"The minister claims there is chaos in the construction industry," Mr. Kobryn said in an interview. "Well, there'll be even more chaos the way it looks now."

He said the proposed amendments would let contractors form associations that could enforce area-wide "lockouts."

The changes also would give the Ontario Labor Relations Board wider powers to intervene in jurisdictional disputes between construction unions and to proclaim cease-and-desist orders to stop organizational picketing.

Threatening illegal strikes would be outlawed, and union

Rents to Be Subsidized

TORONTO (CP) — The federal and provincial governments will subsidize rentals in private buildings for families on the waiting list for public housing, Stanley Randall, Ontario minister of trade and development, said Wednesday.

Mr. Randall, minister responsible for the Ontario Housing Corp., said the corporation made the decision after the federal government said it would pay half the cost.

Debris Found

NEW YORK (CP) — The fate of a giant Soviet transport plane remained concealed in the expanses of icy ocean somewhere off Greenland today, despite the discovery of a liferaft and scattered debris and the monitoring by Soviet ships.

It has been missing since last Saturday on a flight to Peru with relief supplies for victims of May's disastrous earthquake.

Greece May Bar Arabs

ATHENS (CP) — Greece is reported today to have warned Arab ambassadors that all Arabs will be expelled and barred from the country if Arab commandos stage any more terrorist attacks on Israeli property in Greece.

Word of the get-tough policy came within hours of a hijacking drama Wednesday in which six Arab commandos seized a Greek Olympic Airways Boeing 727 jetliner and its 47 passengers here to secure the freedom of seven colleagues held for acts of sabotage in Greece.

The hijacking of the airliner ended with the arrival of the hijackers in Cairo, the safe return of the plane and its crew to Athens early today, and a promise of freedom for seven Arab terrorists held in Greece.

Compulsion Suspended

Three-way Agreement Reached for Settlement of B.C. Strike

VICTORIA (CP) — A blueprint for non-compulsory settlement of British Columbia's three-month construction industry dispute was hammered out Wednesday, and labor immediately hailed the agreement as a victory over management and the provincial government.

Labor Minister Leslie Peterson, six construction unions and the Construction Labor Relations Association, which bargains for 560 contractors, met for eight hours and then signed a joint statement of agreement that included the following terms:

—The unions agree to recommend to their members that they return to work no later than Monday at 8 a.m., and the CLRA undertakes to resume normal operations of the construction industry.

—The dispute over wages, which has led to a tie-up of construction since mid-April, is to be submitted to a third party to be mutually selected by the CLRA and the unions;

—If the two sides cannot agree on a mediator within three days, deputy Labor Minister William Sands will be the mediator;

—The recommendations of the mediator shall be submitted to both sides within seven days of his appointment, and the recommendations will then go to union membership and CLRA employers;

—Proceedings before the B.C. Mediation Commission, ordered last Saturday by the provincial cabinet to bring a compulsory end to the dispute that left 30 construction unions, are postponed indefinitely. They will not be reinstated "except on the recommendation of the minister of labor after consultation with the parties."

Lorne Robson of the carpenters union, spokesman for the union delegates taking part in Wednesday's talks, said:

"The principal feature is the lifting of the compulsion on us. On that basis, we find this proposition acceptable. Our committee is recommending this proposal to the memberships of the unions and we will be holding meetings of all locals as quickly as possible."

C. J. Conaghan, president of CLRA said:

"I can say that the contractors endorse the position outlined by the minister, and we will adhere to the agreement made today. . . . We hope this agreement will allow us to make collective bargaining covering the next two years or whatever periods are involved."

In a later statement, Mr. Conaghan emphasized "we're a long way from settlement yet. We still have a big job ahead of us to reach agreements with these unions."

"We expect to discuss with the unions at once who the possible candidates might be for the job of mediating this dispute."

"All the offers we've made in the past still stand—a minimum of seven per cent per year to any union, along with further catch-up increases for some unions. The carpenters and bricklayers, for example, have fallen behind some of the other unions and we've offered them increases of about 24 per cent."

Hourly wages in the construction industry now range from $8.07, for laborers, to a high of $8.80 in 1971 under a negotiated bargaining contract by electricians. Laborers are among those unions yet to sign new contracts.

Mr. Peterson, at a news conference, was asked if the agreement is call off compulsory had come because of union defiance of the cabinet's back-to-work order.

"Not at all," he said. "This is a postponement of the proceedings for an indefinite period with a hope that they don't have to be reinstated. I would hope the procedures we have agreed to today will settle the dispute and the order won't have to be operative."

The provincial government last Saturday invoked two sections of the controversial Mediation Act, introduced in the legislature in 1968 as bill 33, giving construction workers until last Monday to return to work under threat of fines, and ordering the dispute to binding arbitration. Some workers went back but many of the 25,000 involved refused, claiming they would not work without contracts.

The men had been locked out since April 14, but the lockout by the CLRA was lifted July 13 at the request of Mr. Peterson.

Tidbits of History In Old Newspaper

Rural auctions and the sale of long-used household effects sometimes turn up more than antique furniture.

Sometimes they also serve to recall some interesting items of local and national history that may have been quite forgotten.

Such was the case at a recent auction in Prince Edward County where a would-be buyer retrieved an old edition of the Daily Ontario dated May 10, 1928.

Air travel at this period of the "roaring twenties" was still relatively new and the eight-page newspaper carried no less than five stories on flying, one of which suggested that Belleville might soon become one of the main stops on a new transcontinental airway soon to be established.

The reference to Belleville being made a stop on transcontinental route was made by the Leavens brothers of Belleville who, at the time were barnstorming Prince Edward Field west of the city.

It was just a year after Charles Lindbergh made the first solo flight across the Atlantic and other fliers were still emulating his record.

The old newspaper referred to a Brazilian airforce commander who hoped to fly from Berlin to New York and also to a Germanic plane which had landed on Greenley Island after an east to west crossing with three flyers aboard.

Other items in the 1928 paper noted that the razing of the old Windsor Hotel at the corner of Bridge and Coleman Streets was under way to make way for a British American gasoline station site that is now causing factory was under construction on Albion Street.

The Bud Cross outpost hospital at Coe Hill was looking for a resident doctor and the Loblaw store on Front Street, opened only a few months previously, was getting a new manager.

Ads a big disappointment to both young and old circus fans — Ringling Bros. Circus had announced that it was passing up Belleville that year as a stop on its summer swing through the north.

Kinder Swimmers

Participants in the Belleville Family YMCA's Kinder-Kamp program finished off yesterday's activities with a supervised diving lesson in the Y's indoor pool. Kinder-Kamp is for children aged five through seven years; it operates on a weekly basis, affording the children full afternoons of organized recreation. The program is open to non-Y members and, like all Y activities, is free to those who cannot afford to pay.

No Hitches Expected In Bayside Approval

Application was made to the Department of Education by the Hastings County Board of Education on Tuesday for project approval on the new Bayside composite secondary school.

Total cost of the new school is anticipated to be $4,987,235. This amount coincides with the capital fund available.

The possibility was established at the board meeting on July 20 that this amount may be increased so that certain extras may be added.

However, project approval is only being sought for a new school, the cost of which is in line with the money available.

Board superintendent L. A. Kells reported this morning that he does "not expect any hitches", and that "approval should not take too long".

With approval of the project, Konvey Construction of Markham will have the go-ahead to build the new complex.

The Hastings Board may then open negotiations at Queen's Park for approval to add extras to the school; extras that some parties consider vital.

Key to this projected two-step fiscal approach is the board's desire to get construction started without being held up in negotiation.

Konvey Construction stated in its bid offer that it would complete the new secondary school by December 1971. Certain board members sought a Hawley of Konvey to have part of the school in operation by September 1971. He agreed.

The board will be able to negotiate for a supplement to cover additional features, while construction of the 1,200 student school is being built. Irving Bolgon, architect for the complex, told board members on Monday that "the building is fairly lean as it is".

Roy Stevenson Elected Director

Roy Stevenson, President of Stevenson Ford Sales, Belleville, was recently elected to the Board of Directors of the Automobile Dealer Associations of Ontario for the 1970-71 season.

Past president of the Belleville Automobile Dealers Association and a member of the Belleville Gideon Camp, Mr. Stevenson has had 16 years of automotive experience, six of these with his Belleville franchise.

His community service also entails sponsorship of a junior hockey team and a junior ball team. Also, he supplies cars to three secondary schools for driver education.

Captain Small Fits His Role

PICTON (Staff) — Worn by most men, the romantic costume of a 19th century sea captain would seem "stagey" to the crowds waiting at Picton to glimpse the Nonsuch.

Donned by Captain Adrian Small, the uniform of full-sleeved cotton shirt, woolen breeks, and planned hat brings history alive.

A sailor since he was a lad of 17, Captain Small, now 41 years old, walks the deck of his ship with the authoritative stride of Captain Ahab or Long John Silver.

A muscular man of medium height, he looks to sea with penetrating blue eyes; that seem continually alert. His red beard, streaked by the sun, prompts the image of a Viking sailor pioneering a new world with all his faith resting in his ship and her crew.

A man with humor in his eyes, Capt. Small cheerfully traded hats with Mayor H. J. McFarland yesterday noon after they greeted one another aboard the Nonsuch. At last evening's welcoming dinner at Prince Edward Yacht Club, Capt. Small gave Mayor McFarland a chain of office for the evening and joked about being "mayor for a night."

During the evening Capt. Small spoke enthusiastically of the anniversary voyage of the Nonsuch and mentioned his pleasure in attending last weekend's Marine Service at South Bay. Watching and listening to this sea captain it is relatively easy to forget that, indeed, he is not the original captain of the first Nonsuch, the Hudson's Bay Company vessel that pioneered trading in western Canada.

Nonsuch Arrives

Shortly after the docking of the Nonsuch yesterday, crew members began to unload gang plank and permitted onlookers to board ship for a conducted tour. Most of the members of the boarding party were primarily interested in "going below" to see the living quarters of the ketch. A narrow set of stairs leads from the deck to the crew's quarters where narrow beds are built against the wall. A compact and modern galley represents one of the few concessions to the 20th century made by the Nonsuch.

Observed one crew member, "It's always the case when people come aboard. Everyone wants to see below but no one pays any attention to the rigging." He pointed to a tangle of ropes incomprehensible to the landlubber and noted peculiar beauty.

Last night Captain Adrian Small and his crew were guests at a welcoming dinner at Prince Edward Yacht Club attended by town and county councillors, representatives of the Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce and several special guests. Seated at the head table were county warden Gordon Lloyd, Mayor H. J. McFarland, Commodore of Prince Edward Yacht Club Karl Euler, George Hees, MP for Prince Edward-Hastings, president of the Prince Edward chamber of commerce Jack Purdon, Laird Rankin, public relations officer for the Hudson's Bay Company and Capt. Adrian Small. Also joining the head table guests was the high commissioner of Jamaica, R. S. Dunkley, who is paying an unofficial visit to the country.

Capt. Small was presented with a Prince Edward Yacht Club pennant by Commodore Karl Euler. On behalf of Prince Edward County, warden Gordon Lloyd gave Capt. Small and each of his crew members a copy of The County, a centennial publication describing 100 years in Prince Edward's history.

As a gift from the Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce Capt. Small was presented with a framed print of the Point Petre lighthouse accompanied by a brief history of this once proud landmark.

Rain Hurts Hay, Wheat

Wet July weather has slowed the Quinte district hay crop and in some instances may have reduced the quality as a result of over maturity.

"The rain has been rough on the hay crop" assistant agricultural representative Wayne Mowbray, (Bonnie) Mrs. William Barnwell, (Eldora) Mrs. Sidney Shatraw all of Deseronto and Louie at home.

The deceased was a sister of William Maracle of Deseronto, Franklin of Syracuse, NY, Lawrence of Shannonville, Mrs. Nellie Brant of Saskatchewan and Mrs. Ada Dorcen of Burlington.

This year's Gemboree is again being held at the mineral society's 20 - acre headquarters on the Baptiste Road five miles north of Bancroft.

Opening day on Wednesday Aug. 5 has been designated as rockhounds' day. Thursday is children's day with special attractions planned for the kiddies.

Entertainment attraction for the final two days will be the Cross Country Jamboree featuring Miss Lynn Jones, Bancroft's own TV star, the Post family of Cloyne and many others.

There will be rock swapping at the tables each day of the Gemboree with field trips for the rockhounds leaving the grounds clubhouse at 9 a.m. Thursday through Saturday. There will be a evening carnival each day of the event.

Approximately 30 rock dealers will be on hand to display their wares with an equal number of exhibitors already entered in the commercial section.

Mineral Club president Carl Bezak is again optimistic about the success of the event which each year has been attracting larger and larger crowds.

"We call it the Bancroft Gemboree, but actually it has an interest for everyone," noted Mr. Bezak. "The handicraft and other sections of the Gemboree are growing each year."

Medical Needs

Seen as a potentially valuable aid to medical services here is the home care program being planned in the Belleville area. Not only will it take pressure off the hospital but it could be the forerunner of a total care program. Quinte MPP Dr. Richard Potter is hoping that with this new facility, plus a chronic-care unit later, Belleville could be the choice for a government-backed pilot program of total care.

Home-care meanwhile will ease the hospital load — at least when government spending on hospital facilities generally is being curtailed.

Consider for example the pressure on hospitals beds in a city like Toronto. The administration of Doctors Hospital, a former private institution on Brunswick north of Bloor, is trying to cut down on the number of patients occupying the 332 beds as say one thing. Not, as administrator Stanley Johnston points out, by turning down emergency cases but by slowing down the admittance of elective patients — patients who have a long-standing problem and finally decide to have it fixed.

Mr. Johnston is a former administrator of Belleville General Hospital and he discussed the problems of Doctors hospital recently with Warren Gerrard of The Globe and Mail. "It was like buying a used car," said Mr. Johnston of the purchase of the hospital by the Ontario Hospital Services Commission.

Much remains to be done at Doctors according to Mr. Johnson. He sees a greater emphasis in the future on ambulatory patients, and as an area heavily populated by immigrants there is the problem of reaching out to the community. One suggestion is the establishment of store-front clinics, which would be manned by hospital staff (themselves representative of many nations) primarily as an educational program.

Thus it may be seen that hospitals, to function with maximum efficiency must not only be streamlined, to use an old-fashioned term, but must also have the kind of support facilities which Belleville is now on the verge of, and which an aging institution (constructed 90 years ago with additional space provided since) in Toronto is also contemplating. Where Belleville is concerned, a total care program would be a logical step in the wake of home care. It is the kind of additional facility which communities throughout Canada will need as time goes on.

Status of Women

This business about the status of women, well we recall there was a Royal Commission looking into the subject — but we have been thinking they had better hurry up and release their report or it will be outdated. The way women are stepping into former male preserves it will be the men who may start crying, "discrimination."

There is the teenage lass for example whose picture we saw at a construction site. And what was she doing? Why, directing the traffic, that's what.

And in Kitchener there is a pair of pleasant-looking girls attired in mini tennis dresses dyed red and white who are the attraction for motorists at a local service station. Yes they pump gas and check the oil and tires; and, in true service station style they empty ashtrays, clean windshields and even wash it. But no grease jobs or changing of tires — got to draw the line somewhere when you are as well-groomed and pretty as Marion Brendgmehl, 18, and Debbie Cronin, 17 (she is from neighboring Waterloo).

Not surprisingly, the station boss says business has gone up steadily since the girls have been there. Marion wants to go and Debbie will be attending nursing school in Guelph in the fall.

Also demonstrating their ability in a male sphere — and this one is intellectual — are five women scientists engaged in a program of underwater research in the Caribbean. They range in age from 23 to 34 and one, Dr. Renate Kinzie, from 33, is a native of Brazil who holds a doctorate in biological oceanography and teaches at Tulane University in New Orleans. Another is Alina Szmant who at 23 holds a master's degree in marine biology and a third is Margaret Ann Lucas, also 23, who is an electrical engineer studying for a master's degree in "ocean engineering."

We did not know there was such a thing as ocean engineering but if a fellow (or gal) is interested, the University of Delaware boasts such a facility.

Which goes to prove that if all men are created equal, some (men and women) are more equal, not to mention brainy, in their respective spheres, than others. So, happy diving girls! They are spending their time, by the way in a capsule 50 feet below the surface.

And hurry up commissioners with that report on the status of women!

How Russians Got A New Embassy

Ottawa Tourist Guides Play It Both Straight and Comic

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Now in high summer, except for the occasional work-ordained MP driven by conscience, perhaps, and the crush of constituency correspondence, Parliament Hill and the federal Capital are left to the pigeons and the tourists.

Of which there is no shortage, either unless you're in the holiday peak-will number some three quarter million, or pigeons inhabiting Parliament's commons heads and shoulders of long-gone, short — remembered politicians of yesteryear.

It is understandable to see spot-skirted Americans and their jump-suited wives perching, pointed at the unfamiliar names on the plaques of statues outside on the lawns, and larger - than - life portraits in oils inside on the walls of these corridors of power.

But it seems strange, and perhaps tattles an unwelcome tale of the marching years, to watch touring Canadian students agonizing in equal uncomprehension of Mackenzie King, Prime Minister for so long only four governments ago.

In they file, American and Canadian, all 750,000 or more of them, through the Main Entrance of the Centre Block, into the Hall of Fame, to make the guided tour of the monumented years of Confederation's political history.

The escorted inspection of the halls, corridors, chambers, chapels and the Peace Tower is all very straight forward, verging on the scholarly, with university students doing the honors.

More fun, and perhaps a better insight into your National Capital, comes off Parliament Hill with the guided bus tour of the miles of landscaped federal parkways.

It is all very informal. And informative.

"Welcome, taxpayers, to the city into which your loot is poured," grins the bus driver into his mike as you climb aboard.

"Feel at home, please; you own a piece of the real estate. Maybe if we're lucky we'll get to catch a glimpse of that old pipe-smoker Edgar Benson, the Finance Minister who persuades you to invest annually in the development and beautification of the place and the glory of the government.

"We start our tour from Confusion Square. It used to be called Confederation Square, but both Confederation and Confusion Square got a little mixed up.

"On your right, the Rideau Canal, designed and built by Colonel John By, a British Army engineer, after the war of 1812-14 with the Americans. The canal was a military project, part of a defence system planned in those years to stop the United States taking over Canada.

"But that was before the age of American tourism and investment in Canada, and so now, you Yanks, you share, along with the Canadian taxpayers, a piece of the action."

(This style of wry political commentary is not unusual in the National Capital, not even for tour bus drivers.

(Everybody does it, including entertainers in the night spots. In fact, one performer, a favorite at the Chaudiere Lantern, the city's oldest and most elegant hotel, hosted his wit to such a razor edge the management asked him to blunt it a bit after receiving complaints from politicians, a couple of them cabinet ministers.

(He was quite cutting, to be sure — he had to be, to get through those thick political skins.)

"You'll notice," chirps one the driver, "a note of upward gaiety up on your left. That's your new Place de Ville.

"No, madame, that is not part of the excavation there in the middle of the street — it's just a middle-aged pothole. The bigger ones we export as gravel pits.

"Coming up on the left is Earnscliffe, once the home of Canada's first Prime Minister, Sir John A. Macdonald, where now the British High Commissioner lives and watches the Royal Mint just across the street.

"Further along is the French Embassy, right next door to Pierre's pad where the Prime Minister entertains Barbra Streisand weekends. Which is maybe one of the reasons the signs on the gates say 'Private' and mean it — just ask the Mounties.

"Across the street from Pierre's place is Rolly's ranch, all 16 manicured acres of it, where the Governor General, Roland Michener, goes jogging every morning.

"You can go in his front door, when we stop for a look-see, and you may sign the guest book just inside the entrance — but don't expect to be asked to stop for tea.

"Around the corner on the left is the new Russian Embassy. They left the old one here down when they wouldn't allow the Ottawa Fire Department to enter the grounds to fight the blaze.

"They explained to the Mounties hamstringing on the locked wrought-iron gates that they had turned in the alarm to the Moscow Fire Brigade which was more efficient than our decadent democratic department.

"Now as we return to our starting point just below Parliament Hill, you'll notice, on your left, Lisgar Collegiate, Ottawa's oldest high school. It's so old that former students say there as a boy. They say he tied his horse to that tree over there."

TODAY IN HISTORY

The Lachine canal, Canada's first step towards opening the Great Lakes for salt-water ships, was completed 150 years ago today — in 1825—after four years of work. The canal, bypassing the rapids near Montreal, was first planned in 1709 by the French. A shallow canal was dug at Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., in 1798 and in 1841, just after the union of Upper and Lower Canada, the Welland canal bypassing Niagara Falls was modernized. By 1855, ships drawing 11 feet of water could move from the sea to Lake Superior.

1945—France's hero of the First World War, Marshal Petain, went on trial as a traitor to France in the Second World War.

1962—A three-week partial suspension of service by Saskatchewan doctors was against the introduction of a government-run medical insurance plan ended.

Second World War

Twenty-five years ago today—in 1945—an Allied Pacific fleet in Tokyo's outer bay wrecked a four-ship convoy; all 4,545 supporters were sentenced to death and four to life imprisonment for the murder of two police officers during an outbreak in Athens six months earlier.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

July 23, 1950

The residents of Belleville, through Mayor H. J. Allin, have been tendered an official thanks for their contributions to the Manitoba Flood Relief Fund in a letter from H. W. Manning, general chairman of the fund.

Mayor Jack A. Allin and Frank Follwell, MP, Hastings South, were out of the city today and could not be reached for tributes to the late Rt. Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie King, former Prime Minister of Canada, who died on Saturday.

Mayor H. J. Allin is taking a week's holiday in Northern Ontario during which time he will stop off at the recently opened Dee Lochsins power plant on the Ottawa River. During the mayor's absence from the city, Alderman A. Mc-Lean Haig, chairman of finance, will be acting mayor.

30 YEARS AGO

July 23, 1940

The last of the wooden sidewalks remaining in the city, with the exception of one stretch of approximately one hundred feet on Brock St. was torn up when it was decided that the wooden walk running up the hill past the Corby Library on Campbell St. had outserved its usefulness and will be replaced by a modern concrete walk.

Gwendolyn Ervine has returned home after spending two weeks in Toronto with friends.

Mrs. Woodman Thomas, and Homer Thomas spent the week-end in Kingston, the guests of the brother of the former, the Rev. F. W. White and Mrs. White.

40 YEARS AGO

Mrs. Roy Benson, of Detroit is the guest of Mrs. F. S. Robinson, Chatham St.

W. H. Faulkner, Cedar St. and E. M. Hubbs, Howard St. have returned home after spending two days fishing at Weslemkoon Lake.

Margaret Cannon has returned home after spending two weeks with friends in Cobalt.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry McConnell and son of Detroit are visiting friends here.

Belleville old boys and girls are here to celebrate old times. While the celebration of Old Boys' and Girls' Reunion — which is the third ruch event — begins officially tomorrow, old boys and girls have been arriving from every direction during the past week, and the indications are that a large crowd will be present to live over again old times in the beautiful city of the bay.

Fight Against Pollution

The Trentonian

We can and should set time limits for existing sources of pollution to be cleared up. Such time limits must take into account ability to pay, the time it takes to put in the equipment, and the time before the pollution becomes dangerous. The time should obviously be as short as possible.

Laws can and must be passed to correct pollution creating machinery at the source. Phosphate is one case in which government action is clearly going to have to be taken. Known causes of pollution problems must be tackled by legislation laying down requirements.

We cannot take the view that things are so bad that we can not do anything. We must act, not with hysteria, but with long range determination. We must the law allow anybody to be an exception, no matter how big the organization affected by the laws.

Afro-Asians Oppose Arms Sale

'No' to Apartheid—But What About Infiltration by Reds?

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — It is not much of an exaggeration to say that even if Britain decided to sell peppers to the South African navy there would be a storm of protest from Afro-Asian governments.

For, to these former colonies, any move to strengthen the South African armed forces is nothing more than acceptance of the government's policy of racial separation—apartheid.

And for them, South Africa and apartheid are the embodiment of all the evils of colonialism, neo-colonialism, racism and imperialism.

They regard the main job of the UN to be the overcoming of the white-supremacist regimes of South Africa and Rhodesia and the white domination of South-West Africa and the African colonies of Portugal.

Scant wonder then that the British announcement of this week that it is considering selling some arms to South Africa for defence of the sea lanes around the Cape of Good Hope was greeted with hostility.

The announcement was discounted by many governments even before it was made. It was condemned shortly after it was given in the House of Commons.

In the words of Ghanaian Ambassador Richard Akwei, prevailing any hardware to South Africa—no matter how slight or specialized—would be "vindication of apartheid."

He used the same argument in an interview when criticizing Canada's undertaking to provide spare parts for equipment supplied to South Africa before 1963.

"It is a matter of principle," he said.

Apartheid is an overriding concern of the governments of former colonies everywhere. Because of it people who have difficulty getting along with one another can unite in a common cause.

It matters not that the Bantus of South Africa have one of the best standards of living in Africa; that South Africa gives aid to some African countries; that some black economies are dependent on South African trade or revenue earned by South Africa, or that racialism is rampant elsewhere on the continent, with black against black or brown or white.

Apartheid is the symbol of the worst kind of privilege, and that is the essential point.

If Prime Minister Heath decides to sell British naval equipment to South Africa, thus violating the spirit of UN resolutions of 1963 and 1964, he will be weakening the only concrete action that the UN has been able to take against the Pretoria government.

The action will be a disheartening reversal of years of Afro-Asian attempts to isolate the government.

Africans are not impressed with arguments that armaments are sold to South Africa on condition that they are not used to enforce apartheid.

They say that not only does the sale of arms involve acceptance of apartheid, it ignores the fact that arms purchased under those restrictions free arms acquired elsewhere or manufactured at home to be used against the blacks.

This fear has been the complaint about the supply of NATO arms to Portugal. These arms must not be used in the African colonies But the fact that Portugal gets these weapons for use in her NATO commitments, frees other arms for use in the colonies.

On the British and South African government side there is serious concern over the growth of the Soviet naval presence in the Indian Ocean.

British Foreign Secretary Sir Alec Douglas-Home indicated this in his statement in Parliament.

A senior South African naval officer made the same point recently but he brought other points in as well.

Many new countries have come into being, he said in Cape Town, providing more opportunities for the Kremlin of sea power for subversive purposes.

He mentioned that four Soviet ships recently visited Somalia, Aden now has a Russian harbor master, the Communist Chinese are building a naval base in Tanzania.

Another angle was given Monday in an editorial in the London Times.

"What the South Africans really want more than British hardware is the encouragement of support and respect," it said.

Disease Biggest Problem

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — Poverty, ignorance, disease.

These were the enemies the emerging nations of black Africa faced 10 years ago as the European colonial powers loosened their hold on the continent.

How are they meeting the challenge ...

Statistics on the continent as a whole are hard to come by, but those available show that the principal enemies are still poverty, ignorance and disease.

Disease cripples and enfeebles millions of people. More than half the adult Africans and almost all children over three years of age are infected with malaria. The World Health Organization, in reporting this, calls it "the most serious problem facing Africa."

Between a third and a half of all children die before reaching five. Statisticians say the life expectancy of a person born in the mountains of North Cameroon is 12 years. Measles, the health group reports, kills 15,000 children under 15 in Niger every year. More than 18,000 cases of louse-borne typhus and 200 deaths were recorded in Burundi last year.

Half the 20,000,000 citizens of the Congo-Kinshasa—were vaccinated for smallpox in 1967-69 but more than 300 cases were reported there this March. The disease claims between 15,000 and 25,000 African victims every year.

Africa has an estimated 4,000,000 people suffering from leprosy, less than half of whom are registered and only 27 per cent under treatment. Despite scores of projects by the health organization, schistosomiasis, a debilitating disease spread by water snails, onchocerciasis, river blindness, transmitted by black flies, sleeping sickness spread by the tse-tse fly, tuberculosis, poliomyelitis, the plague, yellow fever and, particularly, intestinal infections scourge the Africans year after year.

Millions of people do not brush up against the money economy at all. They live on what they can grow, hunt or barter. They may be better off than the African who tries to break out into the urban world of wages, rent, store food and shack living. Unless he has an education he will be up against the same old barriers erected by the colonial rulers.

The servant who cleaned the colonial master's house, took care of his garden and served his meals is still earning $5 a week or thereabouts, although his master now may be black.

The minimum wage in Dar es Salaam, under what is regarded as the most liberal system of African socialism on the continent, is $25 a month.

Freedom brought the promise of education. Parents wanted their children to go to school.

In the first five years of independence, according to figures of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, enrolment in primary schools of middle Africa jumped to 15,000,000 from 11,000,000. Enrolment in secondary schools doubled to 1,282,000.

New governments could not provide the classrooms to handle the rush of children. Classes were held under trees, in mud-walled buildings with thatched roofs, anywhere a teacher could be found. The demand has not been met and the dropout rate has been discouraging.

It is estimated that in Africa as a whole, 53 per cent of the 5-14 age group is enrolled in primary schools, eight per cent of the 15-19 age group in secondary schools.

Robert K. A. Gardner, executive secretary of the Economic Commission for Africa here, reported recently that the per capita income in 11 African countries was between $300 and $400 a year. In 13 countries it was $100 to $200 and in 17 countries, holding about half of Africa's population of 345,000,000, it was less than $100 a year.

The independence fever which seized Africa 10 years ago gave people a barely recognizable concept. About 90 per cent of them were illiterate.

Black doctors, lawyers, engineers, economists, administrators were rare personalities in colonial Africa. Many of Africa's present leaders had received their early education in mission schools which could handle a limited number of children. At the present rate of growth, 2.5 per cent, the population of the continent doubles every 30 years.

Universities have been expanded and new ones established. In 1960 middle Africa, below the Sahara and north of South Africa, had 19. There now are 26 with some 50,000 students enrolled.

But a university degree is not always the greatest contribution an African can make to the advancement of his country.

Africa's economy is predominantly agricultural, although most leaders look forward wistfully to industrial expansion. They and responsible educationists complain that too many students are trying for degrees in law, the humanities and social sciences which would fit them for political or civil service roles.

"The subjects they are taking are not relevant to what the government wants," said S. A. A. Djoleto of the Ghana ministry of education. "The question is whether you should train for the economic sector or to improve your mind. These boys don't want to go to the rural areas. They are too comfortable where they are. We must gear courses toward manpower requirements."

Breaking Glass Leads to Arrest

Belleville City Police have arrested David Michael Laboucier, 21, of RR1, Carrying Place and charged him with breaking, entering and theft. The arrest was made at 2.50 this morning.

Deputy Police Chief Harold Reid said a man was found in a dwelling at 79 Holloway Street when a neighbor phoned in that breaking glass was heard.

Police entered the residence owned by William Keast who was away on vacation, and discovered the intruder.

Entrance had been gained by breaking a kitchen window.

Mr. Reid commented on the usefulness of the involved citizen concerning the incident.

"Citizens can be a real help," he said. "When they see or hear anything suspicious it only takes a phone call. That's what we're here for."

Charged with Arson

This store, on the corner of Charles and Victoria Avenues was the scene of a fire reported at 9.40 p.m. Monday which led to the arrest of it's proprietor, Gus Angelotis, 29, of 23 Bridge Street W. on a charge of arson. Investigations by city police and fire department, together with the Ontario Fire Marshall's Department led to the arrest yesterday afternoon. Angelotis, released on $500 cash bail following his arrest, appeared this morning in court to be charged. He is also the proprietor of M and M restaurant, 23 Bridge St. West.

Pioneers Picnic

Co-hosts at the 4th Annual International Picnic of the Telephone Pioneers of America were the newly formed Mohawk-Loyalist Council last Saturday, at the park on Wellesley Island in the Thousand Islands.

More than 700 Pioneers, their families and friends met with their hosts from Watertown and Potsdam, New York. Pioneers from Ottawa, Cornwall, Montreal and Belleville were among the participants.

The Mohawk-Loyalist Council stretches from Brighton to Cardinal and north to Bancroft and south to include Prince Edward County.

The Canadian Committee was under the direction of Jim Caines, past president of the Kingston club, assisted by Ivan Gilchrist, president of the Kingston club, W. E. Latham, president of the Brockville club, Vic Allen, past president of the Belleville club and vice-president of the MLC; Leo Logue, president of the Mohawk Council, Belleville and Harris Bradley of the J. E. MacPherson Council, Ottawa.

Three one-hour boat trips by chartered boat through the islands was the highlight of the day.

Local Pioneers and families included Leo and Sylvia Logue, Lois and Doug Rollins and Kerry, Jean Scott, Bud Jokes, Alex Pierson, and Mr. and Mrs. Earl Wannamaker.

Executive members of the Mohawk-Loyalist Council, with headquarters in Belleville, were indentifiable by the headband and single feather they wore. Leo Logue sported a headdress of eight feathers.

The next Telephone Pioneer activity will b a Steak-Out in Kingston in August, to be sponsored by the Kingston Club.

A local freight train also runs to Bancroft each Monday and Thursday, returning the following day.

The CN despatcher's office said the train left the Belleville yards at 7.50 a.m. — about 10 minutes before the fatal mishap.

A CN official at the scene estimated the empty freight would have been travelling at 30-35 miles an hour when the accident occurred.

Scene of the mishap was immediately west of Foxboro Cheese Factory, on a surfaced stretch of the concession road linking Highway 37 with Foxboro over the Moira River.

The township and railroad have been negotiating on installation of automatic warning signals at the crossing, township clerk-treasurer Claire Horton said today.

Installation of the signals was approved May 25 by the Railway Transport Committee of the Canadian Transportation Commission, said Mr. Horton.

The township and the railroad would share the cost of the installation.

A CN spokesman said the commission's order is that the installation be completed before Nov. 27 of this year.

Police Urged to Use 'Persuasion', Not Force

MONTREAL (CP) — Police who have been urged at a convention here to become more militant in defence of law and order were labelled in final sessions Wednesday to use "persuasion" and the ballot box to solve their problems.

Delegates from 133 North American police associations representing more than 125,000 policemen at the 18th annual International Conference of Police Associations here passed a resolution demanding immediate government action against police killers. They warned that police would "deal with their assailants directly" or withdraw their services if no action was taken.

Another resolution urged member associations to seek the right to strike.

But George Springate, former Montreal police officer and a Liberal member of the Quebec national assembly now, told delegates to stay on the job and face reality.

He said solutions will not be found by "on-the-street justice" bill in education, public relations and the "greatest weapon" —elections.

Delegates angered by the auger slayings of ten Chicago policemen Friday night unanimously passed the resolution urging government action. But Mr. Springate described the conference reaction as "walking away from reality."

Insp. Leo Plouffe of the Montreal police department said police can meet successfully the challenges of society if they make use of publicity and technology in the same way that legislators do.

"Persuasion has been the most efficient method used by those who change our laws and it should become our method also.

Insp. Plouffe told the delegates that police should respect the law but also communicate their opinions "on the possible dangers of this or that measure" to legislators.

Carl Parnell, newly-elected president of ICPA, said U.S. police will campaign to remove "incompetent and incapable" judges.

Patrolman Parnell, a 23-year veteran of the Detroit police department, said:

"We will throw our weight behind candidates who stand for law and order at all times, not just when voting time approaches."

Mr. Parnell told delegates Wednesday how they could frustrate federal U.S. investigations into police conduct during racial disorders.

He said police officers have to ask only three questions when FBI task forces "are sent around to try and indict us for doing our jobs:

"Am I being charged? They'll say no.

"Can I see a lawyer? Of course you can, the agent will say, but . . .

"Do I have to answer any questions? The answer will be no."

He said the method worked successfully during an investigation in Detroit which was eventually dropped.

Insp. Plouffe indicated he thinks one of the major problems facing law enforcement officers in Quebec is going to disappear.

"I believe that the pendulum (of violence) is gradually swinging away.

"I don't want to delude myself but I see that the young people in Quebec as in the U.S. are turning towards concrete political action in the party of their choice.

"It's a very good thing. They will support a candidate who represents their option and the terrorists will become a tiny minority again."

Mr. Springate said police have a natural tendency to regard all "out" groups as potential "attackers or outright enemies."

"Society has backed you into a corner and you, in turn, have built a wall around yourselves for self-protection."

He said:

"Lines of meaningful communications and understanding must be opened."

'Bonny Strictly Scrap' — Expert

VANCOUVER (CP) — Anyone who buys the Canadian aircraft carrier Bonaventure and tries to turn it into a convention centre is heading for the financial rocks, says Bill Kennedy, a Vancouver ship broker whose "savvy" over the years has been bigger than Canada's.

Mr. Kennedy, head of N.W. Kennedy Ltd., described by an official of the federal government's Crown assets agency as one of the top ship buyers in the world, said such efforts have a "100-per-cent failure rate."

"Any time anyone has tried to turn a warship into a floating convention centre, hotel, gambling casino or whatever, it has ended not just a failure, but in shocking, unexciting, glorious disaster," he said in an interview Wednesday.

Mr. Kennedy, a Vancouver native who grew up in Australia, said he has been buying and selling ships "all over the world" for 18 years.

Mr. Kennedy admitted he intends to bid on the Bonaventure "strictly for scrap."

He said he was breaking a personal policy to "avoid publicity like the plague" because of what he called "idiot statements" by people saying they plan to buy the Bonaventure.

He cited a statement by a Saskatoon steel company executive that the company would offer $1,000,000 for the Bonaventure "with the possible purpose of turning it into a Vancouver convention centre."

He also described as "idiocy" an earlier statement by Vancouver Mayor Tom Campbell that the city itself might bid for the ship.

"The whole City of Vancouver couldn't pay the price of bringing it here and operating it," said Mr. Kennedy.

Such efforts in the past have run into losses generally 10 times bigger than the profits the promoters forecast, he said. He pointed out that the City of Long Beach, Calif., which bought the liner Queen Mary in 1967 to convert it into a convention centre, hotel and museum had expected the cost to be about $8,000,000. The price tag has reached $20,000,000 and the Queen has not been opened to the public.

Mr. Kennedy said he has bought battleships, battle cruisers, and virtually all other kinds of warships, most of them being sold for scrap, with a few going to other navies.

Among his purchases were eight warships and five passenger liners on which he had originally been outbid. The winning bidders had run into financial trouble and had to sell, he said.

"His 'savvy' over the years has included 18 cruisers, compared with Canada's two. In fact, he said, his purchases had included the two Canadian cruisers, HMCS Ontario and HMCS Quebec.

He also has bought some Canadian-made warships from Britain.

Boys Murder Dog On Rail Tracks

TORONTO (CP) — Police are seeking three boys who held a German shepherd puppy over railway tracks Wednesday until a train cut the animal in two.

A motorist said the boys, aged 11 to 14, kured the four-month-old pup, Dusty, from the yard of Mrs. Arthur Nagle, whose five children owned the animal.

When the boys returned, Mrs. Nagle said she chased them barefoot.

"My feet still look like raw meat because of it. I think I'd have choked them if I caught them."

Mrs. Nagle said she doubts she can afford to buy a new puppy for the children because her husband is in hospital and the family is on welfare.

Government Buys Large Collection

OTTAWA (CP) — The Manoir Richelieu collection, billed as the last important and comprehensive collection of Canadiana held by private interests, has been bought by the government for $675,000, the state secretary's department announced Wednesday.

The collection of paintings, prints and maps, containing about 2,500 items, portrays a visual history of Canadian life, customs and environment during the 17th, 18th and 19th centuries.

It was assembled in the 1920s and '30s by Canada Steamship Co. and later became the property of Warnock Hersey International Ltd. of Montreal, which sold the collection to the government.

The collection, now ensconced in the public archives, has been displayed since its assembly in the Manoir Richelieu hotel at Murray Bay, Que.

Certain items of esthetic merit from the collection will be transferred to the National Gallery.

Fire Threatens Cranes' Nests

CALGARY (CP) — About 110 Canadian Forces troops were sent today to Wood Buffalo National Park where a forest fire is advancing on the nesting grounds of the rare whooping crades.

Early reports indicate about 20,000 acres burning in nine fires in the park, which straddles the Alberta-Northwest Territories border. Five of the fires were out of control.

There was no early indication of how large a fire was advancing on the nesting grounds or its location.

"The fire is rapidly approaching their habitat," a parks branch spokesman said. "We have a critical situation there."

The nesting grounds are in a smaller portion of the 17,300-square-mile park jutting into the N.W.T. near Fort Smith, about 450 miles north of Edmonton.

A biologist from the Canadian Wildlife Service, sent by Dr. A. H. Macpherson of Edmonton, CWS western region director, was en route to the area.

Dr. Macpherson said 30 to 60 adult birds are in the park, plus yearling young and an unknown number hatched this summer.

Dr. Macpherson said in an interview today the fire is within a few miles of the area "which we think are important for nesting.

He said the areas are mostly wet and marshy. And biologists believe the young hatched this year should be mobile enough to escape.

If confirmed, (the fire) is not endangering the area very urgently . . . but we would be very concerned if it got much closer".

Dr. Macpherson said he expected a report today and could better judge the situation then.

He said that if necessary personnel would be sent in to do whatever possible" to protect the birds.

The Canadian Forces Personnel were requested late Wednesday by Ron Mallo of Calgary, west regional director of the National and Historic Parks Branch.

Two Canadian Forces Hercules aircraft were to transport 50 men from the Lower Strath-cona Horse and 60 from the Princess Patricia Canadian Light Infantry and equipment direct to Fort Smith.

Four other Hercules were standing by, two to carry additional equipment, supplies and communications gear.

Mr. Mallo said 25 fires have been fought since early this month in the 17,300-square-mile park, the world's largest national park.

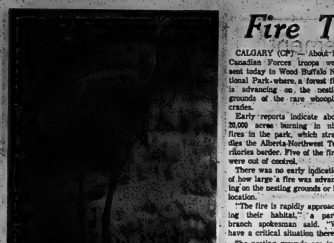
"Fatigue is beginning to show and the number of men available locally is totally inadequate to cope with all the fires that now have to be fought. . . ."

He said the fires are mostly ill smoking and scrub pine. With continued hot weather forecast the situation is considered critical.

He said a third of the national park forest fire force stationed at Banff was to be flown to Fort Smith by commercial aircraft.

"And if the situation . . . deteriorates further additional men from this group will be flown to the park."

Mr. Mallo said that National Parks personnel have already been supplemented for most of the month by firefighters from the Alberta forest service. The provincial group also is plagued with a severe fire hazard in much of northern Alberta's timber country.



There was no indication what action may be possible to protect the whooping cranes, particularly the young, should the fire move into their nesting grounds.

The birds migrate 2,000 miles annually from their wintering area in Aransas Wildlife Refuge to breed in Wood Buffalo Park.

The majestic four-foot white cranes once were officially listed as extinct, a result of a slaughter going back 150 years particularly for their prized plumage.

Fifteen birds were reported in 1963 after their nesting grounds were discovered in the N.W.T.

Canadian and United States law protects the species and both countries have programs attempting to multiply their numbers to several thousand. Total population still is less than 100 birds, 13 of them in captivity.

A Lucky One

The whooping crane is being saved from extinction by the protection of the Canadian and United States governments. Once numbering only 14, the whooping crane population has now risen to 85. Other bird species are not as lucky. The Eskimo curlew, prairie falcon and golden eagle, among others, are in danger of becoming extinct as their populations dwindle. (CP Photo)

Arctic Knowhow Sought by Canada

MOSCOW (AP) — Canada is willing to help the Soviet Union with technology and grain in exchange for Russian knowhow in Arctic development, Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield of Canada said today.

He told a news conference he discussed many areas of possible co-operation with Soviet officials during his five-day visit in Moscow and Leningrad. They included "wild farming," he said.

"The Russians indicated there will be heavy emphasis in their next five-year plan on agriculture. I still cannot understand why they have problems in this area while we in Canada have grain coming out of our ears, but they do have very serious problems. Canada can help.

"But in terms of Arctic development, we can hardly claim to have done as much as the Soviet Union. This is an area where we could learn from the Russians and I emphasize the importance of co-operation."

The Conservative leader said Canadian firms want a piece of the action in developing Soviet mining, timber and other natural resources.

Religious Groups Attack Family Planning Movement

BOMBAY, India (CP) — The family-planning movement has come under attack by religious groups in several Asian countries.

Led by orthodox monks, these groups are trying to press governments into scrapping birth control programs. They argue that birth control is not sanctioned by any religion and that the use of contraceptives amounts to "planned murder."

The campaign has reached its peak in the island state of Ceylon, off the coast of southern India.

Ceylon's health ministry has ordered the suspension of all family planning activities in the country following a threat, by Buddhist monks that they would paralyse all work in the country "if the family planning monster is not banished immediately."

This is a major setback for the Asian birth control movement and its possible repercussions on other countries, particularly on India and Pakistan, are being watched by anxious family planning officials.

The Buddhists in Ceylon have been arguing that besides being "irreligious," the use of contraceptives will turn the country's Buddhist majority into a minority within the next 20 years.

They say that so far only the Buddhists alone have been using contraceptives, while Ceylonese Hindus, Roman Catholics and Moslems have shunned family planning clinics.

Family planning experts say the Buddhists' fears are groundless and that the Buddhist majority cannot be undermined even in a hundred years. Besides, they note that Ceylonese minorities are also adopting contraceptives increasing numbers.

In India, the Jane Sangh, a right-wing Hindu party, is also highly critical of the family planning campaign. It says that since Hindus alone use contraceptives, "they will become a minority before the end of this century."

Government officials say this argument is absurd. They say that while the Hindus number more than 450,000,000, there are fewer than 70,000,000 Moslems.

The religious campaign against family planning has not so far made any significant impact on Indian public opinion. One factor is that unlike in Ceylon, religious groups in India lack a centralized organization.

Islamic priests also are campaigning against birth control in Moslem Pakistan but the government of President Yahya Khan seems to have the upper hand.

Wellesley Hospital Has Rehabilitative Program

TORONTO (CP) — Jimmy, a 12-year-old Toronto youngster, has learned to tell time.

Jimmy is not retarded, but suffers from a medical problem in which messages to the brain are not properly relayed by nerves.

What comes easy to other children is difficult for Jimmy and 32 other youngsters who attend clinics each Saturday at Wellesley Hospital in Toronto. The children range in age from 6 to 14.

Margaret Higgins, occupational therapist working at the hospital's rehabilitative medicine department, said Jimmy at first just could not grasp how a clock could tell time.

But then "something clicked," she said.

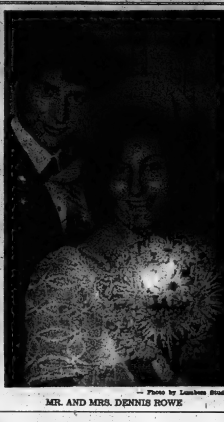
"He just suddenly seemed to catch on." Mrs. Higgins said some of the children being treated are unable to tell that a circle looks different than a square or that a dime is smaller than a quarter.

Others are unable to tell the positions of their limbs and therefore it is difficult for them to catch a ball or skip a rope.

Performing simple tasks is frustrating, and such children seem slow and clumsy. As a result, other children don't want to play with them—adding to their problems.

The rehabilitative program at the hospital was started two years ago. It is headed by Dr. Charles Godfrey, physician in charge of the department of rehabilitative medicine.

Dr. Godfrey's team includes occupational therapists, teachers, a psychologist, a speech therapist and gymnastics specialist.



Dr. Godfrey said he started the program because there are only a few places where children with such difficulties can get the special kind of help they need.

He launched it with the co-operation of the Ontario Hospital Services Commission, which pays the $18,000 annual cost.

Treatment is determined by each child's special needs and tests are used to determine what kind of help and training a child needs.

Dr. Godfrey said part of the program also deals with counselling parents of such children. He said parents often are worried because the children can't perform simple tasks.

Dr. Godfrey said parents should realise that it is more important to have a happy child, "not a mathematical wizard."

Too Young

LONDON (AP) — Suzy Gilbraud wrote British Overseas Airways Corp. that she could speak French and Italian, had logged 25,000 air miles, had first-aid training and could serve meals, and so wanted a job as a stewardess.

But Suzy added that she did not qualify yet, "because I am only nine years old."

Princeton Men Study Women

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — College men have been studying women for years, but at Princeton University they do it for credit.

It's all in a course called The Role of Women in Modernization, which delves into the nature of femininity and the role of women in society.

"Masculinity and femininity are symbolic categories as well as biological," said Dr. Kathryn Boals, who taught the course this spring. "We tried to examine the costs to men on a psychic level of having to be tough and assertive all the time."

The idea for the course came from two students, Ann L. Weidenbacher, a senior from Denver, Colo., and Edward G. Berenson, Levittown, Pa.

Sixteen men and eight women took the course.

"That's pretty good when you consider the ratio of men to women at Princeton is 20-to-1," Dr. Boals said.

The course included studies of child care centres, alternatives to marriage, communal living and work hours and top as husbands and wives could both work and share housekeeping tasks.

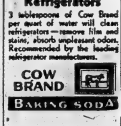
Mid-calf Hemlines Are in for Fall

LONDON (CP) — As the great battle of the hemlines got under way here, a British designer predicts that Princess Anne will be wearing the controversial new calf-length skirt by Christmas.

In the fall collections now being shown in Paris, the top names in fashion have staked everything on the leg-concealing skirt, still looking outlandish to most eyes after the long run of the mini. Leading the way in the campaign to abolish the girl-watcher's favorite fashion is Louis Feraud, whose clothes are bought by Princess Anne.

Feraud's designs are adapted for the British market by Andre Peters, who says all his suits and coats from now on will have mid-calf hemlines.

"Princess Anne? Don't worry, she will wear them," Peters told Daily Mirror fashion editor Felicity Green.



But 19-year-old Anne won't likely wear some of the Feraud ankle-length dresses, says The Mirror, because they are "totally see-through and not the stuff for royalty."

Generally, the London stores are playing it cool on the hemline question, unlike some of the smart Fifth Avenue emporiums in New York which have decreed nothing but long skirts will be sold this fall and have even insisted on salesgirls wearing them.

Many top British designers such as Mary Quant and Jean Muir are backing the mild. So is the Bond Street store of Fenwicks, popular with the younger set. It has totally abandoned the mini for the coming season.

But other stores and manufacturers have ordered only half their stock in the new length and are waiting to see how the girl next door reacts to the dictates of Paris. Many girls here think the style dowdy and there are comparatively few on the summer streets.

A straw poll of London males produced a unanimous condemnation of the new skirt-length, which seems calculated to drive men on buses and subways back to the chore of reading the morning newspaper.

Researchers Reject Punishment

By DORIS CLARE

Is punishment an acceptable technique in child-rearing? Research seems to suggest that it is not.

"The specific technique of punishment does seem to carry a boomerang effect.

"The unhappy effects of punishment run like a dismal thread through our findings. Mothers who punished toilet accidents severly ended up with bed-wetting children. . .

Mothers who punished had more aggressive children than mothers who punished lightly . . . Harsh physical punishment was associated with high childhood aggressiveness." — Clive Bate, quoting from Dr.axx and Carkhuff, in Canadian Weekly.

Dear Doris: Have you ever lost something infinitely precious and then found it? I have. I lost the stars. I lost them for nearly three years. Following an eye operation and slow healing, and the necessity of wearing a patch over the other eye, so many things we normally take for granted were lost to sight — and among them the stars.

Then, restless, sleepless and unreasonably impelled to motion, I reached for my glasses and came and began to walk about my apartment. I went to the window and looked down at the moonlit trees and lawns — and then up to the midnight blue of the sky.

And there were the stars. It almost seemed as though they were shining for me! I can't tell you how I felt, but I knew I had recaptured a sense of Eternity — had seen again a proof and symbol of the permanence of Creation. — New Eyes.

Dear New Eyes: Bless you for sharing it with us. Reminds me of our little poem "The World is Mine", in which the writer observes hydrofoils and various handicaps and considers how lucky he is. I'll send you a copy.

Dear Doris: The first two children I served had to be weaned early. When I had my last, child I went to a larger centre. There I received an auto. Besides and care of the breasts that I found my last experience of nursing both beautiful and rewarding.

I would very much like to tell other mothers - to - be how to go about nursing their babies. I have heard of an organization that does this type of thing called "La Leche." If you have, would you be kind enough to forward the letter enclosed to them? — All For Breast Feeding.

Dear All: Indeed I have heard of this go - ahead organization. They have a Canadian headquarters in Toronto now. -

Perhaps you can get a branch going where you are. I am forwarding your letter to them, and will be glad to give details to anyone writing in.

Lazy Day Cake Recipe

By MARY MOORE

Some of you are going to wonder why I am giving two cake recipes this week. The answer is that they both go so well with fresh fruits. On Monday I gave you my favorite Lemon Jelly Roll and now along comes Lazy Day Cake which has been a favorite of Pete's most of his life for it was one of the earliest cakes he made as a boy.

He and Margaret were coming for dinner so on a warm Sunday afternoon in a lackadaisical mood I made it and served it with fresh berries.

LAZY DAY CAKE

2 eggs
1 cup sugar
1 tsp. vanilla
1 cup sifted all - purpose flour
1 tsp. baking powder
½ tsp. salt
½ cup scalded milk
1 tbsp. margarine (melted in the hot milk)

Topping:

3 tbsps. margarine
3 tbsps. light brown sugar
2 tbsps. milk
½ cup desiccated coconut

In beater bowl beat eggs with sugar and vanilla until pale and fluffy. Remove beaters. Sift the sifted flour, baking powder and salt over the egg-sugar mixture and fold in alternately with scalded milk in which the margarine has been melted. Beat until batter is smooth. Pour into well buttered 8x8in-lined 9¾ x 9¾ x 2" pan. Bake at 350 deg. F.for. on centre rack in oven for 25 to 30 minutes.

Meantime while cake is baking blend and heat in a small pot all of the topping ingredients, except the coconut, until melted. Remove from heat and add coconut. When cake is baked carefully spread all over top and broil about five inches from burner until topping bubbles. Remove from broiler at once and cool in pan standing on rack.

NOTE: This cake is usually cut in squares in pan but if ladies pan is used you can loosen it and lift it from pan, top side up, with two broad lifters.

This is a very dependable cake and a great satisfaction for young bakers to make.

Ann Landers

Irate Reader Annoyed With Ann's Advice

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Why don't you mind your own business? A woman in California wrote to say she and her husband were getting along fine, playing cards, watching TV and enjoying themselves and YOU tell her to add a little sex to her marriage. And it will be better. How do you know? Maybe they don't happen to be sex maniacs.

Of course my husband cut out that column and waved it in front of my nose. Now he has it pasted to his denture glass. Every night before he goes to bed he reads me a line or two of your advice. I'm so sick of you, Ann Landers — ANN LANDERS ver. I tried to cancel the newspaper but my husband wouldn't stand for it.

If I hadn't seen you with my own eyes when you spoke in Boston I would swear you were a man. I won't be reading your column anymore so good-by forever. — BROOKLINE WIFE.

DEAR WIFE: Sorry to lose you, dearie, but I have a hunch your husband will keep you posted. Thanks for the clobber. It made my day.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Our family doctor, who has a lovely wife and four children, is having an affair with a woman who pretends to be a patient although she is healthy as a horse. It hurts me to see this wonderful man ruin his reputation and destroy his family with such foolishness. A few weeks ago I became so upset I called his receptionist and asked her to inform his wife. Apparently the girl didn't take my advice because the doctor is still carrying on with the woman. She goes to his office four times a week for a "checkup" and sails right past sick people who must wait for hours to be seen.

I wrote a letter to the American Medical Association but to date have received no answer. This morning I telephoned the county Medical Society and spoke with a very rude woman who said she was "too busy" to bother with such things. "TOO BUSY" — can you imagine! A doctor's reputation and family is at stake and she is too busy to bother.

Please think of something else I can do. I am sick over this. — S.O.S.

DEAR S.O.S.: Get a part time job and drain off some of that excess energy. If the doctor is behaving like a jackass, he'll probably pay for his foolishness, but it is none of your business. The AMA and the County Medical Society do not become involved in such matters.

Extortion Charged

TORONTO (CP) — Police investigating an extortion threat arrested a 13-year-old boy Wednesday.

A North York supermarket owner said he received a telephoned bombing threat during which a childish voice demanded $75 a week.

Police investigation led through a seven-year-old to the youngster charged with delinquency.

Railway Unions Fight Passenger Service Cuts

OTTAWA (CP) — Four railway unions are undertaking a campaign for public support in a fight against reductions and abandonments in passenger service by Canadian Pacific Railway.

Spokesmen for the unions said at a news conference Wednesday they will spend up to $40,000 for newspaper and radio advertisements urging the public to write in protest to local officials, their MPs, the Canadian transportation commission and Transport Minister Don Jamieson.

George McDevitt, vice-president of the United Transportation Union, said means are also being considered for making reductions in passenger service an issue in collective bargaining, which begins in November with both CP Rail and Canadian National Railways.

He charged the railway has re-scheduled service at inconvenient hours, increased prices and reduced meal and other services. The purpose has been to discourage passenger traffic, the better to win permission from the transport commission to discontinue altogether, he said.

It appears now, he said, that CP is following CP Rail's example.

The union action was prompted by an announcement early this month by CP Rail that it is reducing passenger service between Montreal and Ottawa to two round trips from five daily.

The unions immediately asked the transport commission to intervene and call public hearings but the commission decided against such action. Public hearings are mandatory only if the railways seek to end a service entirely.

William Smith, president of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers, accused commissioner chairman J. W. Pickersgill of ignoring his responsibilities.

The commission's decision, he said, indicates either "a very grave shortcoming in the Transportation Act," under which the commission was created, "or a complete distortion of its intent."

Movie to Depict Massacre of Donnellys

POINT EDWARD, Ont. (CP) — A full-length movie costing about $1,000,000 will be shot in Ontario next spring depicting the massacre in 1880 of five members of the Donnelly family who emigrated from Ireland to Lucan, a community 12 miles north of London.

Rev. Orlo Miller, who wrote the book The Donnellys Must Die, said in an interview Wednesday that Agincourt Productions of Toronto, a Canadian-owned company has contracted the picture and will likely use all Canadian actors.

Mr. Miller, who said he has been intimidated and threatened by descendents of the lynchers and Lucan area residents since the book was published in 1962, said the film won't be shot in Lucan because the anticipated abuse from residents would hold up production.

He said the inhabitants of the community of 1,000 suffer a type of paranoia because of their inherited guilt for the massacre staged by a vigilante group of Catholics who hated the Donnellys because they did business with protestant Irish.

"I'd never be afraid to return to the town," Mr. Miller said, "but I wouldn't want to walk the streets at night."

He said he was invited to speak to a meeting in Lucan shortly after his book was published and when he entered a crowded beverage room after the meeting all the patrons fell silent, then left.

In his book, Mr. Miller claimed the antagonism toward the Donnellys in the Lucan area emanated from a 19th-century feud in Tipperary between Catholics who would have nothing to do with protestants and those that would.

The Donnellys themselves were a violent people and wouldn't be pushed around. They were blamed for barnburnings and other forms of terrorism in the area, "75 per cent of the allegations of which are bull," he says.

But shortly after the midnight of Feb. 3, 1880 the Donnellys were judged.

The vigilantes entered the home of the aging father of the clan, Jim Donnelly and beat, shot and mutilated Jim, his wife Johanah, a son Thomas and a niece visiting from Ireland, then set fire to the home.

The group then moved to the home of Will Donnelly, another son. His brother, John, answered the door and was shot in the face.

Seven Planes Map Prairies To Measure Fallow Land

REGINA (CP) — On clear days this summer, there are eyes in the sky, scanning prairie fields to determine how much land has been sown to wheat and how much has been left fallow or put into other crops.

Seven airplanes equipped with high-powered wide-angle cameras methodically fly for 13 hours each day over the prairie provinces, with lenses focussed on the land 27,000 feet below.

The aerial survey, which now has covered more than one-third of the total planned area, is to provide a check on claims filed by farmers under Operation LIFT, the federal plan to cut down on wheat acreage.

R. L. Surtees, project manager for LIFT's air photo interpretation division, said Wednesday that the aircraft have covered a total of 10,230 miles of flight line, and a photographic area of about 85,000 square miles.

With a total of 30,000 flight line miles and a 255,000 square mile photographic area to be covered, he said, the survey is on schedule and will be finished by the Aug. 15 target date. The crews have been averaging about 800 flight line miles daily.

Each camera has a 250-picture magazine and the films incidentally are providing a general land inventory of the prairie provinces.

The LIFT plan—properly titled Lower Inventories For Tomorrow—provides cash payments to farmers who cut back on wheat production in this year of glutted wheat markets.

The prairie Farm Assistance Administration office in Regina, an administrative headquarters for the LIFT program, had mailed out about $3,000,000 in interim payments to farmers by the start of this week.

Of the nearly 90,000 reduction applications received to date from farmers, more than 8,700 have been answered with interim payments.

The photographs are viewed through a form of stereoscope that gives an enlarged, three-dimensional view of the particular land parcels and the extent of crop area, summerfallow, pasture and unused land, and clearly identifies the crop sown. If the pictures don't jibe with the farmer's claim, field inspectors go to the farm in question and asked the claimant about the discrepancy.

The director of PFAA, H. S. Riddell, said his office in Regina has been getting about 4,000 mailed applications daily from farmers wanting to get the $6 and $10 per acre payments.

Mr. Riddell estimates there will be 25,000,000 acres of prairie summerfallow this year, while dominion bureau of statistics figures the total will be about 36,000,000.

Last year there were about 29,000,000 acres left fallow on the prairies.

Fishing Curb Opposed

LANSING, Mich. (CP) — A conservation group in Michigan has filed suit asking the Michigan Supreme Court to cancel Governor W. G. Milliken's "catch and release" fishing restriction on Lake St. Clair.

Raymond Trombley, chairman of the 23-man Lake St. Clair Advisory Committee, said the committee filed the suit because a fishing ban on the lake is unnecessary.

"That ban was imposed only because of a 'possible' health hazard," Mr. Trombley said.

"But we haven't heard of anyone getting mercury poisoning yet, and in the meantime all the businessmen along the lake are suffering."

Ontario Is Willing to Surrender Some Water Control Rights

HAMILTON (CP) — Ontario is willing to surrender some of its jurisdiction over water management to allow effective international control of Great Lakes pollution, the chairman of the Ontario Water Resources Commission said Wednesday.

Speaking to a conference of water management experts from 16 countries, Donald Collins called for amendments to the Boundary Waters Treaty of 1909 to establish common standards of water quality as national policy in both the United States and Canada.

"On behalf of the government of Ontario, I say we will meet these standards even if they go beyond what we have already set out in this province," he said.

"It is necessary for each of us to surrender some of our jurisdiction to achieve the control we need to have."

In an interview later, Mr. Collins said the eight states bordering the Great Lakes have jurisdictional disagreements with the United States government similar to Canadian federal-provincial conflicts.

"That's why I mentioned an amendment to the treaty. I think it's very important that it be done this way because then water standards would become the law of the land—national policy—and wouldn't be affected by differences in individual states.

"I think water standards eventually should be under the United Nations, because some questions like the mercury level in fish are truly international ones."

Mr. Collins was addressing the water management research group of the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development, to which Canada belongs along with the U.S., Western European countries and Japan.

The water management group meets twice a year to exchange information on how problems are solved within member countries.

The present session opened last week in Washington, moved to St. Clair, Mich., and then to Hamilton Tuesday.

Mr. Collins explained Ontario's system of regional surveys to determine water needs, citing the Grand River study covering GAR, Guelph, Kitchener-Waterloo, six area towns, four villages and 18 townships.

"This is the most significant study we have done and the dams the group called for we consider vital for good water management."

Today the group will tour the Canada Centre for Inland Waters in nearby Burlington, ride a research vessel in Queenston, Ont., and then tour the Adam Beck power station at Niagara Falls, Ont.

The meeting ends here Friday.

Professors Sue Detergent Firms

DETROIT (CP) — Four professors at Wayne State University have filed a civil suit against four laundry detergent manufacturers asking $3,000,000 in damages for alleged pollution of Lake St. Clair, Lake Erie and the Detroit River.

The professors are also seeking an order from Wayne Circuit Court to have Lever Brothers Co., Procter and Gamble Inc., Colgate Palmolive Peet Co. and Boyle Midwest stop selling products in Michigan which cause water pollution.

Massachusetts Oil Spill Still Deadly After Ten Months

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ten months after 170,000 gallons of oil were spilled into the water off West Falmouth, Mass., fish and bacteria still are dying, plant growth still is crippled and what is left of the oil is still spreading, a House of Representatives subcommittee was told Wednesday.

Scientists who have studied the Wild Harbor spill last September said that oil from the grounded Northeast Petroleum Company's vessel, Florida, has permeated the entire 42-foot depth of the harbor and spread many miles. The ocean life still is a long way from its pre-spill level, they said.

Dr. Howard Sanders, a biologist at the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution in Massachusetts, told the conservation and natural resources subcommittee that in much of the upper regions of Wild Harbor river, almost no species of animal life have persisted. There was no indication of recolonization of some species of ocean life in the area.

Dr. Max Blumer, also of the Woods Hole institution, said that in addition to destroying plant and animal life there is a possibility that oil spills eventually will be a cause of cancer in man.

Blumer said it has been proven that prolonged contact with petroleum has caused skin cancer in some refinery personnel.

He said "the presence of cancer-causing chemicals in oil polluted inshore waters and the eating of fish and shellfish from polluted areas may constitute a public health hazard."

However, Blumer later told reporters he has no personal knowledge of oil spills ever contributing to cancer in man.

Hickel Urges Prosecution of 13 Firms

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interior Secretary Walter J. Hickel has urged the justice department to prosecute 13 companies on charges of discharging mercury, a highly poisonous substance, into waterways.

Hickel did not identify the companies in announcing his action Wednesday. But he gave the department the names and said they are "discharging into the nation's waterways sufficient quantities of mercury to constitute a serious hazard to public health."

The department's response was not immediately made known, but some sources in the interior department said it had indicated willingness to undertake prosecutions.

Hickel said he is concerned with mercury concentrations larger than acceptable limits, and his announcement referred to a limit of 0.5 parts per million of mercury in fish as recommended by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration.

One source said that Hickel intends to invoke an 1899 law against polluters and that the justice department has indicated in preliminary talks a willingness to prosecute.

Sources declined to provide any details, but indicated some large companies will be involved.

Access Lacking to Rideau Beaches

TORONTO (CP) — Public access is lacking to choice beachfront areas of the Rideau waterway system, Ottawa researcher Harold Swierenga says in a study released Wednesday.

Mr. Swierenga's study, done in 1969 for a joint federal-provincial committee, said a monopoly by private property owners prevents public access to "highly desirable" waterway areas, particularly in the Big Rideau, Newboro, Opinicon and Sand Lakes regions.

The region represents about half of the beachfront section of the 450-mile waterway corridor which stretches from Ottawa to the 30,000 Islands of Georgian Bay.

Mr. Swierenga made no recommendations in the report prepared for the Canada-Ontario Rideau-Trent-Severn Waterway Committee which represents 40 departments and agencies of the Ontario and federal governments.

Mr. Swierenga also feared "a significant number of large individual holdings" in the tourist-rich areas of Upper Rideau, Lower Rideau, Newboro, Sand and Dog lakes. Most of these holdings are more than 150 acres, although one person owns 700 acres on which one or two cottages have been built.

Family Differences Resolved with Bronze

By MALCOLM JOHNSTON
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — The differences between Price and Louise Morris — mainly a few thousand miles — will be resolved tomorrow.

An excited Louise left Belleville this morning enroute to the Dorval, Quebec airport and Prestwick, Scotland, where she will join hubby Price Friday morning.

She will accompany the bronze medal winning heavyweight weightlifter to Edinburgh where they will take in Saturday's closing ceremonies at the ninth Commonwealth Games.

Then Price and Louise will take a two - week vacation in England and Wales with the accent on visits to Price's aunts, uncles and grandmother.

Louise interrupted her packing Thursday evening at the Morris' home on the fourth concession of Sidney township to say, "I'm really excited and so pleased about the medal because I know Price has worked so hard."

"I couldn't do anything all day Wednesday until I heard the results on the radio at 4.30 p.m.," Mrs. Morris admitted.

"Price was hoping to win a medal," she said, "but you don't know what you're going to face when you get over there."

Louise financed the vacation with savings built up while she was working at a local dairy, and expressed gratitude to the town of Trenton, the Rotary Club and Price's employer, the Trenton Public Utilities Commission, for contributing to Price's expenses.

"I'm very pleased for the financial support and the time off work," she stressed, "You just can't compete overseas unless someone backs you up."

This might be our one chance to go," Louise said of the two week vacation in England and Wales.

That's because Price and Louise, who have been married almost two years, are expecting their first child this fall.

The trip to the old country will also restore communications between Price and Louise.

Don't be mistaken; the pair aren't fighting, but as Louise says, "It's $9 for a three minute phone call and that limits our communications."

It is interesting to note that Louise and Price met in Winnipeg during the 1967 Pan-American games.

Louise came to weigh her cousin Bob Santavy, but was attracted by the Apollo Bar Bell Club-strongmen, who finished fourth, breaking a Canadian record.

Tuesday, Bob Santavy of Sarnia won a silver medal for Canada in the Commonwealth Games middle - heavyweight division.

The Morris' will arrive back in Belleville Sunday August 6, and Price will return to his lineman's job with the Trenton PUC the next day.

Mrs. Price Morris hurriedly prepares her luggage as she prepares to depart from her Sidney Township home to far-away Scotland. Mrs. Morris is going to meet her husband Price who had just captured a bronze medal in weightlifting at the Commonwealth Games.

Morris Wins Bronze In Games Weightlifting

By MAURICE SWITZER
Sports Editor

EDINBURGH — Apollo Bar Bell Club member Price Morris won a bronze medal for Canada in the Commonwealth Games heavyweight weightlifting competition at Leith Town hall yesterday.

Morris recorded a 1035¾-pound total, his best ever, to win his first medal in international competition.

The Sidney township strongman actually tied with England's Dave Hancock who was awarded the silver medal because of lower body weight.

Meanwhile, 20 - year - old Hamilton sensation Russell Prior made a runaway of the gold medal race, hoisting 1059¾ pounds, including a Commonwealth record, 319¼-pound snatch.

It was Prior who bested Price Morris at the Canadian Commonwealth trials in Belleville.

Not on hand to witness the achievement was Apollo Bar Bell coach Ken Carbraise, named coach of Canada's nine - man lifting team, but forced home because of business commitments before the Canadian team left for Edinburgh last week.

Junior's Take Three in a Row

Belleville and Shannonville, two of the lower teams in the league, came up with impressive upsets over Latta and Read Wednesday night in South Hastings League action much to the delight and relief of the first-place Plane's team.

Plane's remained a scant one point ahead of Read and Latta in the standings as Belleville dropped Latta 9-7 and Shannonville whipped Read 12-2.

Wayne McTaggart pitched the win for Belleville giving up seven runs on four hits while fanning eight and walking nine. John Noakes relieved in the ninth fanning one and walking one plus leaving Latta with the potential tying runs on base.

Bill Kerkhan paced the Juniors at the plate with a single and a long homer over the right-field fence. Glenn Carleton had a triple and a single and Terry Meagher a triple for the winners.

"That's three in a row now. We're coming along for the OBA play-offs which start in Oshawa in a week and a half," commenta coach Moe Hunter.

Doug Geen started for Latta giving up seven runs on six hits while walking one and fanning two. Lorne Crosknight relieved in the fourth firing four hit ball and fanning three. Doug Chisholm had a double for Latta and Geen and Dave Chapman singles in a losing effort.

Bill Barberstock set 12 Read batters down on strikes in picking up the Shannonville victory. Junior Brant with a homer and two singles, Blaine Lott with a homer and single and Dilbert Barberstock with a homer and single led Shannonville at the plate.

Wayne Farrell, Larry Coffey and Carm Milligan all saw mound duty for Read and together managed three strikeouts and eight walks. Steve White, Gerry Brennan, Larry Pascoe and Milligan had singles for Read.

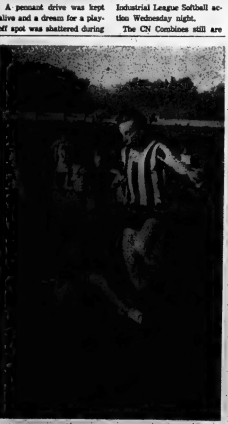
Combine's Drive Still Alive

A pennant drive was kept alive and a dream for a play-off spot was shattered during Industrial League Softball action Wednesday night.

The CN Combines still are hopeful of a first place finish after their 9-3 victory over Union Carbide while the CN Turbos eliminated UIC from any further softball action as they dumped the Insurasacmen 13-2.



The Combines pennant hopes rest on the outcome of tonight's game between The Intelligencer, the team they have to catch, and Mead Johnson at Prince Charles School. The Intell can clinch the pennant with a victory tonight.

Junior Day fired five hit ball for the Combines while fanning four and walking two. D .Bolte had a triple and a single for the winners with Don Conway adding a double and two singles and M. Fahey contributing a single and double.

Ken Osborne gave up 12 hits in defeat for Union Carbide while striking out four and walking two. B. Palmer punched a triple and a single to pace the losers effort at the plate.

Rod Bennett was touched for ten hits during the Turbo win and fanned three while walking one. Paul Williams had a homer and Narcatiap and Howard adding three singles each.

B. Coughlin and B. Chase gave up 14 hits in defeat for UIC. They walked six and fanned three. Chase helped his own cause with a single and double and Cassidy and Richards added two singles each.

Bob Kitcher of the Belleville Eagles defends against United forward Joe Romano in a Bay of Quinte soccer, conlest played at Zwick's Island last night. The Eagles came up with a narrow 2-1 win.

Eagles Flying High At United's Expense

The Belleville Eagles made it two wins in a row Wednesday night at the expense of Belleville United as the Eagles edged them 2-1 in Bay of Quinte Soccer at Zwicks.

John Thompson started the ball rolling for the Eagles heading in a corner kick during the first half. The score remained that way until the second half thanks to the outstanding goaltending by Donovan in the Eagle net and Lomas for United. Hadley tied the game for United getting credit for the score after the ball was knocked into the net by an Eagle defender. Tony Gonsales won the game for the Eagles converting passes from Watson and Kitcher into the winning goal.

Hard rough tackling spotted the rest of the game but both defences held out and there was no further scoring.

Canadian Team to Have 'Ups and Downs' In Attempt to Increase Medal Intake

EDINBURGH (CP) — A couple of Canada's best gold medal chances at the Commonwealth Games today depended on how the pole vaulters went up and how the divers came down.

The divers were half-way there before today's finals began in the women's lower event. Beverly Boys and Nancy Robertson of Pickering, Ont., and Kathy Rollo of Saskatoon were 1-2-3 after Tuesday's preliminary dives.

Bruce Simpson and Bob Rafelis of Toronto had the whole job to do in the pole vault, although they have gone higher this year than anyone else in the field.

Canada's gold medal total reached 19 Wednesday with no help from the swimmers and divers, who took the day off after accounting for seven.

George Pace of Toronto broke the ice for the track and field team by capturing the men's discus and heavyweight Russ Prior of Hamilton, Ont., cashed in on the last Canadian chance for a weightlifting title.

The other gold belonged to Jamie Paulson of Calgary, who picked it up Tuesday night in the badminton men's singles.

While Games officials panicked over a reported threat against the life of Kipchoge Keino, the great Kenyan runner cheerfully ran away from the opposition in the 1,500 metres for his country's first Games victory. Another seasoned campaigner, Lynn Davies, put Wales in the win column for the first time in the long jump.

There were double winners in both men's and women's sprints as Don Quarrie of Jamaica and Raelene Boyle of Australia, the winners at 100 metres, came through again in the 200.

Mary Peters captured the pentathlon for Northern Ireland as Jenny Meldrum of Toronto, her training interrupted for 17 months by the birth of a daughter, came back to take the third-place bronze. Geoff Smith of Australia was the decathlon winner.

England ran its string of fencing victories to six in the women's team foil and men's team epee. Scotland and Canada finishing second and third in both classes.

Price Morris of Frankford, Ont., picked up another Canadian bronze by finishing behind Price and Dave Hancock of England in the heavyweight weightlifting and Australia's Ray Rigby closed out the competition by taking the superheavyweight class.

A photo finish between two Australians gave John Nicholson the first cycling championship in the 1,000-metre scratch sprint. The 4,000-metre pursuit was won by Ian Hallam of England.

Canada's 10-m.a.s wrestling team made an auspicious start, winning eight matches against two losses and a draw.

Welterweight Alfred Burr of Winnipeg won two decisions. Heavyweight Ed Millard of King City, Ont., middleweight Nick Schori of Stratford, Ont., and light flyweight Ken Shand of Toronto escaped penalty points by pinning their opponents.

Winners by decision were light heavyweight Claude Pilon of Ottawa, featherweight Pat Bolger of Dalton, Ont., and flyweight David Stitt of Hamilton.

Lightweight Ole Sorenson of St. Catharines, Ont., earned a draw and the only losers were bantam Herb Singerman of Montreal an super-heavyweight Merv Holden of New Westminster, B.C.

Canada's entries in the lawn bowling pairs and singles improved their positions slightly but stayed near the bottom of the standings as Harry Elliott and John Henderson of Westmount, Que., had a win, a loss and a draw during the day and Harold Fulton of Regina won one of his three starts.

Wins in Walk

Kip Keino of Kenya is carried by admirers after winning the 1,500 metres race in the Commonwealth Games at Edinburgh, Scotland, Wednesday, despite threats to his life. Before the race an anonymous telephone call and two unsigned letters were received at the athlete's village in Edinburgh. They said that Olympic Gold medalist, would be killed if he competed. Keino won in 3:38.6. (AP Wirephoto)

Prior Forgets Age After Gold Medal Lift

EDINBURGH (CP) — Russ Prior, 21, of Hamilton was so excited after he won the heavyweight division in weightlifting at the Commonwealth Games Wednesday that he forgot his age.

"Hey, how about that. I forgot I had a birthday about a month ago," said the second-year psychology student at McMaster University who says "a person has to concentrate so hard to bring out their best that it is almost a form of self hypnosis."

Prior's winning total was 1,080 pounds and he attempted a lift of 425 pounds, hoping to break the Commonwealth record of 1,096 "but I just wasn't ready."

Prior opened with a press of 314 pounds, took it to 336 and then pressed 358 with ease to take the lead.

"I knew I had it won when I made that lift," he said. "I knew no one was going to beat me."

His father Bob Prior, who is also the Canadian team coach, said the opening weight was low "because we wanted to be sure and we wanted to give him confidence."

After his third lift in the press, Price Morris of Frankford, Ont. was tied with D. Hancock of England for second place with 352½ pounds.

Prior then lifted 292 pounds, 308½ pounds and 319½ pounds in the satch division. His third snatch gave him a Commonwealth record. The former record holder, Louis Martin of England, was watching from the audience and gave Prior a victory salute.

Then, hoping to establish a Commonwealth record total, he opened with 380½ pounds in the clean and jerk, but missed the first attempt.

"He was just too sure," said Bob Prior. "We wanted to make sure we had the gold medal and Russ was too confident he could make it. He came up too fast an missed it."

Prior made it on the second attempt and went to 402½ pounds with his final attempt, which he appeared to clean and jerk with ease.

Under international rules, he was allowed one lift for the Commonwealth record after the competition, "but it was just too great a jump," said Bob Prior. "If he had made that first lift at 380½ and then made 402½, he probably would have lifted €0 in his final lift and maybe even got the record after the competition."

But Prior, taking an extra 23 pounds more than his previous lift, simply pulled it off the floor and then dropped it. "I knew I couldn't make it," he said.

Morris took the bronze medal when he failed on his final attempt of the evening at 407½ pounds and fell to the stage. He was not injured, but Bob Prior said the former Canadian champion "blacked out for a second from oxygen starvation and wasn't able to stop the fall."

When Morris failed at the 407½ mark, Hancock, who had already hoisted 402½ in the clean and jerk, signalled that he was satisfied with the silver medal and did not take his final lift.

Although Hancock and Morris both had totals of 1,035½, the weight of the English lifter was less than the Canadian and the difference won him the silver medal.

Gurney Leaves Team

EDMONTON (CP) — Dan Gurney, points leader in the Canadian-American Challenge Cup road-racing series this year, has been forced to leave the McLaren team because of conflicting contracts, it was announced Wednesday.

Gurney, of Costa Mesa, Calif., joined the McLaren team after Bruce McLaren was killed testing a new car at Goodwood in England June 8.

The American won the first two of the 1970 11-race series which has prize money totalling nearly $1,000,000. Team-mate Denis Hulme of New Zealand won the third race two weeks ago at Watkins Glen, N.Y., the 16th consecutive victory for the McLaren team.

A spokesman for Edmonton International Speedway, where the fourth race is to be held Sunday, said Gurney had a contract with Castrol Oil Ltd. while the McLaren team had one with Gulf Oil Ltd.

The spokesman said the conflict of interest forced Gurney to leave McLaren.

No successor to Gurney had been named but it was speculated Peter Gethin, 30, of England would get the ride. Gethin won the 1969 Formula 5000 title, Europe's version of North America's Formula A series, and is the points leader in the 1970 series.

Eskimos Upset Saskatchewan with 25-21 Win

EDMONTON (CP) — Edmonton Eskimos, with superb field goal kicking by Dave Cutler and excellent pass receiving by Tom Nettles, upset Saskatchewan Roughriders 25-21 in a Western Football Conference exhibition game Wednesday.

Cutler, a Canadian from Simon Fraser University, kicked four field goals, including a 37-yarder in the final quarter. The Canadian Football League record is 58 yards, held by Bill Mitchell who also was an Eskimo.

Cutler's other kicks were from 50, 46 and 39 yards.

Nettles caught 10 passes for 121 yards, including two for touchdowns. His first was on a three-yarder from Don Trull and his second a 14-yard pass from Trull.

Most of his gains were in key yardage situations.

The other Eskimo point was a convert by Cutler. His other attempt was blocked.

The Roughriders, using Ron Lancaster, Terry Southall and Don Weiss at quarterback, got eight points from Jack Abendschan who kicked field goals of 24 and 18 yards and converted touchdowns by Lancaster and Bobby Thompson. Alan Ford kicked a 51-yard single.

Canton Boosts Pirates To Two-Game NL Lead

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Bruce (Dal) Canton came through with a key relief job for the Pittsburgh Pirates as a starter.

"I'd rather be a starter but I know I'll be back in the bullpen," Dal Canton said Wednesday night after working 7 2-3 innings and getting the victory in the Pirates' 5-3 triumph over the Atlanta Braves that boosted to two games the Pirates lead in the National League East. Second-place New York Mets lost to San Diego Padres 5-4 in 10 innings.

Dal Canton started because the Pirates have three starters out with injuries.

Bob Veale, sore arm, is expected back Saturday or Sunday, but it is not known when Bob Moose, sore elbow, will return and Steve Blass is on the disabled list after being hit on his pitching arm by a line drive.

Elsewhere Wednesday, Houston Astros hammered St. Louis Cardinals 13-8, Los Angeles Dodgers outlasted Montreal Expos 12-10, the Chicago Cubs clubbed Cincinnati Reds 10-2 and Philadelphia Phillies topped San Francisco Giants 5-3.

Dal Canton, a 26-year-old right-hander with a 8-1 record, had a five-hitter and a 5-1 lead before running into trouble in the eighth and being saved by bullpen colleague Dave Giusti.

Gil Garrido opened the eighth with a double and, with two out, scored on Mike Lum's triple that finished Dal Canton for the night. Orlando Cepeda singled in a run and the bases were loaded before Giusti got out of the inning.

The Pirates scored twice in the first, one run scoring on Willie Stargell's double, and twice in the third on Dave Cash's bases loaded single.

Ivan Murrell's RBI single with two-out in the 10th off Nolan Ryan got San Diego by the Mets, who had taken a 4-3 lead on Rod Hartenhen's sacrifice fly in the ninth. The Padres tied it 4-4 on Nate Colbert's leadoff homer in the bottom of the ninth. Murrell followed with a single to knock out Tom Seaver for the first time since May 6.

Ed Spiezio socked a two-run homer to give San Diego a 3-3 tie in the seventh.

Bob Bailey drove in four runs with a homer and two-run double, Ron Fairly smacked a two-run homer and John Bateman cracked a two-run single as Montreal built up a 10-4 lead, but Los Angeles came back to win on an eight-run seventh inning. Big blows of the inning for the Dodgers were a grand slam homer by Tom Haller and a solo shot by Von Joshua.

St. Louis took a 6-3 lead with five runs on two hits in the third, but Houston came back to go ahead to stay in the fourth with seven runs on three hits, four walks and an error as the Cardinals lost their fourth straight game and their 13th in 15 games.

Jim Wynn homered for Houston and Richie Allen and Jose Cardenal connected for St. Louis.

Perranoski Saves Minnesota Win

Reliever Ron Perranoski, the veteran southpaw, picked up his 24th save of the season Wednesday night, nailing the last four Detroit Tigers batters and preserving Jim Perry's 13th victory of the season as the Minnesota Twins edged the Tigers 3-1.

Perry's record of 13 wins is tops in the American League.

Baltimore Orioles streaked to their 19th consecutive victory over the Kansas City Royals, a 4-3, 13-inning triumph.

The Twins lead over California in the West Division, and the Orioles edge over the Tigers in the East increased to five games.

Elsewhere, Boston Red Sox swept a day-night twinbill from the California Angels, 7-4, and 8-3, Oakland Athletics edged Washington Senators 4-3, Milwaukee Brewers topped New York Yankees 4-1 and Cleveland Indians belted Chicago White Sox 8-2.

"Ron came in and did the job," said Twins' manager Bill Rigney. "Perry, Perranoski and Killebrew, that's all-act'l'd like to have for three or four more seasons", he added.

Perry, 15-7, pitched five perfect innings and allowed only two hits before Perranoski came to the rescue in the eighth with one Detroit run in and the tying run on second with two out. The left-hander got Jim Price on a grounder and retired the Tigers in order in the ninth.

Lowe was Mickey Lolich, 9-11.

The Orioles kept their string alive when pinch-hitter Chico Salmon drove in the winning run with a two-out infield hit in the 13th inning.

Baltimore dropped its first and last game to the two-year old expansion club on May 9, 1969.

Carl Yastrzemski collected three hits in each game, increasing the average to .322 to move into contention for his fourth batting title in the double victory over the Angels.

Yaz, hitting at a .323 clip has increased his hitting streak to 12 consecutive games with 23 hits in 44 attempts.

In the nightcap, John' Kennedy had a homer and George Thomas a two-run double. Tom Egan and Roger Repoz had homer for the Angels.

Oakland erupted for three eighth-inning runs, the last on Washington reliever Darold Knowles' throwing error, to overcome the Senators.

Felipe Alou opened the A's eighth with a homer and after a walk, Knowles came on. Joe Rudi ripped a punch double to tie it at 3-3 before Knowles got the next two hitters. The left-hander then walked Dick Green intentionally... Then with Dave Duncan at bat, Knowles' pickoff throw to first went wild and the winning run came across.

Paul Casanova had a homer for the Senators.

Consecutive fifth inning homers by Ted Savage and Bob Burda snapped a 1-1 tie and sent the Brewers on their way to their first triumph over the Yankees this season. Bob Bolin tossed a six-hitter for the winners.

Cleveland got three runs in the third inning on run-scoring doubles by Buddy Bradford and Eddie Leon and a RBI single from Jack Heidemann in coasting to their victory over the White Sox.

Denies Report Of Kapp Contract

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — General Manager Jim Finks of Minnesota Vikings rejected Wednesday a published report that quarterback Joe Kapp is asking $1,000,000 over a five-year period to sign a new contract with the defending National Football League champions.

The St. Paul Pioneer Press published that figure Wednesday.

Finks, in New York City for league meetings, said in a statement released here that he felt "compelled to refute the various figures being bandied about."

Kapp, who once played in the Canadian Football League, recently became a free agent and now is represented by John Elliott Cook of San Francisco. The newspaper said Cook would not elaborate on the $1,000,000 report.

Kapp played for Calgary Stampeders and British Columbia Lions of the CFL before signing with Minnesota.

No Measles Epidemic: Munro

OTTAWA (CP)— Health Minister Munro expressed concern Wednesday about the high incidence of German measles but said there is no epidemic and none is anticipated.

Entering a controversy about the rubella outbreak, Mr. Munro told a news conference that the present rate of 69 cases of German measles per 100,000 people is far below the epidemic rate of 300 to 500 cases.

Mr. Munro said he is "very concerned" about the high number of cases—3,700 so far this year—but the peak came in the spring and a decline ensued.

The minister called the meeting with reporters following a degree of alarm raised by pediatricians about the dangers of a rubella epidemic.

Woman who contract the disease during the first month of pregnancy run a 50-per-cent risk of producing a defective child, perhaps with heart disease, cataracts, hearing defects and mental deficiency. The risk declines in the second and third months of pregnancy.

The baby doctors' organization, the Canadian Pediatrics Society, passed a resolution Monday at its Winnipeg convention urging all levels of governments to institute mass vaccination against a looming German measles epidemic.

Dr. Donald McLean, chairman of the society's infectious diseases committee said health authorities are not taking advantage of the vaccine despite the danger posed to unborn children.

"They can't be persuaded we have an epidemic situation on our doorstep," he said.

At Vancouver pediatrician, Dr. Sydney Segal, advised against planning for babies this year. Mr. Munro disagreed, saying that if a family wants a child it can do so after getting a doctor's advice.

At the same time, Mr. Munro warned pregnant women against using the rubella vaccine because of the danger it posed to their unborn children.

He said all provinces will undertake to immunize children against rubella, however, when the school term begins in the fall. Immunization of Indians and Eskimos by federal authorities began seven weeks ago. Overall, it is up to the provinces to handle their own immunization programs.

Meanwhile, the executive of the Alliance for Life, an organization that crusades for protection of life, sent telegrams to Mr. Munro and all provincial health ministers urging that the vaccine be made available to all who want it.

Pearson Has Eye Operation

OTTAWA (CP) — Lester Pearson, the former prime minister, had an eye operation Wednesday at the Ottawa General Hospital and is "resting comfortably," a personal spokesman disclosed.

The spokesman said the operation, "for a retinal condition of the right eye," was successful. The 73-year-old former Liberal leader will be in hospital for a week.

Mr. Pearson had returned to his Ottawa home last Thursday after a month abroad fulfilling various engagements and holidaying in Austria.

$200,000 Loot Found In Attic

DETROIT (AP) — Detroit police say they solved as many as 300 area burglaries when a 35-year-old woman led them to the attic of her home, where they found $200,000 worth of loot stuffed into 25 pillowcases.

Helen Ann Haynes, 36, dubbed by police as the "pillowcase bandit," stood mute Wednesday at her arraignment on breaking and entering charges and was released on $5,000 bond.

Police said that in addition to the loot, they found stacks of neatly pressed pillowcases in Mrs. Haynes' home. The pillowcases found in the attic were stuffed with jewelry, watches, rare coins, currency, guns, appliances and other goods, police reported.

Mrs. Haynes was arrested after police said she tried to use a stolen credit card at a local store. Officers said she led them to the loot after her arrest.

Tighter Controls Requested

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Retail Gasoline and Automotive Service Association has asked J. J. Greene, federal energy minister to tighten enforcement of the national oil policy to prevent a gasoline price war in the province.

The 1,500-member association is concerned about the amount of lower-priced gasoline coming into Ontario from offshore crude oil refined in Quebec. The use of imported petroleum products west of the Ottawa Valley contravenes the policy set 10 years ago to stimulate the Canadian oil-producing industry.

K. W. Langdon, the association's executive secretary, said in a letter to Mr. Greene released Tuesday it praised the government's action May 7 in establishing licencing controls on imports of offshore gasoline. However it had proved inadequate because "bootleg gasoline is still flooding Ontario and threatening to cause hysteria by small gasoline retailers if another big price war develops from it."

The letter said in the last period of price discounting in Ontario, "about 35 per cent of gasoline dealers went out of business each year.

"You must not let this happen again and we have the power to prevent it by strict enforcement of the national oil policy," the letter said.

Two Bodies Recovered

PEMBROKE (CP) — Skindivers have recovered the bodies of two young Americans drowned in Lake Opeongo in Ontario's Algonquin Park after their canoe overturned in high winds Tuesday morning.

Police identified the two found Wednesday as Timothy Hardoven, 18, of Trospreospect, Ohio, and Donald Eugene Enzor, 24, of Greenwich, Ohio. The body of Charles Schnipiter, 17, of Chicago Heights, Ill. was recovered Tuesday.

Mountains Sought in Mediterranean

LA JOLLA, Calif. (AP) — The Scripps Institution of Oceanography says it will drill on the Mediterrean Sea bottom to determine whether mountains are being formed there.

The investigation is one phase of the National Science Foundation's Deep Sea Drilling Project, a $34,800,000 program to unlock the secrets of the world's ocean, a Scripps spokesman said Wednesday.

"There will be 13 Scripps scientists and technicians aboard when the drilling vessel Glomar Challenger leaves from Portugal next month on a 56-day drilling and coring expedition," says geologist Terence Edgar.

He said sampling of sea floor rocks and sediments will answer such questions about the Mediterranean as:

—Is a section of the Mediterranean actually "a relic of an extensive seaway between the European and Indo-African continents?"

—Did spreading of the floors of the Atlantic and Indian oceans cause a collision of the European, Asian and African continents and the creation of the mountain chain that stretches from the Alps to the Himalayas?

Many geologists believe the western Mediterranean basin was part of the European continent which sank 20,000,000 to 30,000,000 years ago.

Russia Expands Aid to Libya

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union has expanded its military aid to another Arab state with a shipment of equipment, including tanks, to Libya, United States sources say.

They report a Russian vessel recently landed a cargo of T-54 and T-55 medium tanks, trucks and other vehicles at Tripoli, apparently the first ship load of Russian-supplied military gear to reach Libya.

This development is significant, in the view of U.S. intelligence analysts, because it indicates the Libyans may have decided to turn to the Russians for their army equipment.

Although the Tripoli regime is considered in the leftist Arab camp, U.S. authorities have been hopeful the new Libyan leaders would not tie their country to the Soviets.

At least six other Arab countries are receiving military equipment and are considered generally to side with the Soviets against the United States on most issues: Egypt, Syria, Algeria, the Sudan, Iraq and Yemen.

The struggle for the strategically located North African country has been under way since last September when young Libyan army officers overthrew the generally pro-American King Idris.

The British and the Americans evacuated military bases at the request of the revolutionary government.

The United States has supplied Libya with some F-5 Freedom Fighter jets. In addition, the Libyans have been discussing with the French the possibility of acquiring some Mirage jet fighters.

The new Libyan leaders have tended toward strong ties with the neighboring Egyptians and some analysts have forecast the former Western airbases in Libya would be used by the Egyptian air force to train.

Floods Sweep Away 600

DEHRA DUN, India (Reuters) — About 400 out of 600 people swept away by heavy floods in the Himalayan foothills Wednesday may have saved themselves, according to reports reaching here Wednesday night.

The disaster occurred when 31 vehicles, mostly passenger buses, were engulfed by the rapidly rising waters and carried away into the Alaknanda River.

But the Garhwal Motor Owners Union, which operates most of the bus services in the hilly area, quoted reports from the area as saying that about 400 people were able to rush out of the vehicles before they were washed away.

Officials say the fate of all those involved, mostly Hindu pilgrims, is not yet known.

Unofficial reports from the area, completely cut off from the rest of the country by the floods, said almost 80 dead bodies were seen floating down the Ganges River.

TRY SALES WITH A SALARY

Do you feel that the effort you put into your work has little effect on your income? Have you considered a sales career? Why not look directly related to effort? Have you heretofore because you felt that there was no security in selling, that you had to be a "born salesman" to succeed?

If so, we would invite you to inquire about our "Sales With A Salary". We provide a basic salary plus usual staff benefits plus commission incentive. You need not be a "born salesman" — we provide basic sales training and field supervision to insure your success.

To qualify for this plan, you must have grade 12 education or equivalent; have a successful work experience, a reputation as an honest, reliable and conscientious person, willing to work hard and study to improve your business and vocational status.

Work Location — Belleville or Picton.

Canada Does Better Than U.S. In Slowing Increase in Prices

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada appears to be performing better than the United States in slowing the rise in consumer prices and in maintaining industrial production during North America's agonizing shift away from massive inflation.

But latest statistics show Canada has developed higher unemployment, its consumers are going more deeply into retailer debt, and business buyers seem less optimistic about the future than their U.S. counterparts.

Because of the dependence of much of Canada's economic health on conditions in the United States, authorities in this country can do little more than moderate the rub-off effects on Canada of booms and slump cycles in the U.S. economy.

Latest figures released by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics here, and by government agencies in Washington including the U.S. commerce department, give this picture of the two countries:

Prices — The Canadian consumer price index rose two-tenths of one per cent in June, while the U.S. counterpart index rose four-tenths of one per cent. The year-to-year ratio of consumer price increase in Canada began to slow down earlier than it did in the United States.

Production — Canada's index of industrial production declined eight-tenths of one per cent in May, but it remained well above a year ago. The U.S. index dropped three-tenths of one per cent in June to the lowest level since late 1968.

Unemployment — At mid-June it amounted to 6.1 per cent of the Canadian labor force in actual terms, and to 6.6 per cent when normal seasonal factors were taken into account. The U.S. commerce department's seasonally-revised unemployment rate for all civilian workers was 4.7 per cent; for white workers it was 4.5, and for Negro and other races it was 8.7.

Credit — Consumer credit outstanding in Canada in May this year was 8.8 per cent higher than a year earlier. Instalment financing was up 7.1 per cent. Comparable U.S. statistics showed an increase of 8.7 per cent in consumer credit in general, and 6.6 per cent in instalment financing.

Orders — Significant for the immediate business outlook are new orders placed with manufacturers for durable goods. Adjusted for seasonal variations, Canadian orders in April and May were running more than about 3.5 per cent below their March levels. In the U.S., new orders for durable goods advanced 1.8 per cent in May.

June Exports Set Record

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian exports exceeded $1,800,000,000 a month for the first time ever in June this year, rising nearly 20 per cent above last June's figure, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported Wednesday.

The preliminary total, subject to revision when more detail is available was $1,531,700,000, compared with $1,284,400,000 in June last year.

DBS said the buoyancy of exports, however, was "somewhat offset" by the rise of the floating exchange rate of the Canadian dollar."

The dollar was set free from its International Monetary Fund peg on June 1, and rose steadily in relation to the United States dollar. It has lately traded at nearly 98% cents U.S., making it more expensive for foreign buyers to pay for Canadian goods.

The effect of the higher dollar valuation is expected to be reflected more in export figures later in the year.

DBS said the boom in June exports brought the total for the first six months of 1970 to $8,442,900,000, up 11 per cent from $7,577,700,000 in the same period last year.

Passivity Road to Suicide

Trudeau No Reformer

HALIFAX (CP) — Those who believed Prime Minister Trudeau to be a great reformer committed to social justice have been proved disastrously wrong, Tommy Douglas (NDP—Okanawa-Whitby) said Wednesday night.

"In his two years in office, Pierre Elliott Trudeau has done less for the average or poor Canadian than any prime minister since the Second World War," Mr. Broadbent, the only declared candidate for the NDP national leadership in 1971, told a party rally.

Mr. Broadbent told the meeting the Liberal government's tax change proposals would do little if anything to raise the living standards of poor or low-income Canadians.

Blood in Urine May Be Harmless

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Prier J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.,
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I'm getting nervous. My doctor says I have blood in my urine. It's difficult for me to believe him. My urine is as clear as ever. And I don't have any kidney symptoms. He suggests that I go to a urologist for a complete kidney workup. I am interested in your reaction. — Mrs. G.

Comment: Would you have confidence in me, Mrs. G., if he said you have heart disease, ulcer or neurotic colitis? I presume you would believe him, otherwise you would not have him for your doctor.

Therefore, I believe you should have confidence in what he says. It's possible for red blood cells to show up under microscopic examination in an apparently blood-free urine. Only in gross hemorrhage is the urine red or dark.

You may wonder why he is sending you to a kidney specialist. Because he doesn't want to overlook anything. It's possible to have a "silent" (painless) stone in the bladder, ureter (kidney tube), or in the kidney pelvis which may cause microscopic bleeding.

So may an unsuspected tumor or the bladder or kidneys. So may kidney infection. Or, an infection like tuberculosis. Or, an hypertrophied prostate. Sometimes urinary bleeding will be an indirect result of infection on the heart valves (as in bacterial endocarditis).

Fortunately, often no serious reason is ever found for the bleeding. It may only be temporary, due to some small ulcer along the urinary tract that has healed — and given no further trouble.

But this is all guesswork and supposition. What I have been trying to emphasize, Mrs. G., is that your doctor is trying to practice good preventive medicine by discovering trouble early, so it can be eliminated. If you have lost confidence in him, better get another opinion before you undergo urological investigation. At least you will be using good sense in alleviating your fears rather than going along week after week concerned about what is causing the bleeding.

• • •

For Mrs. A.: The depression called involutional melancholia is a rare complication of the menopause. The fact that your mother suffered from it is not sufficient reason for believing that you will, too. Besides, special therapies used these days usually cure such depressions.

• • •

For Mr. T.: An enlarged prostate that disturbs your sleep nightly (three to four trips to the bathroom) certainly deserves more thorough investigation. I do not believe that weekly prostatic massages will overcome your problem.

Undoubtedly the prostate is encroaching on the neck of the bladder. This causes the residual urine which in turn causes frequent urination.

Too old for operation at 68? See if the urologist says okay. I have known many octogenarians who came through prostatic surgery safely and without complications.

• • •

For Mr. Y.: Doctors have ways of telling what is causing jaundice. Blood tests, liver tests, X rays, etc. Often we can't be too sure unless we put the patient through diagnostic mill. There are questions which we must ask and answer.

Is it due to hepatitis? To a stone caught in a bile duct? To cirrhosis? Or to something pressing on a bile duct from the outside? You can see how treatment may differ depending upon the cause of jaundice.

Jurists Make Charge

Brazilian Torturers Learned from U.S.

GENEVA (AP) — The International Commission of Jurists said Wednesday it has seen secret documents showing that U.S. experts are helping to suppress opposition in Brazil by methods which include the widespread use of torture.

In a nine-page report on conditions in Brazil the commission charged that parents are tortured in front of their children and priests are mutilated in the presence of brothers of their congregation.

It said there are at least 12,000 political prisoners in Brazil and cited "the daily confrontation between 1,000 tortured Brazilians and their persecutors in the barracks and jails of the country."

The report of the commission, a non-governmental organization with United Nations consultative status and supported by some 80,000 jurists throughout the world, said Brazil is in a latent civil war situation in which the government has launched a policy of "subversive war."

The report stated: "Brazilian officers have learned such methods from American experts and theoreticians whom they meet in great numbers either in their own military schools in Brazil or during regular training courses in the Panama Canal Zone."

In Washington, the state department declined immediate comment, saying it had not received official confirmation of the report.

The commission said some of its report is based on a document smuggled out of the Flower Island prison camp in the state of Guanabarra—the city of Rio de Janeiro—by a group of captives who requested that it should be published.

Hastings School Board May Reacquire Title to Tweed School

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

The controversy - racked sale of Tweed high school may be signed and sealed — but it's also unsettled.

The future of the building which sold the building, and Hastings and Prince Edward Separate School board, which bought.

The $138,500 sale was concluded June 30.

Now, minutes of a closed meeting of the board of education held Monday night reveal concern about a warning from Deputy Education Minister J. R. McCarthy on the economic ramifications of the transaction to both boards.

And, separate school board chairman E. J. Buckley this morning agreed that a rift exists between both boards, are in the offing.

The minutes of the Monday board meeting in Belleville say the school board is "gravely concerned" about Mr. McCarthy's letters. The record says the board should express willingness to "the separate schools authority to enter into conversations that may result in reclamation" of the Tweed school building.

Mr. Buckley said today, he imagined the next move will be that "the two groups will sit down", and discuss the differences.

The sale came in the wake of bitter protest from Tweed ratepayers who reasoned the school being closed by the

Weathermen Hunted For Terrorist Plot

DETROIT (AP) — United States agents search underground haunts today for 20 of the 13 members of the radical Weathermen organization indicted on charges of conspiring to build a nationwide revolutionary network to bomb and kill.

Some may have already sought sanctuary in Communist countries, said Assistant Attorney-General Will B. Wilson, head of the justice department's criminal division.

"If they are in the country, we'll catch them eventually," Wilson said in Washington after the indictments were made public Thursday.

Three of the accused were arrested Thursday.

Heading the list of seven women and six men charged with the plot were Mark Rudd, 23, who led a campus revolt at Columbia University in New York three years ago, and Bernadine Dohrn, 27, former national secretary of the Students for a Democratic Society, both missing.

The Weathermen faction broke away from the SDS a year ago.

The indictment charges the defendants conspired to "use bombs, destructive devices and explosives to destroy police installations and other businesses and educational buildings throughout the country and to kill and injure persons therein."

Wilson said only one alleged bombing attempt was carried out — at the Detroit Police Officers Association building.

Detroit police said a package containing 10 sticks of dynamite was thrown through a rear window of the building March 6, but did not explode.

In the far-reaching case, 15 persons were named co-conspirators but not defendants in the indictment, returned by a federal grand jury in Detroit.

These included Terry Robbins, Ted Gold and Diana Dugdon, who federal officials said were killed in a March 6 accidental explosion in a New York townhouse. Police said the townhouse was a centre for making bombs.

Those arrested Thursday were Russel Neufeld 23, Linda Sue Evans, 23 and Dianne Marie Donghi, 21. They were picked up at Chicago, Fort Dodge, Iowa and New York, respectively.

Nasser Accepts U.S. Proposals

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

President Gamal Abdel Nasser of Egypt says he accepts the latest United States proposals for Middle East peace negotiations, but he says they are "only procedural" and contain nothing new.

The proposals, made June 19 by U.S. Secretary William P. Rogers, call for a temporary Israeli-Egyptian-Jordanian ceasefire of at least 90 days and indirect Arab-Israeli peace talks through United Nations mediator Gunnar V. Jarring.

In a speech in Cairo Thursday night, Nasser said the same proposals have been made in the past by the UN Security Council and "it is Israel who rejects them." He said he does not expect the new U.S. initiative to achieve results "because of Israel's attitude and foolishness."

Rogers was reported "very encouraged" by Nasser's response, while Soviet Ambassador Anatoly F. Dobrynin transmitted to him.

Israel has not responded formally to Roger's proposals yet, but Israeli spokesman have rejected the idea of a temporary ceasefire, contending that it would only make Arab rearmament easier.

Nasser, speaking on the 18th anniversary of the revolution that overthrew King Farouk, said: "We do not want war for war's sake. We want to liberate our land and we want the rights of the Palestine people. We tell Nixon and the American people that we have accepted the American proposals as presented by Rogers."

But he added: "We do not see anything new in them since we have accepted them in the past. It is Israel who rejects them." He called the U.S. initiative "only a procedural move" similar to UN efforts that have failed because Israel failed to co-operate. . . .

"Israel . . . does not want peace but expansion."

The Egyptian president spoke to the 1,700-member congress of the Arab Socialist Union, Egypt's only political party.

There was a roar of applause when he declared Egypt's twofold aim: "Israeli withdrawal from all occupied Arab lands and recognition of the legitimate rights of the Palestine people."

He said the Israelis "have thus far refused in position the word withdrawal, and there was strong opposition in Israel against former premier Levi

Pearson Has Eye Removed

OTTAWA (CP) — Former prime minister Lester Pearson had his right eye removed "because of a tumor," Dr. Jean-Jacques Laurier, medical director of Ottawa General Hospital, said Thursday.

Dr. Laurier said the 73-year-old former Liberal leader's condition is excellent and the operation, performed Wednesday, "in no way constitutes a danger to his health."

But, because of the tumor, "it was essential Mr. Pearson's right eye be removed," he said.

Dr. Andrew G. Watson, chief of the department of opthalmology of the hospital, performed the operation.

Mr. Pearson, who returned to his Ottawa home after a month abroad fulfilling some engagements and holidaying in Australia, is expected to be in hospital for a week.

Tear Gas Tossed At MPs

LONDON (CP) — A 36-year-old supporter of Northern Ireland's dominant Catholic minority appeared in court today in connection with charges resulting from an explosion of two riot-gas grenades in the House of Commons Thursday. The gas is the type British troops have used on the Irish.

Lance Sgt. James Anthony Roche was charged with illegally possessing two grenades of CS tear-gas and nausea gas. He was ordered held in custody for another court appearance July 31.

Shouting "Belfast! See how you like it!," a man threw two grenades of the gas from the visitors' gallery of the Commons Thursday. Clouds of acrid smoke sent the legislators fleeing the chamber.

Those from the gas overcame Speaker Dr. Horace King, 69.

"I found him sitting there absolutely powerless to move," said Dr. Robert Grant-Ferris, the deputy Speaker, "I grabbed him by both arms, pulled him from the chair and sustained him out the back of the chamber."

The Northern Ireland Civil Rights Information Centre said the members of Parliament had been given a taste of "the substance to which the civilian population of Belfast and Londonderry has been subjected.

"Perhaps it will enable them better to assess the activities of the armed forces in the six-county area of Ulster," the predominantly Roman Catholic organization commented, in a statement.

Montreal Firm Makes Proposal

TRENTON—A million dollar municipal and commercial complex which would revitalize Trenton's downtown business section was proposed Thursday afternoon at a special session of town council.

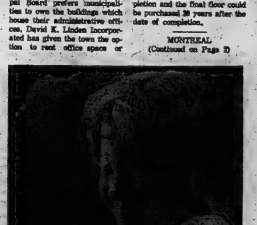
The proposal by David K. Linden Incorporated of Montreal resulted from the firm's feasibility study on development of the former Post Office property situated on Dundas Street West.

Council members will study the detailed proposal in depth and meet again with representatives of the Montreal firm Saturday, August 8.

Key to realization of the $1,100,000 development program is council's acceptance of a plan to locate the town's administrative offices on the first floor of the complex.

Because the Ontario Municipal Board prefers municipalities to own the buildings which house their administrative offices, David K. Linden Incorporated has given the town the option to rent office space or purchase portions of the structure on a condominium basis.

Estimated cost of the first floor, which has been designated as "town hall", is $138,900; while rental of the same area would be $42,000 a year for the initial five years.



The town would gain an option to buy another floor — approximately 8,500 square feet — 10 years from the date of completion and the final floor could be purchased 20 years after the date of completion.

'Big Bang' Theory Supported

Creation's Far Out Echoes Spotted in Space

WASHINGTON (AP) — United States Navy astronomers reported today discovery of new evidence supporting the "Big Bang" theory that the universe was created billions of years ago by the explosion of a fireball.

The evidence consists of x-rays believed to come from an invisible galaxy some 70 million-trillion miles from the planet earth, the team of navy scientists said.

The pattern and relatively low-level intensity of the x-rays substantiate Big Bang theoretical beliefs that space radiation has an extremely cold temperature.

The temperature would have to be "cold" to confirm the Big Bang theory. Earlier measurements taken in the Milky Way galaxy by high-level techniques have indicated space radiation is warm.

The Big Bang theory has long been the more heavily-favored of the two major concepts, to explain the birth of the universe.

It holds that some 10,000,000,000 years ago all the matter for a potential universe was contained in a primordial fireball — a massive single "atom" — having a temperature of 10,000,000,000 degrees.

This super-fireball lasted only a second, then exploded with a "Big Bang"—to eventually form all the stars, galaxies and planets.

The theory also holds that radiation from the initial blast still pervades the universe—so that at least some of the radio-waves detectable on earth by radio-telescopes represent, in effect, the whispers or echoes of creation itself.

The rival Theory to the Big Bang is the so-called Steady State concept—also known as "the theory of continuous creation."

It contends the universe has always been in a steady state, but that matter is continuously being fed into it—possibly just one atom at a time—and that this is what causes the universe to expand, rather than any primeval fireball.

The new evidence was obtained by an x-ray telescope carried 105 miles high by an Aerobee rocket launched from White Sands, N.M., missile range in April, 1968.

The telescope, in an up-and-down flight lasting only a few minutes, zeroed in on a spot-ically-lovable radio galaxy called Centaurus-A—the nearest of the powerful radio-emitting galaxies, the navy said.

The evidence dispels doubt recently cast on the Big Bang theory of the universe's creation, the scientists said.

The earlier reports were correct, the scientists said, but the data apparently were misinterpreted by scientists as possible challenges to the Big Bang idea.

The x-rays give strengthened support to the idea that a particular form of background radiation is actually a persistent remnant of the Big Bang—thereby constituting a kind of ghostly echo of creation itself.

The x-rays are "truly a measurement of the space radiation as it exists out in the cold environment of outer space, whereas the infra-red observations constitute just a measurement of the-background radiation within our own galaxy," the scientists said.

Dr. Herbert Friedman, Dr. T. A. Chubb and researcher Edward T. Byram, all of the Naval Research Laboratory, described their findings in a report to the technical journal Science and in an interview.

Better Communication Sought by UCS Head

Constant communication between various groups in the city is the best way to gauge social needs and plan social programs, according to Isidore Cooperman, executive director of United Community Services.

The UCS executive councillor will move to improve the communication links in the next few months by holding a series of meetings with local organizations.

First of these meetings will be for executives of the Quinte District Labor Council. It will take place at the Tops Motor Hotel on Tuesday and will be co-chaired by Robert Orr, president of UCS, and Robert Graham, president of the QDLC.

"It is hoped that these meetings will create the kind of community support and goodwill/understanding that can only lead to understanding," Mr. Cooperman said.

Trenton Hospital Gets Accredited

TRENTON — Trenton Memorial Hospital has again been granted provisional accreditation status by the Canadian Council on Hospital Accreditation, it was announced this morning.

John A. Lupton, administrator of the hospital, said that all departments of the hospital had been inspected by two surveyors on behalf of the council earlier this summer.

In order to be granted accreditation status — a certification of standards being met in the hospital — the hospital has to meet the standards laid down by the council, covering a wide range of subjects relating to patient care, and the safe and efficient management of all sections of the hospital.

"Granting of accreditation again confirms that the high-est standards of patient care exist in the hospital," Mr. Lupton said.

Montreal Firm Unveils Trenton Complex Plan

Totalling 42,380 square feet, the project would encompass the present Post Office site and adjoining properties which would be purchased by the developers.

Special features of the plan are retention of the old stone Post Office tower and construction of an all-conditioned mall which would link Dundas Street West with Quinte Street.

Situated on the ground floor with access to the mall would be two banks, ten retail stores and a restaurant which would overlook Fraser Park.

In all there will be 20,000 square feet of retail space and 22,700 square feet of office space.

Acceptance of the plan would see the closing of Albert Street and the demolition of the buildings just to the east of it.

Traffic would be diverted to a new street — joining Dundas Street West and Quinte Street — constructed just to the west of the complex where the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce now stands.

Trenton would contribute four properties — Albert Street, the Post office site, land to the rear of the Post Office, and a lane fronting on Albert Street — totalling 21,-758.5 square feet.

The town would sell the properties in part to the developers and exchange in part for new street allowance over the existing Bank of Commerce site.

Total cost to the town for construction of the complex is estimated at $64,150, including construction expenditures due to retention of the Post Office tower, land, relocation of Albert Street and population of services such as hydro, telephone gas lines, sanitary sewers and water mains.

Mr. Linden described the complex — which he tentatively named Trenton Square — as a "true town centre" and an attraction to many shoppers from the surrounding district.

Portions of the project will be finished in stone to blend with the present Post Office tower and the entire complex will be set back from Dundas Street West with landscaping which features open gardens on each end.

The presentation by the developers lists as "interested potential tenants" the town of Trenton, the province of Ontario, the Bank of Montreal, the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce and various local retailers.

It cannot accept the proposal by the Montreal firm — which was granted first refusal right to develop the Post Office site — representatives from the firm and council's Post Office committee will form a "steering committee" to hasten completion of the project.

A timetable drawn up by Mr. Linden suggests that demolition of existing properties commence March 15, 1971, with construction beginning one month later.

Completion of the retail space is slated for October 31, 1971, and target date for the entire project is April 15, 1972.

This timetable calls for preparation time of 7½ months, a demolition and construction time of 12 months, for a total development time of 19½ months.

One stipulation laid down by the developers is the necessity of securing advanced leases to a minimum of 85 per cent to reduce the risk element and assure a preferred interest rate which would contribute to the viability of the project.

Thursday's proposal by Dalvid H. Linden Incorporated, was the first concrete plan studied by council since Trenton purchased the Post Office property from the federal government in March, 1967.

In December, 1968, Trenton citizens voted for demolition of the old Post Office and creation of a civic square. The voters rejected disposal of the building by sale on the same ballot.

In the ensuing years there was much discussion about the property which was, in some quarters, labelled a "white elephant".

Council members declined to comment on the proposal Thursday, because they had not studied it in depth.

But Mayor Duncan McDonald has opposed the idea that the town play any part in development of the Post Office property.

He says that the town should sell the property and let someone else develop it, as he wishes.

Immigrant Integration No Problem in Belleville

Statements made last night by Provincial Secretary Robert Welch and the release of the Ontario Economic Council report, "Immigration and Integration" (story on page 5) raise the question, "what is the reception of immigrants situation like in the Quinte area?"

"There are between 100 and 300 immigrants to the Quinte district so far this year" one immigration official estimated, although separate figures are no kept for this area.

In Belleville alone, Mrs. Laura Haggerman of Welcome Wagon stated that her service had made more than 200 calls to new arrivals in the city since the first of the year. However, most of these were not new Canadians.

J. R. Staveley of the Canada Manpower office reports that in the last two years people from 27 ethnic groups have come to Belleville: "FiJi, Korea, South Africa — you name it, and we have had them all" he said.

Numbers of new Canadians locally may not be large but all parties concede that a good reception for them is essential.

Welcome Wagon is a private commercial agency sponsored by 30 local businesses. The service not only introduces newcomers to the community but also to the sponsoring businesses.

Government agencies help with housing and unemployment, when work is available, and help them get jobs-interviews for the Manpower Agency. Additionally, classes in the English language are given on a one-to-one need it, when numbers are sufficient.

One such course, under the direction of Dr. Dodsigard Corbett was held locally for more than 20 new Canadians earlier in the year, it ended in May.

Isidore Cooperman, executive director of United Community Services reported this morning that he will seek out statistics on the new immigrant situation when he con-

Economy Slowing All Over

OTTAWA (CP) — No matter how it's measured, Canadian business is in an economic slowdown from retail trade right back to the primary producer.

Although retail sales totalled a near-record $2,404,560,000 in May, over-the-counter business has not been keeping pace with last winter's business when the inflation factor is discounted.

The actual volume of goods and services changing hands was less in May than in January and the average for the previous two years. Higher prices, not more business, accounted for the increase in sales figures.

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics reports that, taking seasonal factors into account, retail sales in May ran to $2,278,200,000.

But consumer prices in May were 5.5 per cent higher than the average for 1968-69, and discounting the gross sales figure by that amount trims the volume of business to less than January or the 1968-69 average.

Retail sales averaged a record $2,117,700,000 a month in 1969 and $2,259,000,000 a month in 1969. In those years, the consumer price index, on average, was 128.1 and 125.3 respectively, counting 1961 prices as 100.

Since January this year, the price index has risen to 129.6 in May and 129.9 in June. The rate of increase, however, has slowed, advancing only 1.1 per cent in June over the index for 12 months earlier. The January index was 4.4-per-cent higher than in January, 1969.

Big Step To Toilet

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — A man looking for a place to go to the bathroom accidentally jumped over a retaining wall Thursday night and fell 100 feet into the Niagara Gorge.

William Bertrand, 27, of Campbellford, 36 miles southeast of Peterborough, is in fair condition in hospital with head injuries and multiple fractures of arms, legs and one hip.

Mr. Bertrand told rescuing firemen he and his wife were riding their motorcycle through Queen Victoria Park when he decided he had to go to the bathroom.

After parking the motorcycle, he asked a man where to go and the man suggested Mr. Bertrand hop over the retaining wall in front of the Niagara Parks Commission building.

Mr. Bertrand vaulted over the wall and fell 100 feet onto the rock rocks below. Firemen and police spent an hour getting the injured man out of the gorge, using an aerial ladder truck and a basket stretcher.

Third Graders Have Hit Song

MILL VALLEY, Calif. (AP) — The third graders at Strawberry Point School have mixed reactions about their smash hit record, a simple lilting song called Mill Valley.

Greg Berman, 8, says: "My mother stares at me all the time and my dad sings the songs while he shaves. Sometimes I'm lucky and get out before he starts."

Brian Friedman, 8, says: "I'm sort of getting tired of hearing it. The other day my mother made me come in because it was on the radio, and we were in the middle of a baseball game."

But Marie Verhaaren, 9, is delighted. "I like to sign autographs."

Cows Trapped More Than Week

After being missing for more than a week, 12 head of cattle owned by Don Associates of Marlbank, were found Thursday trapped in a concrete structure at an abandoned cement plant.

When found one of the cows was dead and the other eleven in poor condition from lack of feed and water.

The cattle were part of a herd of 34 pasturing on the old cement plant property about two miles from the Actinolite farm.

The cattle are believed to have pushed their way into the concrete structure during a lightning storm and were unable to get from when a door swung shut behind them.

Grant Structure Is Reason For Reconsidering Disposal

public schools board following a decision to move high school students to Moira.

The debate publicly lasted two years — almost until the sale was closed.

The letters from Mr. McCarthy discussing the situation posed by the sale were sent simultaneously to both boards.

In his letter to Mr. Buckler the deputy minister queried the need of such a purchase — its justification by projected enrolment and the availability of government funds.

The separate school board planned to use the old high school building as a kindergarten - to - Grade 10 facility.

Mr. McCarthy noted that elementary school enrolment in Ontario was expected to reach a maximum this September. Its rate of growth "decrees considerably" over the next 10 years.

In the Tweed-Hungerford area alone the birthrate had declined between 1963 and 1968, Mr. McCarthy pointed out.

The separate school board's need was for five classrooms — while the Tweed high school had 11 classrooms.

Mr. McCarthy's argument had acute financial repercussions for separate school ratepayers, for his letter pointed out that the cost of the actual plus renovations would approach $300,000. The maximum amount which might possibly be obtained in grant form would be $107,000, leaving the school board to raise the balance from other sources.

In a sharp appraisal of the economic health of the separate school system, the letter stated: "The amount of $192,000 to be raised locally would, therefore, be a staggering load to be borne by the separate school supporters for accommodation only a little more than a third of which is needed."

Mr. McCarthy pointed out an alternative for the board in providing accommodation, stating that five new classrooms costing $150,000 to $200,000 would be eligible for 50 per cent grant of $75,000 to $100,000, thus only requiring the separate school ratepayers to pay $75,000-$20,000.

In a general summation, the deputy minister said the operating costs of running the Tweed high school would impose a burden and "since the board already appears to be hard-pressed financially it is felt that all concerned ought to be fully knowledgeable of the implications of the disposition of costs i . . . and the department has a responsibility . . . to exercise prudence and caution in this matter."

In a letter to the Hastings Star in a letter to the Hastings school board, the deputy minister points out the public board has 19-18 portables for elementary school pupils in the area and that accommodation could be immediately available for them by moving into the Tweed High School.

Mr. McCarthy states that interest of the secondary school ratepayers, both separate and public, could be transferred to the public school panel for the sale price of $238,500 and says "the separate school supporters would, therefore, receive the benefit at the secondary school level of their equity in the Tweed High School. The public school ratepayers would only have to assume debentures to pay this equity plus whatever costs might be involved in renovations."

A third point was that ratepayers would not have to pay debentures on a new 10-12 room school at an estimated cost of $200,000.

Mr. McCarthy stated that "it was imperative that every possible economy be effected in the provision of school accommodation not only in the interests of local ratepayers . . . but also because capital funds are not available to provide for accommodation not absolutely essential."

Mr. McCarthy's letters to the school boards were mailed on June 25 and received June 29, 24 hours before the deadline for the sale. At that stage the separate school board decided to proceed with the purchase.

The Destroyers

"Canada's National Newspaper," The Globe and Mail, is at it again. Not content with belaboring the provincial Attorneys-General for their criticism of the LeDain Commission's recommendations on drugs (which briefly, would make things easier in the courts for persons accused of drug possession), it is now taking issue with an international police spokesman's warning to police killers.

Sydney Brown, who is president of both the Metro Toronto and International Conference of Police Associations warned conference delegates to the association's Montreal gathering that some immediate action was taken against police killers there might be "open warfare with on-the-street justice."

Mr. Brown pointed out that last week's murder of two Chicago police officers was not an isolated incident. He personally knew of at least 80 such incidents during the last 11 months or so.

Branding Mr. Brown's remarks (which were supported by a unanimous vote) as "the rhetoric of violence," The Globe and Mail continues: "It is particularly offensive, therefore, that a person whose commitment to the public interest should prevent him from verbal extremism has entered the rhetoric and has issued his ultimatums. . ."

This of course is arrant nonsense. And dangerous too, yet it is typical of the editorial outpourings of the Toronto newspaper these days. We might ask, to whom are the police official's remarks offensive? The man with a gun in his hand? The bank robber? The drug trafficker? The professional anarchist, whose business it is to drum up dissent and violence in cities and on university campuses?

Look at what has been happening in Vancouver. The city was invaded by transient youths — the rootless from all over the country — and last Saturday night 300 of them created a disturbance in the downtown area which led to 25 arrests. One youth was pictured twisting the aerial of a police motorcycle — a scene typical of this category of youth's attitude to life generally, its arrogance and rejection of authority as well as of the rights of others.

The rally, significantly, even had a label: "Rally Against Repression" which once again suggests the hand of the professional agitator. One wonders what The Globe and Mail would have to say to this?

Recently The Globe sought to discredit FBI director J. Edgar Hoover's warning about the activities of the Weathermen and the Black Panthers, suggesting in effect that today's society was responsible in the growth of such subversive groups. The editorial spoke of youth as "closed out . . . frustrated . . . not heard . . . never recognized."

In a letter to the Toronto newspaper recently a medical doctor, J. A. Sullivan described it as "the arch exponent and mouthpiece of the permissive society." But do we hear the voice of large vocal segments of such thinking in the business world concerned? What is the attitude of the churches? Of the man in the street? What about the service clubs? Are the womenfolk concerned about this overall threat to western society?

If there is concern among any of these groups, or among the vast "silent majority," none of them is saying so publicly. The leftist press, the apostles of permissiveness and the wilder elements of our youth, on the other hand, are saying plenty.

One glaring, disturbing example: Secretary of State Gerard Pelletier of all people, in an address over CBC television (another purveyor of leftist sentiments) has predicted the end-of the monarchy in Canada. Mr. Pelletier asserted he said in part, "has been accused of suppressing the Canadian cost of arms, but it really does not matter. We could put Schenley's (the distillery) coat-of-arms on government buildings and no one would know the difference. These symbols do not mean a thing in the 20th century."

Just the sort of seditious comment that will be the delight of propagandists in Moscow and Peking. Would Trudeau fire the minister for such a remark? Not likely.

Wake up Canadians!

Lost Summer

We had been beginning to wonder what had happened to the summer, or whether it would be one of having a "cold spring April" when the sun was shining brightly and it was warm and indeed people were almost expiring from the unseasonably high temperatures. As we write, the forecast is for the mercury to struggle up to the mid-seventies and for a "sunny" day. But then Sunday was to have been "mainly sunny," and look what happened to it — not to mention Monday's monsoonal downpour. Anyway we live in hope, and now, with the end of the week approaching there are definite signs of improvement.

Tactics of Subversion

Presidential Programs Being Sabotaged by Own Staff

Regina Leader Post

A Washington correspondent the other day wrote that President Nixon has deep internal problems within his administration.

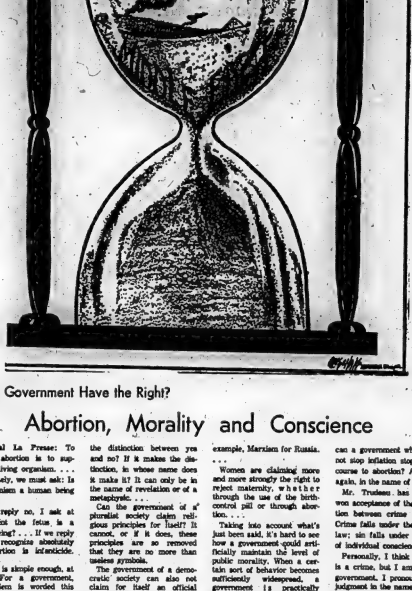
These difficulties with the major departments and agencies are potentially far more dangerous to the success of his term in office than the opposition he faces in Congress. What is involved essentially is near sabotage by a considerable number of higher officials just below the sub-cabinet level — in the so-called super grades, the correspondent wrote.

Regularly in a number of departments and agencies, key officials slow down White House programs, or specific aspects they don't agree with. They "massage" the paper work and "massage" it again, working it over and sending it back and forth for further checks and conferences — so that action is forever delayed. Things don't get done, he said.

These same men, the three White House programs in open group meetings with their subordinates. They repeatedly make degrading remarks about this action or that, or this official or that. They openly ridicule members of their staffs and men from other agencies who argue for the President's point of view. This effectively wears down morale.

When a man, entrusted with formulating policy, makes plans to leave his job, they hold up their report to personnel until they have found a replacement from within their own camp.

Former President Johnson has spoken of the leaving down from within he says was done during his term by holdover appointees from the Kennedy administration.



It would be easy to say bad news was part of Nixon's problems, but that would not be true, the correspondent added.

Much of the hidden opposition comes from men appointed since Nixon came into office. Some are Republicans, some Democrats and some independent. Some are the proponents of Nixon's opponents within the Republican party.

Most of these men are presidential appointees and could be removed by the president. Some have been. Most have not, the correspondent said.

Honorable men in policy posts would resign if they could not carry out the program of a president with whom they conscientiously disagree.

After leaving his job, a man in strong disagreement could argue and disagree all he could not support. The man mentioned by the correspondent, however, have chosen another course.

Does Government Have the Right?

Abortion, Morality and Conscience

Montreal La Presse: To practice abortion is to suppress a living organism. . . . Immediately, we must ask: Is this organism a human being or not?

If we reply no, I ask at what point the fetus is a human being? . . . If we reply yes, we recognize absolutely that abortion is infanticide. . . .

All this is simple enough, at bottom. For a government, the problem is worded this way: Can a government make the distinction between yes and no? If it makes the distinction, in whose name does it make it? It can only be in the name of revelation or of a metaphysic. . . .

Can the government of a pluralist society claim religious principles for itself? It cannot, or if it does, these principles are so removed that they are no more than useless symbols. . . .

The government of a democratic society can also not claim for itself an ethical philosophic doctrine as, for example, Marxism for Russia. . . .

Women are claiming more and more strongly the right to reject maternity, whether through the use of the birth-control pill or through abortion. . . .

Taking into account what's just been said, it's hard to see how a government could artificially maintain the level of public morality. When a certain sort of behavior becomes sufficiently widespread, a government is practically obliged to take action. How can a government which cannot stop inflation stop the recourse to abortion? And once again, in the name of what?

Mr. Trudeau has already won acceptance of the distinction between crime and sin. Crime falls under the rule of law; sin falls under the rule of individual conscience.

Personally, I think abortion is a crime, but I am not the government. I pronounce this judgment in the name of principles which a government cannot lay claim to. . . .

All I feel capable of saying for the moment is this: The modification envisaged for the present law should lead to correct the situation under which the government finds itself making the distinction, in fact, between crime and sin and where the poor are involved.

Quebec's Medicare Program

Montreal Le Devoir: It's settled. Doctors who do not adhere to the medical care insurance program in Quebec will not have the right to any reimbursement from the insurance board. They will have to get their payment directly from the patient who himself will have no right to reimbursement through the program. . . .

In its original form, Health Minister Castonguay's bill provided that the patient of a non-participating physician could have recovered 75 per cent of his medical costs from the board if the number of non-participating physicians (in his area or specialty) did not exceed three per cent.

Medical specialists through their professional federation, estimated that the (three percent) limit was too rigorous, and they opposed it. In opposition to this, the common front of the four major union federations (the Confederation of National Trade Unions, the Quebec Federation of Labor, the Quebec Teachers' Corporation and the Catholic Farmers Union) found the legislation too generous and called for denial of any payment to non-participating doctors.

The most realistic solution would probably have been to change nothing in this section of the bill. Maintenance of these clauses would have been a sort of compromise.

The doctors argued in part that this limit on non-participation and on payment to non - participating physicians . . . was too restrictive in regard to the number of physicians allowed to opt out with the plan remaining in effect. . . .

The . . . argument . . . has some(s) weight, at least in the North American context. In all the Canadian provinces the right of doctors not to belong to the regime is recognized, and without penalty. . . .

Under Quebec conditions, Quebec doctors come under obligations to a system which exists nowhere else in the country or in the United States. . . .

The rest of the continent may be wrong but the phenomenon cannot help but influence the reaction of our own doctors.

Royal Family's Achievement

Winnipeg Free Press

The Royal Family has come and gone, the Queen and Prince Philip home to England, Prince Charles and Princess Anne for a visit to Washington. They have left behind in the minds and hearts of many thousands of Canadians memories of a gallious, likable and hard-working family whose genuine warmth and friendliness endeared them to all who met them.

The job of royalty is not easy. The pace set during the 11-day Canadian tour, both in the Northwest Territories and even more in Manitoba, was a gruelling one. It would have prostrated many individuals. Nor were conditions at all times exactly conducive to non-stop gracious-ness. There were mosquitoes and black flies in the north in bad enough for Canadians who are used to them, but much worse for anyone coming up against them for the first time. There was dust and heat and rain and cold. There were thousands of people to be greeted, thousands of hands to be shaken, dozens of informal chats, not a few formal speeches. And at all times the Royal Family knew, as must always be the case that every eye present was on them.

They came through with flying colors. Undoubtedly, as they are not superhuman, there were times when their unspoken thoughts did not quite match the smile on their faces when they were even the odd occasion when, if report is correct, even in the case of the younger members impatience showed. But these were very few and far between. The overwhelming impression left by the visitors was that of a dedicated family, sincerely interested in everything they saw and everyone they met and truly appreciative of the reception they were given wherever they went. As a result, in the Northwest Territories and in Manitoba, at least, the monarchy has seldom stood in higher regard and esteem.

A $12,000 Home for Canadians?

Hamilton Spectator

Twelve thousand dollar homes with $600 down and monthly payments between $97 and $117, may be available to Hamilton buyers in the $4-6,000 - a - year slot this year, according to a federal forecast.

The government hasn't sold home money of the houses will be built, where they'll be built or who's going to build them but, with a $200 million housing bank roll, Ottawa evidently means business.

About time. Average income earners have been nearly priced out of home ownership by high land and construction costs and the even higher costs of money, tied to inordinate local taxes, some municipal and provincial service requirements and house building practices that serve more to produce taxes — than to create safe and healthy conditions.

Canada is in a social metamorphosis, the reluctant change from a population of home owners to a race of tenants, a change that seems tragically unnecessary to a nation abundantly endowed with space, materials, technical expertise, industrial capacity and capital.

Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation expects the government to be able to put up dwellings — row houses and condominiums (occupant - owned apartments) — of between 900 and 1,150 square feet for prices cited above.

If CMHC can pump enough of the low-income money into the country's urban housing markets, supply might catch up with demand and reverse prices to a reasonable level, once again making home ownership possible to most Canadians.

Ottawa doesn't deserve a rap roses for its response to the housing crisis of recent years. Canadians will start appreciating the new low-cost units when they see with their own eyes government at least is ready and willing to tackle the problem, however late in the game.

And this is where Queen's Park and city hall enter the picture. With their active help, new government housing could be accelerated and, in many cases, expired in price — simply by sparing provincial and municipal governments the expense and trouble of red tape and unreasonable building and servicing rules.

Although Ottawa is carrying the ball, the provincial and local governments have definite responsibilities to see that the housing scheme doesn't get bogged down or sidetracked through their actions or inactions. Remove housing is their problem too.

Cabinet Address

State Secretary and the Monarchy

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

Answering questions on the CBC Television program Encounter last Saturday, Secretary of State Gerard Pelletier downgraded the Queen, the Cost of Arms, and spoke of "the force of things" eventually ending the Monarchy in Canada.

Equally illuminating on bilingualism, the Minister hammered home the point that "people want service in their own language when they have dealings with the Government they elected".

These candid comments by the Canadian Secretary of State deserve a candid reply.

Surely such remarks immediately following the Royal Visit to this country reveal extremely bad taste.

Does the Minister not know that The Crown will withstand "the force of things" much longer than the present Liberal government that speaks with too much of a French accent from Ottawa?

Millions of loyal Canadians from Newfoundland to British Columbia, respect The Crown and the Cost of Arms and will not support federal politicians who would cut our ties with the British Commonwealth and classify our Cost of Arms at the same level as a distiller's label.

Compulsory bilingualism has backfired. The Canadian culture is fed by peoples of more than 30 nationalities. All are Canadians and have dealings with the Government. Would the Minister follow his reasoning through to the conclusion that civil servants be required" to speak in 30 tongues?

Government Already Taking Steps to Aid Immigrants: Welch

TORONTO (CP) — Provincial Secretary Robert Welch said Thursday night the government already is taking some of the steps to help immigrants which are recommended in a report by the Ontario Economic Council.

"We have really been ahead of the report in recognizing the needs that are in the report," he said in commenting on the council's call for a comprehensive program to help immigrants adjust to Canadian society.

The report of the Economic Council, objective as it was, makes an interesting way the intentions of the government in this whole area," he said.

Mr. Welch, whose department is responsible for citizenship, noted that Premier John Robarts had announced in the speech from the throne in February that the department would be re-organized and expanded to provide a "total citizenship program."

The council report, issued earlier Thursday, said immigrants to Canada face many problems from both the government and people of Canada who regard the newcomers as "a manpower unit to be plugged into the production machine."

It recommends 22 major reforms to be undertaken by provincial and federal departments and private agencies dealing with the selection, admission, education and welfare of immigrants.

The major needs, the report says, is for establishment of an agency by the provincial citizenship department to co-ordinate the efforts of over-lapping government and private bodies.

Other recommendations call for reception centres to welcome immigrants at major points of entry to the province; improved language training; orientation programs and a provincial information service.

Mr. Welch said that when the re-organization of his department is completed "it will really become the department of citizenship and community affairs, although it may not be called that."

"It would include work among our native people, newcomer reception and orientation, leisure activities and recreation and cultural affairs—with emphasis certainly on people and their day-to-day affairs."

He noted that the first step in this programme was taken in April, when the community development branch, formerly under the department of welfare and family services, was moved to citizenship "to help form the foundation for this expansion."

"The government really has anticipated many of the concerns and needs of this report. We in the department have, in fact, been spending a great deal of time on re-organization in keeping with these references."

The economic council said, the department has joined with Hamilton city council and the Hamilton social planning council to set up an information bureau for immigrants as a pilot project.

The department plans to establish other such bureaus.

The purpose of the bureau will be to give the government some idea of what it should be contributing, what part it should play in the information system, he said.

Mr. Welch added that his department now spends most of its budget on language training for teachers and in areas where boards of education and other agencies do not supply language classes for immigrants.

"We recognize the need for community information—not only for newcomers but for established residents and indeed a new class, the migrant."

The 85-page report, titled Immigrant Integration, was prepared for the council by Elizabeth Ferguson of Toronto who published two reports on immigrant problems during four years with the International Institute of Metropolitan Toronto and served as an immigration consultant to the federal government for a 1969 study.

The council, with 30 members representing business, labor, agriculture, consumers, universities and government agencies, was set up by the province in 1962 to spur Ontario's economic development.

The report says new Canadians get "the cold-shoulder treatment" in Ontario and they may wait years to see the inside of a Canadian home.

"The native-born Canadian must recognize his role in providing stability and direction to a changing society and Ontario, which has gained so much from immigrants, must take the lead in developing a national program.

Highlights of the report's recommendations include:

—The federal government should provide a year of specialized assistance for immigrants, counselling them for entry into the labor force.

—More effective controls should be established for procedures of entry and the processing of immigrant applications for landed status.

—The federal government should move immediately to provide more help to Ontario to support language instruction "in areas of high immigrant concentration."

—Agencies and institutions dealing with large numbers of immigrants should employ staff with "appropriate" language skills and knowledge of the cultural background of immigrants.

—The professions of teaching, nursing, social work, medicine and law should place more emphasis on courses in the cultural background of immigrants.

Sinking of Arrow Found Result of 'Improper Navigation'

OTTAWA (CP) — An investigation has determined that the sinking of the tanker Arrow off the Nova Scotia coast last March 4 was the result of "improper navigation" by the tanker captain, the transport department announced Thursday.

In a brief news release, the department said this was the finding of Mr. Justice G. I. S. Hart of the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia, who presided over a formal investigation into the grounding and subsequent sinking of the tanker.

His report said the system of navigational aids in and around Chedabucto Bay, where the tanker went down, was "perfectly adequate" and the cause of the sinking must rest with the tanker's captain, George Anastassiou.

Mr. Justice Hart presided over a formal investigation, known as a Canada Shipping Act, into the grounding of the freighter on Cerberus Rock in Chedabucto Bay. The department release said his report on the inquiry was submitted to Transport Minister Don Jamieson Thursday and summarized the findings in two short paragraphs.

The release noted that Mr. Justice Hart will be holding no other investigation under the Inquiries Act.

The heavy oil pollution caused by the Arrow sinking, the damage done by it and costs for cleaning it up are to be covered in this investigation.

The department said Mr. Justice Hart, summing up his full report, said the captain's improper navigation lay in "failing to maintain his plotted course into Chedabucto Bay and in failing to check his ship's position in relation to the plotted course for over an hour, while he was proceeding at virtually full speed through waters unfamiliar to him."

A warning buoy on Cerberus Rock was in its proper station and well within visual range of the Arrow, a tanker owned in Greece but registered in Liberia.

The system of navigational aids in and around the bay was "perfectly adequate for the guidance of Canadian and foreign-going ships approaching the Strait of Canso through Chedabucto Bay," the report said.

Mercury Use Curbed

OTTAWA (CP) — The agriculture department has banned chemical firms the use of mercury-containing seed treatment products that will not be allowed for 1971 except in cases where there are no alternative chemicals, a department spokesman said Thursday.

The restriction is prompted by added concern about the effects of mercury substances on birds and other wildlife and on human food contaminated by the treated seeds.

Seeds for planting are treated with mercury compounds to prevent growth of fungi.

Provinces Move Slowly to Meet Threat of Measles

By KLAUS JONAS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Despite warnings that a German measles epidemic may be on the doorstep, provincial health authorities are moving slowly to institute mass inoculation programs.

A cross-Canada survey by The Canadian Press shows that some health authories find the incidence of German measles too low to warrant immediate action.

Others are considering programs when school opens this fall but most will only scratch the surface.

Reluctance to adopt programs, the survey found, stems partly from the fact that vaccination costs money, about $3 a child.

But a more important consideration appears to be that the most effective vaccine on the market is still unproven.

The vaccine, doctors warn, should not be taken by pregnant women because it poses dangers to their unborn children.

The latest measles warning came from a meeting of the Canadian Pediatrics Society in Winnipeg.

The incidence of measles has soared in recent months, the society said, and urged all health authorities to institute mass inoculation programs.

A resolution warns that defective children could be born in Canada this winter if no efforts are made to bring the disease under control.

German measles, or rubella, as opposed to red measles, was regarded as an innocuous children's disease until the early 1940s.

Rubella produces a slight pea-sized blush rash, swollen glands and fever but the symptoms are so mild that four cases of five cases go unnoticed.

The virus is highly communicable and almost everyone is susceptible to it.

In Canada's worst measles epidemic, in 1962, 862 persons died of red measles but only 20 of rubella.

The latest epidemic in 1964 resulted in 58 deaths from red measles and 11 from rubella.

But doctors found that in a pregnant woman the disease may have a serious effect on the fetus, particularly when the infection occurs in the first two months of pregnancy.

The CP survey showed that British Columbia is working on an immunization program to get under way in September.

An estimated 70,000 children from age 11 downward will be covered but there is no program for all 400,000 children in the age one to 11 group. Such a program would cost the province $400,000.

The British Columbia Medical Association said there already is a measles epidemic in the province with cases amounting to 10 times the average. The association asked for a program for all children.

Ontario plans to inoculate children in the first four grades of elementary school, a spokesman for the department of health said.

Dr. J. S. Bell said he did not think German measles will reach epidemic proportions this year.

"But I suppose we'll just have to wait and see."

Reported cases of measles in the first six months were moderately lower than last year, he said.

Newfoundland and New Brunswick have no plans for immunization programs, spokesmen for provincial health departments said. They said there are no indications of an epidemic.

In Halifax, Dr. David G. McCurdy of the Nova Scotia health department, said the province is thinking about a vaccination program this fall but has no firm plans.

Dr. C.H. Curtis, deputy health minister in Prince Edward Island, said his province is also considering a vaccination program this fall. Both found there was no increase in reported measles cases.

Health officials in Manitoba feel that the new vaccine should be further tested before it is administered to the whole population. A spokesman for the health department said the low incidence of measles is 20 times higher than in June, 1969, but the province has no immunization program.

In Regina, the director of the communicable disease control for the Saskatchewan government, said the measles question should be seen in "a reasonable perspective."

"By the time we get to child-bearing age, 85 per cent of us are already immune to German measles."

Saskatchewan's health consultants will meet later this month to consider a program.

There is no immunization program in Alberta and apparently no plans for one, officials said. Dr. P.B. Rose, deputy health minister, said:

The Quebec government plans to offer the vaccine this year to all children from 11 months to puberty. In case of an epidemic the program would be speeded up.

B.C. Pulp Union Will Defy Law

VANCOUVER (CP) — The relative calm that prevailed for 24 hours in the continuing labor-management crisis in British Columbia was shattered on Thursday night when a pulp union announced it would strike six pulp mills today in defiance of provincial labor law.

The 8,000-member Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada said it had decided to go ahead with a planned strike at 8 a.m. PDT after obtaining legal advice.

Leslie Peterson, B.C. labor minister, immediately issued a re-appointed mediation officer Gus Leonides for a further 15-day period in a bid to head off a strike. Under B.C. law, no strike may take place while a dispute is under investigation.

Union president Fred Mollin said the government action was warranted intervention with the workers' right to strike.

He said it was incumbent that the PPWC, following expiry of its collective agreement and the breakdown of subsequent bargaining, did not consider strike action until the mediation officer had made his report.

"The minister of labor has now appointed the mediation officer to continue conferring with the parties," Mr. Mollin said. "After obtaining legal advice, we believe it is now lawful for strike action to be taken by us."

He said the union would continue to negotiate with employers and confer with the mediation officer while the strike was in progress.

Mills affected are the B.C. Forest Products plant at Crofton, the MacMillan Bloedel plant at Harmac and the Tahsis mill at Gold River, all on Vancouver Island, Crownbrook Pulp and Paper Ltd. at Skookumchuk, Fraser Mills Pulp and Paper, and the Reynolds Cannelcel plant at Woodfibre, all on the mainland.

Mr. Mollin said the PPWC hopes separate contracts with mills at Prince Rupert and Castlegar. He said neither was included in the strike order.

The PPWC originally sought an hourly increase of $1, on a basic rate of $3.50. The union reduced its demand to 75 cents, plus a cost-of-living escalation clause.

The PPWC strike decision came only 24 hours after a blockade of forest products was removed out in the B.C. construction industry after pressure by A. C. Bennett brought both sides together to negotiate under the guidance of Mr. Peterson.

Construction Workers Said Frustrated

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Insecurity and frustration caused by what they call restrictive labor legislation is at the root of pressure cooker in Canada's construction industry, a national labor leader said Thursday.

William Ladyman, general vice-president of the Canadian Labor Congress and international vice-president of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, said in an interview that governments are relying too much on the "exercises" of "academics."

Governments are taking the reports of the academics and "applying the most restrictive legislation," he said.

He noted that construction work is readily available for only six to eight months a year and "normal" wage guidelines cause uncertainty for construction workers "who should have the same opportunity to get the same pay as others."

A Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press showed unrest among the construction trades in British Columbia, Saskatchewan, Ontario, Quebec and Nova Scotia.

Alberta and Manitoba each reported only one minor construction dispute this year. Newfoundland, Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick reported no unrest in the construction industry.

In Saskatchewan, compulsory arbitration was imposed by the government June 30 to end an 11-week walkout that tied up construction across the province.

The strike originated from a demand by the plumbers and electricians' unions for an increase in the $4.55-an-hour scale for journeymen.

Construction workers demanding wage parity with Montreal have been striking in Quebec for up to two weeks. About 14,000 walked out at Sagueanay-Lac St. John, Northern Hauterive and Sept-Iles and the Hull-Ottawa Valley regions.

Labor movement activity follows a 25-day strike in May that halted $200,000,000 in construction across the province. It ended when agreement was reached on the installation of a union steward at all sites using more than seven workers.

The Confederation of National Trade Unions and the Quebec Federation of Labor have been negotiating for five months with the province's five associations of contractors.

Workers earning $2.85 an hour as laborers to $4.96 as plumbers and boilermakers are demanding a 75-cent increase over three years.

The Nova Scotia construction industry, wracked this year by strikes over numerous issues, has settled momentarily with a provincial commission studies the unrest.

Reasons given for the strikes, which have tied up at least $30,000,000 in construction for varying periods, have ranged from wage disputes to protests against the hiring of foremen from outside the province.

Alberta's only incident occurred at Bisset, 200 miles west of Edmonton, early in July. Workers held a sit-down demonstration to protest tight security measures at a construction site and were fired for one week, then re-hired.

Manitoba had a 21-day strike from June 16 to July 9 by 180 plasterers in several areas over a wage dispute. They settled for increases ranging from 55 cents to $1 an hour on hourly rates of $1.85 to $3.07 an hour.

Toronto Building Unions Planning One-day Strike

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto Building and Construction Trades Council called Thursday for a one-day strike Aug. 18 by 27,000 construction workers in Metropolitan Toronto.

The council said its 22 unions would hold a rally at Maple Leaf Gardens that day "to inform our members of the dangers of the drastic proposed changes in the Labor Relations Act," said Alexander Main, manager of the council.

The decision followed a recommendation by the Building and Construction Trades Council of Ontario for one-day rotating strikes throughout Ontario.

Workers in London and Windsor have decided to stay off the job July 31. Dates have not been for other centres except Toronto.

Labor Minister Dalton Bales said earlier Thursday that the series of rotating strikes would be illegal and harmful to industrial relations.

He said he would "welcome any constructive suggestions" for reconciling the views of labor, management and the public.

Henry Kobryn of Windsor, secretary of the trades council, called Wednesday for the rotating strikes and also a province-wide, one-day strike by the building trades unions to coincide with the opening of the legislature in Ottawa.

However, David Archer, president of the Ontario Federation of Labor, said in reference to the possibility of a general strike that "the industrial unions have not discussed the matter.

"It's too early to tell what, if anything, they may do."

Murder Motive Is Said 'Bizarre'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The curtain goes up today in the Sharon Tate murder trial with a young prosecutor ready to outline the state's case against four hippie-type defendants.

Deputy District Attorney Vincent Bugliosi said privately that in his opening statement he would disclose the reason the beautiful, pregnant actress and six others were slain last August 9 and 10.

"The motive is even more bizarre than the killings themselves," he said.

After Bugliosi finishes, the state is expected to begin calling a battalion of witnesses, aiming to prove that Charles Manson, 35, spread his young followers on a murderous mission last August.

The state will try to show that Manson held a strange dominion over members of his hippie-style "family," including the three openly charged in trial with the seven deaths — Leslie Van Houten, 20, and Patricia Krenwinkel, 22.

All are charged with murder-conspiracy. The prosecution is expected to bring forth members of Manson's nomadic cult to tell of their communal life at the Spahn Ranch and their use of a fortress-like encampment near Death Valley.

Miss Kasabian, 21, onetime member of Manson's clan and mother of two babies, is reported to have agreed to tell what she knows of the killings in exchange for immunity from prosecution. She'll take the stand Monday, and the prosecution says she may testify for as long as five days.

The life style of Miss Tate's social set is expected to be brought up by the defense.

Lawyer Paul Fitzgerald, representing Miss Krenwinkel and heading the defense team, has alleged in a court document that one victim — Jay Sebring — engaged in acts of sadism with young women. He also alleged that two other victims — Abigail Folger and Wojciech Frykowski — were known narcotics users.

Both Sexes Wear Gowns

PARIS (AP) — Jacques Esterel, who designed summer dresses for men, is following suit for fall and winter 1970. At his first showing this morning, menswomen of both sexes were wearing bouffant gowns inches from the ground.

"Elegance means feeling good in your skin," said Esterel, who is fighting "anachronistic taboos." His latest discovery is the bodystocking, to be decorated with bermudas, capes, boleros or necklaces.

For a wedding, his bride and groom were twinned in flesh-colored bodystockings under see-through white maxi dresses encrusted with gold and orange sequins. The wedding party showed up in black bodystockings with fur pelts wrapped around their heads, thighs, arms and waists.

For day, Esterel believes in robes with inserses floppy hoods or capes whose sleeves are slit and frill to midcalf. Midcalf pants or skirts, for men and women, are slit almost to the waists. Colors are provocative contrasts of burgundy, plum, mustard, red and olive green.

Popular Cereals Have Little Nutritional Value

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some of the most heavily-advertised cereals—including Wheaties, Cheerios and the top brand of shredded wheat and corn flakes —have about as much nutritional value as a shot of whisky, United States Senate investigators were told today.

They take the first strike to prevent malnutrition . . . they have calories and little else," Robert H. Choate, a Washington nutritional specialists, told a Senate consumer subcommittee.

"If a family likes dry cereals and can afford them, there are several with respectable nutritional content," he said in a prepared statement accompanying a detailed study of 60 cereal brands on the market.

"But," he said, "it is apparent, in the case of several food industry analyses that we humans are viewed not as beings to be nourished, but as suckers to be sold."

Armed with charts, graphs and samples of television ads, Choate presented a sweeping indictment of the cereal industry and called for a congressional investigation. The industry already is the subject of a Federal Trade Commission investigation.

Cereal makers will be given a chance to respond later, subcommittee aides said.

Choate said a frequent defence of the dry-cereal industry takes the form of describing a cereal's nutritional value in combination with sugar and milk.

But, Choate said, his studies showed "the average cereals—those outside the top 20—fall as a complete meal even with milk added."

"A study of 60 ready-to-eat cereals reveals that they are primarily calorie sources, the nutrient content of 40 of the 60 being so low as to escape the observer of the term 'empty calories,' a term thus far applied to alcohol and sugar," Choate said.

Submitting a chart ranking 60 popular cereals, Choate said "three of the cereals—Kellogg's Product 19 and General Mills' Kaboom and Total—rate clearly the best from a nutrient standpoint."

He listed six others which he said seem nutritionally meritorious. They are Quaker Oats, General Bran, Quaker Oats Life, General Foods Fortified Oat Flakes, Kellogg's Special K, General Foods Super Sugar Crisp and Kellogg's Sugar Smacks.

"The bottom 40 seem to warrant the term 'empty calories,' " Choate said.

Included in this group were Cheerios ranked 28th; Grape Nuts Flakes, 29th; Wheaties, 39th; Kellogg's Corn Flakes 39th; Kellogg's Shredded Wheat, 52; Post Toasties, 54; Quaker Oats Shredded Wheat, 57; Nabisco Shredded Wheat, 60.

Asked about the Canadian breakfast situation, Dr. A. R. Morrison, assistant deputy director - general of the food and drug directorate in Ottawa, said: "We are way ahead of the Americans.

He said Canada has had regulations since 1949 on what cereal manufacturers can say about nutritional content.

He said he conducted research 13 years ago for the directorate on the nutritional value of cereals sold in Canada. Regulations were established to require cereal to have a certain protein rating before any claim could be made about nutritional value.

MOUNT JULIAN, Ont. (CP) — After 50 years she's still the boss.

Eva Isaacson, 81, is the owner-manager of the Viamede Hotel, the oldest, busiest and one of the most attractive summer hotels in Ontario's Kawartha resort district.

In 1920 she and her husband Lucille Hotel and the summer-dream in Viamede, built in 1920. After her husband died Mrs. Isaacson took it upon herself to run the hotel, her only asset.

The handsome two-storey main building contains bed-sitting rooms, family suites and double rooms and a 180-seat dining room. And 18 furnished cottages line the waterfront.

Her son William now helps his mother as co-owner and manager of the hotel and this summer the family proudly flies a yellow-and-black 50-year anniversary pennant in her honor.

Mrs. Isaacson has a private single cottage at the resort where she keeps the records straight and supervises the various departments and the 28 employees.

Fishing has long been the major sport in the Kawarthas and Mrs. Isaacson supervised a platoon of fishing guides, prepared shore dinners and packed fish catches for home-bound guests.

MR. AND MRS. HARRY BROOKS

Brooks – Richardson

Wesleyan Methodist Church Trenton, was the scene of the July 18 marriage of Marilyn Richardson, daughter of Mrs. Sheila Richardson of Belleville and Harry Wayne Brooks son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry W. Brooks, also of Belleville. Rev. James A. Spearman officiated at the ceremony; organist was Mrs. Margaret Kemp and soloist Mrs. Evelyn Simmons.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore an imported floor-length gown of pure silk Ignda. The bodice featured three quarter sleeves and was appliqued in Venise lace which cascaded from the neckline to the scalloped hem. The motif of lace was etched upon the flowing unlaidered train. Her headpiece was of orange blossom and pearls and aurora borealis, with scalloped tulle veil. She carried a cascade bouquet of yellow roses and violet mums.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Cheryl Vandermeer of Kingston wearing a floor - length gown of pure silk crepe de soir shade of mayflower violet. The bodice had a queen's neckline and three-quarter sleeves in floral chiffon and the theme was carried into the inverted back panel of the skirt. She carried a nosegay of yellow shasta daisies and violet mums.

Maid of honor was Miss Carol Richardson, sister of the bride, dressed identically to the matron of honor. She carried a nosegay of yellow shasta daisies and violet mums.

Bridesmaids were Miss Joanne Brooks, sister of the bridegroom and Miss Donna Britt of Windsor. Each was dressed identically to the matron of honor and carried a similar nosegay.

Flower girl was Miss Adrienne Lustenburg, niece of the bridegroom, wearing a floor-length gown of pure silk crepe in mayflower violet and she carried a basket of yellow shasta daisies and violet mums.

Best man was Gary May and ushers were Arnold Vandermeer of Kingston; Stan Brooks brother of the bridegroom, and Paul Brooks, another brother of the bridegroom, Belleville.

For the reception held at the Belleville Shrine Club with music provided by the Jim Calhoun Quartet, the bride's mother greeted the guests wearing an ensemble of mauve marine organza. The A-line dress had long pleated panels edged with lace and the sleeveless matching coat showed a mandarin lined neckline with the same lace outlining the coat. She wore matching accessories and a corsage of pink sweetheart roses.

The bridegroom's mother wore a printed floral chiffon sheath dress with full sleeves and matching accessories. Her corsage was pink carnations and pink sweetheart roses.

For the wedding trip to Pennsylvania, the bride chose a dress of pink organza accented with white daisies. She wore matching accessories and a corsage of white carnations.

Upon their return the couple will reside at 607 McKay St., Windsor.

Orange Tree Blossoms Used for Perfume

An important source of the essence which goes into eau de cologne, flower petals from the 30,000 sweet-smelling trees are harvested with infinite care by 4,000 Tunisian gardeners.

It must be done after nightfall, and in fine weather. The flower is so delicate that it can stand neither heat nor rough handling.

In order to yield good-quality essence—known here as "neroli"—each flower must be fully opened, and the harvest must not be adulterated by buds of the bitter orange flower, still less by flowers from such related trees as oranges, lemons and limes.

The richest growing area is the peninsula of Cap Bon, 50 miles east of Tunis, whose beautiful beach resorts attract many tourists.

But even within this area, the growers recognize distinct "vintages." Each distiller of the precious essence has his own secret recipe for producing the right blend of perfume, using flowers from different districts.

This year the floral harvest has yielded only 300 tons, well below the annual average of 700 tons.

Total production of neroli this year was around 880 pounds. This compares unfavorably with a "good vintage" year like 1966, when output topped 1,430 pounds.

The entire production is shipped, at a price of around 1,850 francs a kilo ($230 a pound) to the perfume houses of Grasse, the world "capital" of the perfume industry just inland from the popular Mediterranean beaches of Cote d'Azur in France.

The cultivation of the bitter orange for its flowers has been virtually ruled out in Europe because of the high cost of labor required to pick the delicate blooms. In addition, the perfume market has tended to be sensitive to economic changes.

As a result, Tunisia now regards itself as the leading world producer.

The 4,000 Tunisian gardeners are mostly following in their fathers' footsteps, cultivating the fragrant flowers on the sunny promontories of Cap Bon.

Successful Living

Bothersome Acquaintance Pesters Woman

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: A chance acquaintance whom I met several years ago has become a hell and chain around my neck. I felt sorry for her at the time because she seemed almost mentally ill. I listened to her tale of woe about her husband and her two grown daughters who constantly abused her mentally.

This has been going on now for all these years. She keeps me on the telephone sometimes for hours. I have my family to care for but she just gets angry if I don't listen.

Once I told her not to bother me anymore because my nerves were getting frayed just listening to her tales of woe. I got rid of her for about a year. Then she started back.

I am happy with my husband and children but she doesn't want to believe that. How to become a nonce so I get rid of her? — Tale of Woe.

Dear Tale of Woe: I'd hate to guess how many kind souls like you find shaky home routines disrupted by such calls. If you were working in an office or store, you would quickly detach yourself from a talkative visitor or phone call by saying, "Excuse me, but I have a customer waiting."

Why couldn't a housewife say, "I just cannot talk on the telephone. Right now I have lunch to get ready and baking to do for Saturday's. Or, I must go. There is something on the stove." (The spoon leaves a bottle of water on the stove just as she can say this — but I'm afraid I don't go for an unnecessary bit of deception.)

Where the long - winded compulsive concerns family wrangling, one could do worse than suggest a talk with a qualified counselor is a social agency.

You have no obligation to allow a caller to steal an hour out of your day.

* * *

Dear Doris: I have taken a job serving tables at a new dining lounge where it is mostly semi-formal. We only put on bread - and - butter plates if they are asked for. There are some moments when I am not just sure what should go on a table or other parts of proper procedure.

Could you direct me to a book about such things? — Winnie the Waitress.

Dear Winnie: You use the bread - and - butter plates at informal luncheons and dinners, and at formal luncheons, but not at formal dinners. When you haven't got a b. and b. plate you put the dinner roll on the napkin or to the left of the dinner plate.

There are books about table settings and I am sending you the name of a good one. But you'll find others in your library.

* * *

Confidential to Stepmother: I'd guess that your husband knew his daughter better than you did. Obviously he couldn't have trusted her with the keys to your house. She must have the notion that the quilts and pillows and pretty embroidery were right by hers, since her father is now quite elderly.

Now is the time for him to have a firm talk with her and to demand the keys and all the other articles back. You'd be no favor to allow her to get away with this. Sooner or later her taking ways will get her into trouble with the police.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Emem's Chicken Liver Pate

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION: Would you be kind enough to send me or to print a recipe for "Chicken Liver Pate". My mother used to make an excellent one but I lost the recipe. I know she used to prepare about two pounds of chicken livers, some cream, meat fat and some spices, but I don't remember the quantity or the method of preparation. I read your column every night. J. M. from Detroit.

ANSWER: I was gratified to be asked for Chicken Liver Pate for I think my creation is one of the best I have ever tasted. It should be for I spent many an hour trying different variations.

EMEM'S CHICKEN LIVER PATE

1 lb. frozen chicken livers (or note below) chicken livers slightly thawed (or baby beef or calves' liver)
¼ lb. side bacon
1 tbsp. minced onion or bottled onion flakes
1 tsp. garlic salt (or clove of garlic)
¼ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. thyme
¼ tsp. cinnamon
¼ tsp. nutmeg
¼ tsp. black pepper
2 slices plain bread
2 eggs

Force slightly thawed chicken livers (see note below) through fine knife of meat grinder along with the bacon and all seasonings. Force through machine last to clean it out and to extend pate and to give it body. If you do not have a blender put pate through fine knife of grinder again to make it smoother. If you have a blender buzz half of the liver mixture in it at a time to make it perfectly smooth. Remember that the professional fluius in making liver pate is its velvety texture. Beat eggs and stir into mixture thoroughly. Turn into small loaf pan (or three or four individual baking dishes) filling them two-thirds full. Cover tightly with lid or foil. Stand in shallow pan of hot water and bake at 375 deg. Fahr. two hours.

An excellent imitation of pate de fois gras and an epicure's delight.

NOTE: Freezing vers gives them the necessary firmness to force through grinder.

Ann Landers

Mother Can't Forgive Her Daughter-in-Law

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Our son Bill, who is 23, went into the service at 18 and married at 20. He has been in a hospital in Vietnam for ten months and will be coming home soon. Six months after he left home his wife had an affair with one of his friends. (Some friend.) Someone wrote and told Bill about it and he nearly went out of his mind. He decided to forgive her and try to make a go of the marriage.

The problem is that I cannot forgive her. I hate the sight of that girl and I never want her to set foot in my house again.

I haven't told Bill how I feel because I don't know what it will do to our relationship. He is my only child and I can't bear to lose him. Please help me. — COVINA HEARTACHE

DEAR COVINA: Bill is going to have enough to cope with when he gets home. Please don't burden him with choosing between his mother and his wife.

Find the strength, somehow, to accept the girl. If HE can find it in his heart to forgive her, you can. And you must — or you'll wind up on the outside looking in.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I read an interesting article on infaithful husbands in a Canadian magazine recently. Reference was made to a couple married 25 years. The man figured he had made love to his wife about 5,000 times. He observed that after 5,000 times, even if it was all characterized, a man might like some cold lobster for a change. Why can't women understand this?

Most men, if they are normal, stay occasionally. A wife who raises hell about it will not look more attractive to her husband, nor will she make him behave better. She will simply wear out her welcome with her husband and destroy any thought of romance (with her) out of his mind for at least two weeks.

La Rochefoucauld said, "There may be good marriages but there are no ecstatic ones."

I know you can't endorse infidelity, Ann, but millions of women read your column and an enlightened approach such as this one could start a trend. How about it? Do you dare? — BATTLE CREEK

DEAR BAT: A trend? Toward what? Longer leashes? Sanctioned infidelity? What about a trend for women who might enjoy cold lobster "on occasion"? Your letter is interesting. Indeed, but it leaves some unanswered questions. When you can provide the answers I'll print them.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: The question was "Confidential" but your answer was a stirring direction for all of us who are frantic and anxious about the state of our country and the disintegrating quality of life. You said, "If you are not a part of the solution you are part of the problem."

That sentence should be worn on buttons, pasted on car bumpers, written on school blackboards and engraved on our hearts. Please repeat it. Ann, we need the printers to put it in bold type and surround it with a lot of white space for those of us who want to cut it out and carry it in our wallets. Many thanks. — CINCINNATI ADMIREE

DEAR CINCY: Here it is — complete with your request to the printers:

.If You Are Not Part Of The Solution You Are Part Of The Problem

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Our teen-age son had surgery last week and you wouldn't believe the questions people have asked me about the operation — even after I made it clear I didn't want to discuss it. Why do these clods think the intimate details of surgery are public property? How does one get across the idea that it is nobody's business except it is his good manners to pry?

Yesterday a neighbor bombarded me with some extremely personal questions. Finally I lost my temper and said, "I really don't want to talk about it. If you don't mind." With fire in her eye she snapped, "I am INTERESTED in the boy. I can't understand why you are so sensitive."

I ended up by apologizing but I felt like kicking her in the teeth. I was brought up to believe it is rude to put a person through the third degree about personal matters. How should I deal with nosey folks? — T.N.T. MOTHER.

DEAR MOTHER: The best way to handle a None-Of-Your-Business type question is by asking a counter question: Example: "Why do you ask?" or "What on earth do you want to know for?" If the lunkhead ignores your question and continues to press, simply say, "Do you mind if we change the subject to something more cheerful?"

Male Becomes A Home Economist

The appointment of Dr. Lewis E. Lloyd in Winnipeg three years ago brought cries from home economists across Canada, but soon after the University of British Columbia followed suit by appointing a male dean. Now the University of Toronto's faculty of food science, formerly the faculty of household science, is advertising for a dean, and is not specifying sex.

At a convention for home economists and dietitians held here recently, Dr. Lloyd did not let the strong preponderance of women stop him from expounding on his favorite theme: that the public image of the home economist should be changed.

"People still think of home economics as the traditional cooking and sewing but they are so wrong," he said. He feels the image prevents more men from signing up for home economics courses.

Actually, says Dr. Lloyd, a home economist trained to understand people in terms of food, clothing and housing has many valuable skills not appreciated or utilized by the community.

He considers his position as dean of 400 women students gives him objectivity in assessing and trying to change the home economist image.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Mother: "The baby seems to have such a fussy time around 5 o'clock every day. She isn't really hungry or ready to go to sleep for the night, but she must be uncomfortable about something."

The "air bath" is an old-fashioned method for tiding a baby of 4 to 8 months over that sometimes unhappy hour at the end of the day.

A fussy baby may quiet down and be content until feeding time if you remove her clothes and let her roll and stretch in unconfined bliss. This is a good time for a gentle back-rub too.

Highways Department Is Active In Northern Part of Hastings

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

There seems never to be an end to construction as municipal and senior governments continue programs to provide more and better road and highway facilities.

And as far as the Ontario Department of Highways is concerned, this year is no exception in the Quinte area.

In the immediate Quinte district there are two separate reconstruction projects under way costing more than a million dollars each.

One of these is on Highway 14 between Foxboro and Stirling where the H. J. McFarland Construction Company has the contract for rebuilding more than six miles of roadway.

The other is on Highway 7 between Madoc and Marmora where this 8.6 - mile section of the trans - Canada highway route is being brought up to modern day standards. Peel Construction Company Ltd. has the contract for grading, drainage, granular base and hot mix paving at a contract price of $1,594,600.

The work on the Madoc - Marmora section of Highway 7 is now approximately 72 per cent completed with work on base and paving remaining. The expected completion date is September of next year.

Completion of the Foxboro Stirling section of Highway 14 is expected in July of 1971.

Road improvement work is also under way on Highway 41 north of Cloyne where E. and E. Seegmiller Ltd. have the contract for grading, drainage and granular base on 4.62 miles at a cost of $674,189. The firm was awarded the contract last September and is expected to complete the project in September of this year.

Another highway reconstruction project in Hastings county is the rebuilding of secondary highway 509 east of Bancroft where Cardinal Construction has the contract for grading and granular base on 5.5 miles of reconstruction. Cost of the work is $693,742 with completion scheduled for late this fall.

Another "highway" construction project in North Hastings is new grading and paving of 6.8 miles of Highway 62 from Maple Leaf westerly to 1.3 miles south of Highway 127 at Marmora.

In Prince Edward county, the Ontario Highways Department has scheduled reconstruction of three miles of Highway 33 between Bloomfield and Picton.

Belleville Girl Drowning Victim

The body of an eight-year-old Belleville girl was recovered soon after she drowned yesterday in Wadsworth Lake, 55 miles north of Pembroke.

Belleville's Travellers A Wide-Ranging Group

By KENNETH SMITH
Staff Reporter

More Bellevillians than ever before are setting off to distant points on the globe for their summer vacations.

Long distance vacation travel for Bellevillians has always been Britain-orientated, with so many people in this area having roots in the British Isles.

This trend has not changed, according to local travel agents, but the number of people travelling from Belleville to Britain this summer is up measurably.

Fewer Bellevillens are going by sea than ever before. Travel agents ascribe this to several factors. Many cannot spare the extra time it takes to go by ship. It is considerably cheaper to go by air. There are fewer liners serving Montreal — Canadian Pacific has only one ship, Empress of Canada, on the trans-Atlantic run; Cunard Lines, a firm that once operated four vessels to Montreal, has completely closed out its Montreal service.

The only significant addition to the trans-Atlantic run from Montreal is the Russian vessel Alexander Pushkin. Several Bellevillians have taken this ship to Europe this year.

Not only are Bellevillians travelling by regularly scheduled airlines but also by charter flights. Ontario Hydro employees at the city's regional offices organize their own charters to Britain and five people from Belleville have signed up for a Hydro charter to Spain.

Continental European points are attracting more and more of the city's vacationing population every year. Paris, Rome and Frankfurt are favored destinations but most people prefer to four than to stay put in one resort spot.

One local agent reported a remarkable upsurge in travel to the Greek Islands and the Middle East.

However, all agents agree that traffic to the Caribbean has declined. Racial tension in the islands, one agent contends, is the principal reason for the drop off. Expense is another, for it is about the same fare to fly from Canada to Europe as it is to fly to the Caribbean, now that trans-Atlantic flights are cheaper.

Japan has attracted more Belleville vacationers this summer with Expo 70 at Osaka as the drawing card.

"At least 40 people are going to Expo from Belleville and that figure could be much too low" one local travel agent reported.

One couple has just returned from Kotatinabaly in the jungles of North Borneo.

Another couple returned recently from Cambodia. Just getting out before the American invasion of the country.

Six Bellevillians, at least, are vacationing in Afghanistan this year. Others have set off, by one report, "to see the Taj Mahal at moonlight".

Clearly, more Bellevillians are doing something for their 'itchy feet'. They are travelling in larger numbers, at times, to unheard-of desinations.

Cement Plant Continues Fight Against Dust

Dust control measures at a cement plant are a continuing thing as management complies with ever tighter requirements of air management and at the same time strives to become a more acceptable neighbor.

Such is the case at Lake Ontario Cement Ltd. just north of Picton where a $400,000 project for improved dust control was completed only last September and where a further $1¼ million will be spent in another two-year program now under way.

"It's a continuous program" was the comment today of plant operations manager Bruce Price, who said the firm was continually making modifications or installing new dust control equipment to meet changing standards.

Dust control equipment for cement plants is available commercially but engineers sometimes call for modifications to meet special requirements.

The $1¼ million program, to be completed within the next two years, is to bring the plant within the more recent air pollution standards brought out by the Department of Energy and Resources in 1968 and modified last year.

Next May new electrostatic equipment costing between $300 and $400 thousand will be installed.

Currently under way is a program to better control dust in the plant's quarries, during the grinding process and during transportation of material to the plant.

Mr. Price said water sprays were being used during drilling operations, quarry and plant roads were being sprayed, dust collectors were being used on crushers and grinders and special solutions were in use on conveyors, and in screening processes.

"It's a continuous program requiring many changes and will possibly go on forever," said Mr. Price.

Tax and Records Specialists Pressure District Farmers

Quinte district farmers in recent weeks have been subjected to high pressure sales tactics by representatives of firms specializing in farm income tax and records services.

The high pressure sales many farmers paying for services which they do not want and resulted in questions and complaints reaching the county agricultural office in Stirling.

Agricultural officials urge farmers approached on these matters to take their time and think over the services being offered, otherwise both time and money could be wasted.

Agricultural representative Wayne Martin said that in many instances farmers were being asked for prepayment for the services offered and, in a leaflet on points to consider in looking for farm record and income tax filing services, urges farmers not to be pressured into any system.

"Take time to think it over," suggested the letter. "It is your money and you should have time to think over any system you are paying for."

Farmers are urged to sign nothing until they know exactly what is written or implied and, if in doubt, to ask their lawyer, the Ontario Department of Agriculture and Food or their bank manager.

The letter warns against prepayment of services to be rendered and suggests that if extra services are indicated, such as setting up a basic herd, to obtain in writing whether or not this will be done at an extra cost and within what time period.

A contract should specify what services are to be provided and what is expected of both parties.

"If an inquiry arises out of income tax filing, the farmer should know who is to handle any questions."

The letter suggests that if this is the farmer's responsibility he should file his own returns. If someone else handles these matters, farmers should have a guarantee that it will be done promptly and correctly.

The form letter notes that any reputable company would discuss the above points with farmers.

"If you are concerned about any pressure of false statements with regard to services (being offered), contact your local office of the Ontario Department of Agriculture and Food, your bank manager, or local office of the Better Business Bureau or Chamber of Commerce."

"Let the buyer beware" is a good motto to follow, suggests the letter.

"Farm records and income tax filing are essential, but make sure you are obtaining the best service possible."

Basically, it stated, a farm record service should provide information that is useful and acceptable for both farm management and income tax purposes.

The letter sets out essentials for the keeping of farm records. All purchases should be paid by cheque, bills should be retained and all business transactions should be recorded in some kind of a farm record book.

Burkleo Puts 'Kick' in Ottawa Attack for First Win

HAMILTON (CP) — Bill Van Burkleo's booming punt in the fourth quarter, one a 76-yard single that snapped a 20-20 tie, engineered a 27-20 victory for Ottawa Rough Riders over Hamilton Tiger-Cats in an Eastern Football Conference exhibition game Thursday night.

The victory for the 1969 Grey Cup champions was their first in four pre-season exhibition games, and left them with the same record as the Toronto bound-ing into the Canadian Football League schedule openers next week.

Hugh Oldham, Jay Roberts and defensive halfback Al Marcello scored the Ottawa touchdowns before about 16,000 fans. Ivan McMillan's, a junior Ottawa Sooner graduate, added eight points on two field goals and two converts.

Hamilton got touchdowns from Tommy Joe Coffey, Dave Fleming and Ed Buchanan, all on passes from quarterback John Eckman. Coffey added two converts.

Ottawa led 3-0 after the first quarter, 17-7 at half time and held a 20-7 lead early in the third quarter before Hamilton rebounded for 13 points.

Hamilton Coach Joe Restic went all the way with John Eckert at quarterback and the six-foot-one, 195-pounder from Wichita State University deserved a better fate.

Several times in the second half he hit his man in the clear in the Ottawa secondary, only to have the ball dropped by such usually sure-fingered receivers as Coffey and Gord Christian.

Three pivot men shared the Ottawa assignment, with Gary Wood handling the duties in the first half before being replaced by Tom Dimmick in the third quarter and Jim Ousley with about four minutes gone in the fourth quarter.

Canada Hopes to 'Wrestle' Two Gold from Competition

EDINBURGH (CP) — Canada's wrestling team, tuned up by the world championships in Edmonton a few weeks ago, was looking for a batful of Commonwealth Games medals today.

Nine of six 19 members were still in contention as competition entered its final day and three were guaranteed a medal as the number of contestants in their weight class had shrunk to three or less.

Not since the inaugural Games of 1930, when Canada entered seven wrestlers and all won gold medals, had there been such a powerful Canadian threat. The 1966 squad collected five gold—the first in 16 years—plus three second-place silvers and a third-place bronze.

Heavyweight Ed Millard of King City, Ont., and light flyweight Ken Shan of Toronto were sure of silver medals and trying for gold as they faced Indian opponents in their division finals. Chanda Pilon of Ottawa, one of three survivors in the light heavyweight class, had Indian and Pakistani rivals to beat.

Apart from the 18 wrestling titles, only eight gold medals were on the line today as the swimmers and divers wound up their competition with six finals, the fencers contested the team sabre event and the cyclists rode in the 10-mile race. No fi-nals were scheduled in track and field.

Three gold medals were added to Canada's treasure chest Thursday as Beverly Boys of Pickering, Ont., added the tower diving championship to her previous triumph in the springboard event. Bill Kennedy of London, Ont., won the 100-metre backstroke and Jim Arasco of Montreal took the 200 butterfly.

That brought the total for the Games to 13, one shy of the previous Canadian high at the 1966 Games but far short of Australia and England.

With 28 championships already in the bag to England's 22, the Aussies appeared to be pulling away from the field. They won seven events Thursday while England picked up four.

A similar trend was evident in the unofficial point standings, based on a 10-5-4-3-2-1 count for the first six final placings. Australia led the way with 514 points to England's 481 and 308 for Canada, a total that surpassed the 349 points amassed by the Canadians in the 1966 Games.

Canada's stock in international cycling got a boost as Jocelyn Lovell of Toronto was third in the men's 1,000-metre time trial and combined with Barry Harvey of Montreal for second-place finish in the 2,000-metre tandem sprint despite a fall during the semi-final sound.

Harry Kent of New Zealand won the trial and the Australian pair of Gordon Johnson and Ron Zonker took the sprint, the first cycling events in which Canadians have won Games medals since 1954.

A. J. Leckie of Scotland ended a string of six English victories in the individual sabre event and David Bryant of England clinched the lawn-bowling singles title with two rounds of play left in the 14-country tournament.

Jawa and Triumph Should Lead Fight for Ontario Title

Tonight's battle in the 1855 annual Ontario Championship Motorcycle races at the Belleville fairgrounds will not only provide competition between some of Canada's top riders, but also sharpen up a duel of the two top models on the circuit this season. — Jawa and Triumph.

Yvon Duhamel, Canada's leading exponent of the former make, will be a definite starter in the races, which get under way at 8 p.m. tonight.

The Montreal-native called long distance last night to check on the local weather situation and will slop off for the Ontario dirt track championships en route to Saturday's competition at the national fog competition at Sherbrooke.

The five - time Canadian champion holds the track record of 27.6 seconds for one lap and four minutes and 53 seconds in a 10-lap competition.

Maurice Fraser, who defeated Duhamel in the Mosport 500 last year, is expected to be another strong contender for the Belleville title.

Fraser went on from the Belleville track to win his class at a race in Warren, Ohio on July 5th. His bike is powered by Dynotyp racers. July 3rd, will be looking to add to his 750 cc Triumph, to a much similar to the three minute 15 second time he established in the last eight - lap race held here

Baltimore Continues Hex on Kansas City

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

As a newcomer, Kansas City Royals had a fine first meeting with Baltimore Orioles.

That first meeting was back on May 8, 1969, and after the usual introductions, the expansion Royals and Dick Drago went out and beat the powerful Orioles.

The Royals must have been happy to see the Orioles again the next night. And it wasn't the same, and hasn't been since.

Baltimore won that game and went on to win the next 19 after that, including a 5-4 decision Thursday night in Kansas City.

Elsewhere on a light baseball night, Minnesota Twins beat Detroit Tigers 3-1 and Cleveland Indians upended Chicago White Sox 5-2 at night in the American League and California Angels stopped Boston Red Sox 4-1 in the afternoon.

It's not that the Royals don't have their chances against Baltimore—they lost in 13 innings Wednesday night and left 10 men on base Thursday night.

They were tied 2-2 in the sixth and Cookie Rojas singled in a run in the eighth to pull them within 3-2 but, with two on, Pete Richert, who relieved Jim Palmer, got pinch-hitter Bob Taylor to hit into a doubleplay.

Frank Robinson was busy keeping Baltimore's streak intact. He hit the first homer off Kansas City pitching in 135 9-3 innings a Rookie Bob Grieb stroked a run-scoring decisive triple in the eighth.

The victory also increased Baltimore's Eastern-Division lead to six games over Detroit, which bowed to the Twins on George Mitterwald's eighth homer that broke a 1-1 deadlock in the seventh.

Veda Pinson hit a two-run homer in the fifth after Eddie Leon slammed a solo shot in the third as Cleveland backed Sam McDowell, 11-4, who became the second pitcher in the league to win 15.

California rallied for three runs in the ninth inning, the tie-breaker on Billy Cowan's pinch-hit double.

Chiefs Won't Report

WASHINGTO N(AP) — The National Football League Players' Association decided Thursday against letting Kansas City Chiefs report to training camp as the federal mediation and conciliation service announced both sides in the pro football contract, dispute had agreed to meet Friday.

The NFLPA decision not to let the world champion Chiefs start practicing for the July 31 College All-Star game put the future of the annual charity event in serious jeopardy. NFL owners had offered to lift the lockout of the Chief camp in order to start the game.

Federal mediators said both the owners' negotiating committee and the NFLPA had agreed to resume contract talks today in Philadelphia.

The announcement from the mediation and conciliation service came after planned meetings at the Washington and Baltimore had fallen through.

George Halas of Chicago Bears and Lamar Hunt of Kansas City Chiefs, presidents respectively of the NFL's National and American Conferences, had said the Kansas City camp would be opened immediately if the players association directed Chiefs' players to report.

Most of the NFL teams have begun practices for rookies, but experienced players have been locked out of camp by the owners and forbidden by the players' association from reporting to camp.

The main contract disagreement is over payments into the players' pension fund. The two sides are reported to be more than $17,000,000 apart over a four-year contract.

Halas and Hunt had predicted a lengthy strike, and Hunt called the players' demands "preposterous."

Hank Stram, Kansas City coach, has said he would be able to send his world champion Chiefs against the All-Stars at Chicago if he began drills by today.

Equestrians In England

LONDON (CP) — Canadian and British equestrians are expected to battle for top honors in the six-day Royal International Horse Show opening in London Monday.

In the world championships at La Baule, France, earlier this month, the Canadians captured the Nations Cup while Ireland won the individual male and female events.

The Canadians include the three-man gold medal winning team at the 1968 Mexico Olympics—Tom Gayford of Gormley, Ont.; Jim Elder of Aurora, Ont.; and Jim Day of Oakville, Ont. Other members are Barbara Simpson of Calgary and Moffatt Dunlap of Newmarket, Ont.

This is the Canadians' first appearance in Europe as a team since 1954. Since their arrival in mid-June, they have competed in events at Vichy and La Baule in France, and Hickstead, England. They return home following the Dublin International Show ending Aug. 9.

In a telephone interview from Hickstead, where the Canadians are staying, Day said the team is "in good shape and fairly satisfied" with their performance so far on the European circuit.

Day, a car salesman, said the team was doing some training at Hickstead and freshening up the horses.

All the animals were in good condition except Steelmaster, he added. Suffering from a cut hind leg received at the Hickstead show, the horse, ridden by Day, will not be ready for the British show.

Pappus Records Shutout Win

Milt Pappas served in on his former team-mates and came through with his fourth straight victory, aided by a home run pitch and a pitcher's dream.

Pappas, a 31-year-old right-hander, scattered four hits Thursday in blanking Cincinnati Reds 1-0 as Chicago Cubs rolled to their third straight triumph. It was the first time this season the West Division leaders had been shut out.

Pappas, a 16-year major league veteran, now has hurled four complete games and raised his record to 8-3 since coming to the Cubs from Atlanta Braves on June 23. He is 4-1 in his new uniform.

The former Baltimore Oriole, traded to the Reds in 1965 for Frank Robinson, said: "I feel I'm starting a new career at the age of 31."

He said the turning point in Thursday's game was in the sixth inning when the Reds had the bases loaded with only one out.

"I'm up against Johnny Bench and this is the key situation in the whole game," Pappas said afterward.

With two strikes on the Reds' all-star catcher "I whizzed a fast ball, knee high on the outside corner—a pitcher's dream pitch—and it's a called third strike."

Pappas then got the third out, on a fly ball.

The Cubs got the only run of the game in the eighth on shortstop Woody Woodward's throwing error and reliever Clay Carroll had issued successive walks to Don Kessinger and Glenn Beckert.

In the only other National League games, Pittsburgh Pirates won 6-5 over Atlanta and Houston Astros edged St. Louis Cardinals 3-2.

Dave Cash capped a three-run eighth-inning with a sacrifice fly in the Pirates victory.

Jack Billingham limited the Cards to six hits and John Edwards cracked a fifth-inning homer, snapping a 2-2 tie. The loss went to Bob Gibson, 12-8, who also gave up six hits.

Pepitone Changes Tune

NEW YORK (AP) — Joe Pepitone hit the high note of his career as a singer—but there was nothing wrong with his punch-line delivery, either.

Pepitone slammed out a swinging rendition of Around the World and threw in one-liners in the best top-banana tradition while appearing on the Merv Griffith Show Thursday night.

The Houston Astros' outfielder-first baseman appeared along with actresses Eva Gabor and Peggy Cass and singer Julius LaRosa on the CBS-TV show.

Pepitone, under suspension by the Astros after jumping the team Tuesday, appeared in a giddy mood before and during his performance.

While talking about his recent troubles with the Astros' management, Pepitone quipped to Griffith on-camera: "I'm still in hiding—and I hope they don't find out where I am."

It was billed as Pepitone's singing debut—but the shaggy-maned Pep corrected an inquiring reporter:

"That's not altogether true," he said, "I sang once on the Mike Douglas Show—but that was prompted."

Would he consider singing for his supper if his baseball career was washed up?

"Not really, I still want to play baseball," he said, "just not in Houston.

"I'm not going back to Houston."

Pepitone had similar troubles while playing for New York Yankees before his trade last year to Houston. He was fined several times for leaving the team without permission.

Four years ago two men replied to our Company's ad. Last year their combined income was over $37,807.00. For four years they have had complete freedom of their time, the thrill of serving others and no ceiling on their income. One is age 30, the other age 42. At present, we have openings for two men interested in building a career as they have. We can offer an income of $600.00 a month plus incentive, a two year training program conducted locally and at our Head Office, complete hospitalization and group medical for self and dependents, and the backing of a Company with over 134 billion of assets. We would like to talk to a married man, between the ages of 24 and 36, currently employed but not satisfied with his present situation and/or future opportunities.

TRY SALES WITH A SALARY

Do you feel that the effort you put into your work has little effect on your income? Have you considered a sales career, with income directly related to effort? Have you hesitated because you felt that there were no openings in selling, that you had to be a "born salesman" to succeed?

If so, we would invite you to inquire about our "Sales With A Salary". We provide a basic salary plus usual fringe benefits plus commission incentive. You need not be a "born salesman" — we provide the sales training and field supervision to insure your success.

To qualify for this plan, you must have grade 12 education or equivalent; have a successful work experience, a reputation for honest, reliable and conscientious person, willing to work hard and study to improve your income and vocational status.

Work Location — Belleville or Picton.

Analysis of Michigan Clams Finds Them Real Metal Mines

MT. CLEMENS, Mich. (CP) — Michigan researchers have found mercury, zinc, cadmium, copper and nickel in clams which were in the Clinton River flowing into Lake St. Clair at the lake's west shore.

"At least 18 parts per million of mercury" were found in the clams in June, 1969, but "we didn't think a thing about it," said Dr. Matthew J. Zabik, assistant professor of entomology at Michigan State University's pesticide research centre.

His research was spurred by a quantity of dead clams and pickerel found last year in the river and around its mouth in the lake. No definite link between the waste and the dead clams and fish has been made yet.

A spokesman for the Detroit Water Board, which has part of the waste disposal jurisdiction for southeast Michigan, said that a year or two ago there was a substantial discharge of waste in the river which he said is believed to have come from the Pontiac, Mich., and Auburn Heights, Mich., area where certain firms are known to use metallic plating processes.

The spokesman said since then there has been a "constant agreement" between the board and the firms, which he did not name, to clean up the effluent. This has been 90 per cent effective, he said.

However, he said there is no way to police the agreement as there is no monitoring equipment in the river and it would be at least a year before it could be installed. He said it would be possible for wastes to be dumped into the river without the board knowing it.

The results of the Michigan State University research were not brought to the attention of the Michigan Water Resources Commission until last May, said William D. Marks, chief of water development services for the commission.

"We had no information on normal background levels," Dr. Zabik explained, "and we had no way of judging whether our findings (16 p.m. of mercury) were significant."

Mr. Marks said the university tests showed relatively high levels of zinc and cadmium but low levels of pesticides in the dead clams.

Later tests by the commission, Mr. Marks said, "disproved our earlier thoughts that cadmium was the causative factor" in the river deaths of the clams and pickerel.

He said the five clams the commission tested had higher levels of cadmium than the dead ones the university tested. In addition the clams had high quantities of zinc, copper and nickel but apparently showed no ill effects from the metallic substances.

"At the present time," Mr. Marks said, "we have no real concern regarding the causative agent or agents that caused the fish and clam kill. We strongly suspect that it was due to a toxic slug of material that passed down the spillway (from the river). Mercury may or may not have been involved."

KILLING YOURSELF

Sometimes Heart Symptoms Lacking

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Recently I wrote a column about the typical symptoms of a typical attack of coronary thrombosis. A reader wanted to know what what are the symptoms?"

I mentioned the excruciating pain, perspiration, anxiety, accompanied by such signs as rapid fall in blood pressure, pallor, nausea and vomiting. With these telltale signs and symptoms even a first year medical student (or many laymen) would suspect that a patient was having a heart attack.

But there is another side: the heart - attack patient who is not having the typical symptoms. The following letter indicates how important it is to realize that the apparently innocent may be guilty.

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Although you amended your list of heart - attack symptoms by the words "in the typical attack," I believe it would be worthwhile to alert the "atypical" patient to what may be happening. I had known of the possibility of a heart attack without pain. four valuable days would not have been lost in treatment.

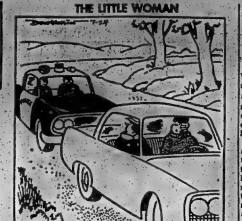
Two days after last Christmas my 49 - year - old husband became "uncomfortable" in his chest area while driving home. At no time in the next three days did he feel other than slight discomfort, but because the feeling was continuous, he went to our family doctor. He took it lightly because of mild symptoms, but ordered an ECG as a precaution.

Twenty-four hours later he called my husband (who had gone back to work, and was in the warehouse looking for some equipment). Sent back to the hospital where a cardiologist was then waiting, my husband was put into an intensive coronary care unit with a diagnosis of acute coronary thrombosis with 7 myocardial infarction.

This is one important reason why we keep advising yearly physical checkups. Electrocardiograms, in appearently healthy men and women, often point the finger at potential danger. As Mrs. G. says, not all attacks are "typical."

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I'm one of those unfortunates who (I won't say who) that watches TV whenever I'm on sight to 16 hours a day, and find the tension and the body deterioration on this schedule? — A reader.



Answer: I'm not called the "idiot box." However, I wouldn't attach this label to TV fan who is chained and a prisoner in his own home. If he or she would rather watch TV than exercise, think it is the patient's privilege.

However, if you refer to a healthy adult so indulging himself for many hours day after day then I will agree that it might affect both the mind and body by lack of mental and physical exercise.

But I am not suggesting he is an idiot. I respect any man's choice of living habits (although I may not agree) as long as he does not hurt others. Each one of us is the sum total of our genes, environment, and circumstances. But I suppose you want an opinion. All right. Eight to 16 hours of TV a day is too much — much too much.

This, 56 hours after the onset of his original discomfort! We were lucky in the outcome, but, maybe the next man with only "slight discomfort" won't be. Here's where some missionary work by someone, like yourself is needed! Thank you. — Mrs. (Who's still glad to be "Mrs. G.").

Comment: Mrs. G's letter is an important contribution. I'll go further. In thousands of patients there are no symptoms at all. (Not even a little recognizable discomfort.) Many patients are working without even suspecting they have coronary disease.

Turbo Breaks Down

TORONTO (CP) — Rail traffic was delayed for about half an hour late Thursday after a Canadian National Turbo train broke down near isPkering, 19 miles east of Metropolitan Toronto.

A CN spokesman said the seven-car train, carrying 188 persons, lost its auxiliary electric power unit. Passengers were transferred to the Montreal-bound Rapido train and the Turbo was taken to the repair yards. It was expected to be back in operation today.

The spokesman said the turbine-powered train came to a stop on top of an interlocking device which is part of an electronic system that automatically controls switching.

All rail traffic, including four Government of Ontario commuter trains en route to Peterlog, was slowed or halted and train engineers were forced to use an old manual system of control involving flag signals and lights.

It was the first cancellation of a CN Turbo since the trains returned to service May after being out of operation for 18 months. The five trains in the Turbo fleet were originally introduced in 1966 but had to be withdrawn for modifications. Only two of the trains, including that involved in Thursday's breakdown, have been operational.

British Post Office Will Increase Rates

LONDON (CP) — Britons, who had hoped the new Conservative government would start curbing inflation, got a shock Thursday when the post office announced plans to increase the postage rate by up to 50 per cent.

Christopher Chataway, posts and telecommunications minister, defended the increase in the House of Commons but hastily added that the government remains accommodative to the proposals until a users advisory body can review the plans and make their views known.

At present, Britain maintains a two-letter system for domestic mail. Letters can go at a first-class fast rate of five pence or a slower second-class rate of four pence. The post office, now a public corporation, wants the rates increased to seven pence for first-class letters and five pence for the second-class mail next January.

A post office spokesman said the proposed rates will not be disclosed until the internal rates are settled. Post office losses are estimated at $132,500,000 in the current fiscal year, Chataway said.

Lifeboats Foil Tieup By Strike

QUEBEC (CP) — A strike by freight handlers in the port here didn't prevent eager tourists from the German liner Bremen from seeing the city Thursday.

The 731 passengers shuttled back and forth between ship and land in the vessel's six lifeboats.

Their method of disembarking may have surprised Quebecers, but it was old hat to some of the ship's American tourists.

An officer said the method of disembarking is quite common in Caribbean ports.

Sydney J. Harris Says

Parents Want Continuity

Following a college commencement last month, I was asked by a student to explain why parents are so "bitter" about the breaking away of youth from traditional patterns and family beliefs.

"I could understand it," he said, "if their kids had things, destroyed property, or dropped out of school. But I'm not talking about those cases. I'm talking about the students who behave themselves, get good grades, but simply disagree with their parents' values and lifestyles."

The parents are so bitter because they feel somehow cheated out of the fullness of their lives. Parents like to think that they have handed down more than material advantages; they have passed on a way of life, a sense of values, a moral or spiritual heritage that confers upon them a kind of vicarious immortality. This is what hope, perhaps vainly, call it what you will.

And this is where emotional comprehension on the part of young people, who have an equal obligation to open their hearts to the shriveling expectations of their parents.

I happen to believe that the value system of the youth — crude and inarticulate as it may be in many ways — is superior to that of their parents; but precisely because the young see further and clearer, they must try to reach their parents, not reject or repudiate them. "Nobody listens to us" is the complaint of youth; it is also the dirge of older people, who feel redundant today as never before.

All this is being rejected today, in a basic way that has a past parallel: of course, each generation has "revolted" from the previous one, but the present generation is questioning fundamentals and absolutes in a manner that is uniquely new — and quite frightening to the older generation.

Of course, we need more intellectual comprehension on the part of the parents, who must open their minds to the new ideas of youth; but we also need more emotional comprehension on the part of young people, who have an equal obligation to open their hearts to the shriveling expectations of their parents.

I happen to believe that the value system of the youth — crude and inarticulate as it may be in many ways — is superior to that of their parents; but precisely because the young see further and clearer, they must try to reach their parents, not reject or repudiate them. "Nobody listens to us" is the complaint of youth; it is also the dirge of older people, who feel redundant today as never before.

Tube Slips, Bath Child Is Drowned

KINGSTON (CP) — Heid Gunster, 2, of Bath, Ont., drowned Thursday when she slipped from a floating inner tube into 3 feet of water in the Bay of Quinte, 18 miles west of here.

Napanee provincial police called to revive the girl after she was pulled from the water.

Jean Dixon's Horoscope

Saturday, July 25

Your birthday today: In the coming year, your main attention should be on resolving any conflicts within your own establishment, uniting scattered activities. This is the year to start a permanent home or base of operations, to incorporate if you must. For the young, it's a time to stop drifting and to settle down; for the older, a time to make your burden easier to carry. Romantic interests never falter through this year and next. Today's natives are fond of puzzles and riddles and quick to work them out.

ARIES (March 21—April 19): As the weekend begins many restraints are off. Temptation is all about you, but don't be confused with institution. Pause for reflection to see the difference.

TAURUS (April 20—May 20): Fatigue, tension are to be avoided or minimized. News from far places is incomplete, perhaps disconcerting. Wheat others bicker, withdraw and let well enough alone.

GEMINI (May 21—June 20): Minor inconveniences caused by older people persist. You'll discover the reasons for some irritations. Be patient, be kind and with understanding your every little bit.

CANCER (June 21—July 22): New ventures, sweeping changes are not favored for today. Stick with the tested methods. If asked for a loan, make it a time to stop drifting and to settle down; for the older, a time to make your burden easier to carry. Romantic interests never falter through this year and next. Today's natives are fond of puzzles and riddles and quick to work them out.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): With caution, much can be done today. Just take the time to work things out. You'll be happier by holding back your impulses. Celebrate your good luck this evening.

VIRGO (Aug. 23—Sept. 22): Similar power urge for the sheer fun of it. The more seriously you treat it, the more permanent the hobbah. Legal matters are not favored at the moment.

LIBRA (Sept. 23—Oct. 22): Leave career matters out of your talk now that the weekend has arrived. There are lots of small chores to attend to, nearly all of them pleasant.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 22): You'll be all too easy to complicate controversies today by putting in your unsolicited opinions or telling people what to do. Of course, there's no need for you to do it.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Whatever you do is done under some pressure. Keep calm and proceed firmly. Your best bet may be of extreme importance in the future.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22—Jan. 19): Economy is the word for today. Balanced needs will use up some of your cash, and you must take up the slack somehow. Look to your tensions this evening with a good book.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Insulate yourself against temporary pressures, comments and demands for yourself personally. Let nothing come between you and your loved ones. Retire early.

PISCES (Feb. 19—March 20): Your chores are easier if you will space them out over all the time available. The evening is excellent for a party, but stop reasonably early.
